'Race', Youth Sport, Physical Activity and Health

Global Perspectives

Edited by Symeon Dagkas, Canterbury Christ Church University, UK, Laura Azzarito and Kevin Hylton, Leeds Beckett University, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Perspectives on Equality and Social Justice in Sport and Leisure

This is the first book to focus on issues of 'race' and racism in youth sport, physical activity and health. Drawing on critical race theory, intersectionality and critical pedagogy, and presenting a range of international empirical case studies, it explores racialization processes in pedagogical and non-pedagogical settings. The book examines how 'race' and racism in pedagogical settings shape young peoples' dispositions towards participation in sport and physical activity, and how identity discourses are being shaped in contemporary sport, physical activity and health. Essential reading for anybody working in sport and exercise studies, physical education, sociology or health studies.

Anticipation and Decision Making in Sport

Edited by A. Mark Williams, University of Utah, USA and Robin C. Jackson, Loughborough University, UK

Anticipation and Decision-Making in Sport is the first book to identify the underlying science behind anticipation and decision-making in sport, enhancing our understanding of these phenomena and helping practitioners to develop interventions to facilitate the acquisition of the skills that underpin these judgements. Written by leading experts from a range of countries, no other book offers such a synthesis of anticipation, perception and decision-making in sport. This is a fascinating and important text for students and researchers in sport psychology, skill acquisition and expert performance, motor learning and behavior and coaching science, as well as practicing coaches from any sport.

Active Sport Tourism

Global Insights and Future Directions

Edited by Heather J. Gibson, University of Florida, USA, Matthew Lamont, Southern Cross University, Australia, Millicent Kennelly, Griffith University, Australia and Richard J. Buning, The University of Queensland, Australia

This volume serves to expand theory-driven understandings of active sport tourism by showcasing five empirical studies examining a variety of active sport tourism contexts. These include table tennis at the World Veteran's Championships, ultramarathon, running/cycling/triathlon, skiing/snowboarding, and a range of issues such as active ageing and travel-related carbon footprints. The volume also seeks to explore possibilities for future directions in active sport tourism and act as a catalyst for ongoing scholarly inquiry. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Sport & Tourism.

Athlete Learning in Elite Sport

A Cultural Framework

Edited by Natalie Barker-Ruchti, University of Gothenburg, Sweden

Series: Routledge Research in Sports Coaching

This is the first sociological-pedagogical text to conceptualise athlete learning in elite sport and across athletic careers. It outlines theories of learning and argues for a cultural perspective capturing contextual influence, temporal changes, individual dispositions and subjectivity. The book features nine international, multi-contextual and multi-experience case studies of athlete careers, experiences, and learning across individual and team sports such as, boxing, rugby, basketball, hockey and gymnastics. This is fascinating reading for students, researchers and practitioners in sport organisations, sports coaching, coach education and sport sociology and pedagogy.

Diversity and Inclusion in Sport Organizations

A Multilevel Perspective

George B. Cunningham, Texas A&M University, USA

This is a comprehensive introduction to the ways in which people differ - including race, sex, age, mental and physical ability, appearance, religion, sexual orientation, and social class - and the importance of these differences for sport organizations. It offers strategies for managing diversity in work and sport environments and provides an overview of diversity training that can be implemented in the workplace. Grounded in research and theory and outlining best practice, this new edition includes more international examples and expanded coverage of important topics, as well as useful teaching and learning features in every chapter and additional online resources.

Emerging Technologies in Sport

Implications for Sport Management

Edited by Cheryl Mallen, Brock University, Canada

Series: Routledge Research in Sport Business and Management

Emerging Technologies in Sport surveys the next generation of emerging technologies and considers how sport managers, governing bodies and officials can meet the challenges that they pose for sport competition, participation and events. Each chapter considers the implications of a particular technology in terms of ethics, rules and regulations, facilities and resourcing, and offers strategies for future sport management. It is a valuable resource for undergraduate students in the fields of sport management, sport tourism, and sport business and a fascinating read for anyone with an interest in sport and future applications of emerging technologies within sport.

