A History of West Africa

Akanmu Adebayo, Kennesaw University, USA

This textbook provides students with a comprehensive and engaging narrative of the history of West Africa from the earliest times to the present. Based on several decades of research and teaching on Africa, the book exposes students and readers to a more balanced history of West Africa. The content follows historical transformations in the region from the early history of animal and plant domestication to the creation and dispersal of various cultures. Essential for courses on West African History and African History more generally.

Contextualizing Eschatology in African Cultural and Religious Beliefs

Ibgbolade Simon Aderibigbe, University of Georgia, USA

Series: Routledge Studies on Religion in Africa and the Diaspora

Addresses the African consciousness and nuances of Eschatological beliefs as part and parcel of the holistic African Indigenous world views within the context of the peoples' traditional heritage. It explores the characteristic nature, the modes, the process as well as the dynamics associated with the various features culminating the functional expression of the "reality" of Eschatological beliefs demonstrated in varied but fundamentally the same subject matter of practices among different African ethnic groups. It also discusses the influences of other religious traditions, particularly Christianity and Islam on contemporary African Eschatological and their attendant consequences.

Debating African Philosophy

Perspectives on Identity, Decolonial Ethics and Comparative Philosophy

Edited by George Hull, University of Cape Town, South Africa

In African countries there has been a surge of intellectual interest in foregrounding ideas and thinkers of African origin that have been unjustly ignored or marginalized. This book demonstrates the potential for constructive interchange between currents of thought from African philosophy and other intellectual currents within philosophy. Showing how foregrounding Africa can help with the project of renewing and improving the discipline of philosophy worldwide, this book will stimulate and challenge everyone with an interest in philosophy, and is essential reading for upper level undergraduate students, postgraduate students and scholars of African and Africana philosophy.

Displaced Mozambicans in Postcolonial Tanzania

Refugee Power, Mobility, Education, and Rural Development

Joanna T. Tague, Denison University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Africa

This book follows the lives of a broad swath of Mozambican men, women, and children—refugees, asylum seekers, liberation leaders, students, migrant workers—all displaced during the war for independence from Portugal (1964-1974). In this book, Joanna Tague juxtaposes the exilic experiences of the educated minority with the majority of refugees settled in official camps. Read together, their lives constitute a mosaic through which to explore myriad ways in which the displaced acted as their own agents during the wars for liberation attendant to African decolonization in the mid-twentieth century.

Gender Equality and Genocide Prevention in Africa

The Responsibility to Protect

Serena Timmoneri

Examining whether states characterised by lower levels of gender equality are more likely to experience genocide, this book adds gender indicators to the existing early warning assessment for the prevention of genocide. Moreover, the book argues for the formulation of policies directed at the improvement of gender equality not just as a means to improve women's conditions but as a tool to reduce the risk of genocide and mass atrocities. Using case studies from Nigeria, Ethiopia, Angola, Uganda and Burundi, Timmoneri analyses recent atrocities and explores the role of gender equality as an indicator of potential genocide.

Identity, Spirit and Freedom in the Atlantic World

The Gold Coast and the African Diaspora

Robert Hanserd, Columbia College, USA

Series: Routledge African Studies

What is the importance of African worldviews, histories and individual lives to identity, spirituality and perceptions of freedom in the Afro-Atlantic? This book uses West African culture and history as a viewpoint to specify that central question. The author includes oral, archival and other interdisciplinary evidence from West Africa in its analysis of new world maroons, slaves and free blacks. It highlights a "Gold Coast" entrepot of Akan, Ga, Guan, and other peoples in an era of Atlantic cultural transfer that was a non-linear, mutable intersection of contested histories and cultures.

Miscegenation, Identity and Status in Colonial Africa

Intimate Colonial Encounters

Lawrence Mbogoni, William Paterson University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Africa

Throughout the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries the colonial administrations in British East-Central African colonies considered inter-racial sexual liaisons to be a serious and recurrent "problem". Using archival sources and secondary literature, the author highlights how colonial inter-racial intimate encounters became intertwined with conceptions of 'race' and what it meant to be European, African ("native") and racially mixed. Intended for students and scholars interested in the study of 'race' and sexuality in colonial Africa, the book will provide an understanding of why inter-racial liaisons despite of rigid racial barriers were not easy to legislate against.

Contested Criminalities in Zimbabwean Fiction

Tendai Mangena, Great Zimbabwe University

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book addresses the ways in which writers deploy the trope of contested criminality to expose Zimbabwe's socially and politically oppressive cultures in a wide range of novels and short stories published in English. Some of the most influential authors that are examined in this book are Yvonne Vera, Petina Gappah, NoViolet Bulawayo, Brian Chikwava, Christopher Mlalazi, Tendai Huchu and Virginia Phiri. The author uses the Zimbabwean experience to engage with critical issues facing the African continent and the world, providing a thoughtful reading of contemporary debates on illegal migration, homophobia, state criminality and gender inequalities.

Development-induced Displacement and Human Rights in Africa

The Kampala Convention

Romola Adeola, University of Pretoria - Centre of Human Rights

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book examines how a balance can be struck between the imperative of development and the rights of displaced persons within the context of the African Union Convention on the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa (the Kampala Convention). Romola Adeola analyses the obligations that are placed on African states by the Kampala Convention, shows how institutions beyond the state also have significant roles to play in fostering compliance and examines how these actors can be regulated.

Post-Colonial Kenya

The Rise of an Authoritarian and Predatory State

Rok Ajulu

Series: Contemporary African Politics

This engaging reassessment of postcolonial Kenyan political history develops a theory of historical change and the role of leading figures in it. Combining political economy with political sociology it demonstrates how violence following the contested presidential election of 2007 represented, to a much more extreme extent, a continuation of the pattern of political contestation that has repeated itself throughout Kenya's political history.

Violence and Candidate Nomination in Africa

Edited by Merete Bech Seeberg, Aarhus University, Denmark, Michael Wahman, Michigan State University, USA and Svend-Erik Skaaning, Aarhus University, Denmark

Series: Democratization Special Issues

This comprehensive volume brings together a diverse set of scholars to analyse candidate nomination, intra-party democracy, and election violence in Africa. Through a combination of comparative studies and country-specific case studies spanning much of Sub-Saharan Africa, including Kenya, Zambia, and South Africa, the authors shed light on violence during candidate nomination processes within political parties. They investigate whether the drivers of nomination violence are identical to those of general election violence, and which subnational locations are most likely to experience nomination violence. This book was originally published as a special issue of the journal Democratization.

Comparative Sociology of Examinations

Edited by Fumiya Onaka, Japan Women's University, Japan
 Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

Comparing countries from across Asia, Europe, North America and the Ancient Near East, this book proposes a fundamental transition of sociological research through an intensive study of examinations. It uses ethnography, interviews, questionnaires, documents, statistics and big-data analysis to make comparisons on very broad scales of time and space. In so doing, it suggests hypotheses encompassing different kinds of societies in human history including those in the Axial Age and the Modern Age.

Early Sources of the Jaina Tradition

Bansidhar Bhatt, Prakrit Bharti Academy, Jaipur, India

Series: Routledge Advances in Jaina Studies

Looking at the early history of Jainism, from 6th century BCE onwards, this book focuses on one of the 24 Jinas that are identified as the main religious leaders of Jainism. It is a commonly accepted hypothesis that Parsvanatha, the 23rd Jina, is an historical figure whose values were modified by Mahavira, the 24th Jina. The book challenges this hypothesis by analysing a wide range of textual sources, some of which have never been examined in the context of the 23rd Jina.

Formatting Religion

Across Politics, Education, Media, and Law

Edited by Marius Timmann Mjaaland
 Series: Ethics, Human Rights and Global Political Thought

Over the last two decades, people and institutions have been grappling with the role of religion in socio-cultural and political conflicts worldwide. This volume delves into these complexities and demonstrates the topical need for better understanding of how religion, culture, and law interact, especially in periods of transition. The volume analyse four processes for understanding the dynamics of formatting religion, in interaction with law, culture, and society: juridification, mediatization, politicization, and sacralization. It will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of religious studies, politics, media and culture studies, and sociology.

Global Masculinities

Interrogations and Reconstructions

Edited by Mangesh Kulkarni and Rimjhim Jain (Associate Editor)

This volume interrogates the myriad practices and myth-making that underlie constructions of masculinities around the world. Challenging the patriarchal bias that restricts alternative understanding of masculinities, it shares evidence and insights on how men can creatively contribute to gender equality in the 21st century. The book will be indispensable to researchers interested in critical masculinity studies, women's studies, sociology, social anthropology, law, public policy, political science, and international relations. It will also interest government officials, NGO activists, and other practitioners concerned with gender, health, and development issues.

Hinduism in Colonial Bengal

Beyond the Renaissance

Edited by Ferdinando Sardella, Stockholm University, Sweden and Lucian Wong, Oxford University, UK

Series: Routledge Hindu Studies Series

This book offers an overview of the Bengali Vaishnava tradition within the pivotal context of colonial Bengal. Contrary to other studies, which have paid attention to a now familiar host of figures and currents of religious reform associated with the so-called Bengal or Hindu 'Renaissance', this book sheds light on the significant role of pre-existing Hindu religious communities (sampradāya) in this context.

Jaina Rituals of Death

History, Doctrine and Practice

Peter Flügel, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Jaina Studies

In this book, the author presents recent, somewhat unexpected, findings on the thriving cult of bone relic stupas and the ritual role of the materiality of the dead amongst contemporary Jains. Based on extensive fieldwork in India, clear evidence is offered for the ubiquity of bone relic stupas and relic veneration across the Jain sectarian spectrum, although classical Jain doctrine rejects the worship of material objects.

Japanese Animation

Transnational Industry and Culture in Asia

Edited by Wong Heung Wah and Marco Pellitteri

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

"Anime", involving hand drawn or computer animation, often characterized by colourful graphics, vibrant characters and fantastical themes, is a quintessentially Japanese art form. Distributed through cinema, television and over the internet it has an enormous following, both in Japan and more widely. This book provides a comprehensive survey of the historical development, industrial structure and technical features of