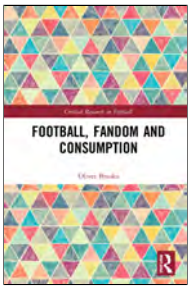
Football, Fandom and Consumption



Oliver Brooks, University of East Anglia, UK

Series: Critical Research in Football

This book argues for a more nuanced understanding of contemporary football culture and the (self-) identity of football fans. Drawing on original ethnographic research conducted with fans at all levels, from international to lower league, the book explores the tensions between fans as consumers and 'traditional' football cultures, arguing that modern football fans are able to negotiate the discourses of capitalism and tradition operating upon them to enact their own power and identity within football culture. Featuring case studies of Norwich City, MK Dons and Chelsea fans, this is fascinating reading for anybody with an interest in sport and society or cultural studies.

Human Fatigue

Evolution, Health and Disease

Frank Marino, Charles Sturt University, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Sport and Exercise Science

This ground-breaking book outlines the evidence that fatigue is a result of adaptations distinctive to humans. It argues that humans developed adaptations which led to enhanced fatigue resistance compared with other mammals and discusses the implications in the context of exercise, health and performance. Highly illustrated throughout, it covers topics such as defining and measuring fatigue, the emotional aspect of fatigue, how thermoregulation affects the human capacity to resist fatigue, and fatigue in disease. This is essential reading for all exercise scientists as well as graduate and undergraduate students in the broad field of physiology and exercise physiology.

Gym Bodies

Exploring Fitness Cultures

James Brighton, Canterbury Christ Church University, UK, Ian Wellard, Canterbury Christ Church University, UK and Amy Clark, Canterbury Christ Church University, UK

Series: 500 Tips

In spite of the rapid increase in the number of gyms and the diversification of fitness practices within them, there has been a lack of empirically-based research that explores the embodied experiences of 'gym goers' and the fitness cultures that are constructed within these spaces. This fascinating new book offers a personal, interactive, ethnographic account of the multiplicity of contemporary gym practices, spaces and cultures. It argues that gym bodies are historically constructed, social, sensual, emotional and political; that experience intersects with multiple embodied identities; and that fitness cultures are profoundly important in shaping the body in wider contemporary culture.

Routledge Handbook of Tennis

History, Culture and Politics

Edited by Robert J. Lake, Douglas College, Canada and Carol A. Osborne, Leeds Beckett University, UK

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

This is the first book to undertake a survey of the historical and socio-cultural sweep of tennis, exploring key themes from governance, development and social inclusion to national identity and the role of the media. It is presented in three parts: historical developments; culture and representations; and politics and social issues, and features contributions by leading tennis scholars from North America, Europe, Asia and Australia. The most authoritative book published to date on the history, culture and politics of tennis, this is an essential reference for any course or program examining the history, sociology, politics or culture of sport.

Routledge Handbook of Global Sport

Edited by John Nauright, University of Brighton, UK and Sarah Zipp, University of Stirling, UK

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

The story of global sport is the story of expansion from local development to globalised industry, from recreational to marketised activity. Alongside that, each sport has its own distinctive history, sub-cultures, practices and structures. This ambitious new volume offers state-of-the-art overviews of the development of every major sport or classification of sport, introducing their history, socio-cultural significance, political economy, and suggesting directions for future research. By putting sport itself in the foreground, this book represents the ideal companion to any social scientific course in sport studies, and the perfect jumping-off point for further study or research.

Sex, Gender, and Sexuality in Sport

Queer Inquiries

Edited by Vikki Krane, Bowling Green State University, US

Gender and sexual identities have historically been pushed to the margins in sport. While there is more visibility and inclusion for LGBTIQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex, queer) people in sport today than in the past, there still exists bigotry and marginalization. This book critically assesses what we know about sex, gender and sexuality in sport, and explores the range of sport climates for LGBTIQ people, from fully inclusive to overtly hostile. Drawing on a cultural studies perspective, and with social justice at the heart of every chapter, the book discusses theory, policy, practice and the experiences of LGBTIQ sportspeople around the world.

Sport and Anthropology

Thomas F. Carter, University of Brighton, UK

Series: Frontiers of Sport

This is the first book to offer a comprehensive, critical analysis of the relationship between sport and anthropology. It introduces the reader to the distinct ways that anthropologists consider and research sport, and argues that its central object of enquiry – humanity – leads to very different questions about sport from those posed by sociology, political science or other disciplines. It draws on unusual sporting examples, including darts, cockfighting and buzkahi, to convey to the reader the full array of sporting practices as well as the complex factors behind the emergence of sport, opening up fascinating perspectives for any student or researcher working in sport or anthropology.

Sport Policy and Development

An Introduction

Daniel Bloyce, University of Chester, UK and Andy Smith, Edge Hill University, UK

Now in a fully revised, expanded and updated second edition, Sport Policy and Development introduces the complex relationships between modern sport, policy, development and other aspects of wider society. It clearly explains the wider policy context that frames the governance and management of sport, and closely examines the two central components of sport development: development of sport (from grassroots to elite level) and development through sport (how sport is used at community level to achieve social objectives and to tackle social problems). The book includes detailed case studies throughout, including London 2012 and Rio 2016.

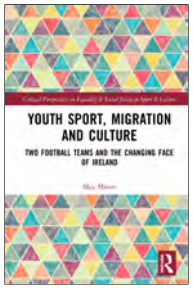
Youth Sport, Migration and Culture

Two Football Teams and the Changing Face of Ireland



Max Mauro, Southampton Solent University, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Perspectives on Equality and Social Justice in Sport and Leisure

Youth Sport, Migration and Culture emphasises the epistemological and ethical urgency of doing research with rather than on young people. Engaging with the social changes in Irish society through the eyes of children of immigrants growing up in Ireland, the book looks closely at young people's leisure practices in multi-ethnic contexts, and at issues of inclusion in relation to public discourses around 'national identity' and immigration. Offering compelling analysis of how ideas of race and racism are elaborated through sport, this book is fascinating reading for anybody with an interest in the sociology of sport, sport development or youth culture.

The Morphology of Tourism

Planning for Impact in Tourist Destinations

Philip Feifan Xie and Kai Gu

Series: New Directions in Tourism Analysis

Applying the methods and models of morphology to tourism, this book illustrates the form, use and effects of the development and transformation of the tourist destination. International in scope, this book pays close attention to key sectors and locations such as coastal tourism, urban tourism and waterfront redevelopment. It advocates that awareness of the critical link between temporospatial impacts and morphological progress is necessary to accommodate changes within a pattern of evolutionary growth. As such, this book makes a significant contribution to the literature on tourism planning, urban design, geography and landscape architecture.

The Museum as a Space of Social Care

Nuala Morse, Independent Researcher

Series: Critical Studies in Heritage, Emotion and Affect

This book explores the realities and potentialities of museums as spaces and agents of social care. Bringing together a range of interdisciplinary perspectives, including professional insights, this book explores the social function of the museum. It provides a theoretical overview of how the 'caring museum' might be conceptualised, exploring how museums promote and engage with communities, co-curation, well-being and affect, and the political, social and economic imperatives to these activities. This book offers new theoretical insights and practical understandings into what the role of the museum is, what it can be, and what it 'ought' to be, in contemporary societies.

Tourism and Everyday Life in the Contemporary City

Edited by Thomas Frisch, University of Hamburg, Germany, Christoph Sommer, Humboldt University Berlin, Germany, Luise Stoltenberg, University Hamburg, Germany and Natalie Stors, Trier University, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in Urbanism and the City

This book explores the phenomena of the urban every day and new urban tourism. It provides a systematic framework, and draws on a mix of theoretical and empirical work from different perspectives to explore the increasing intermingling of 'tourists' and residents to create, consume and experience everyday life. Tourism and urban everyday life are deeply connected in a mutually constitutive way. Tourism has become a key momentum of urban development and affects cities beyond its economic dimension. This book will be very useful for students and researchers across fields such as Tourism and Mobility Studies, Urban Studies, Leisure Studies, Tourism Geography and Tourism Sociology.
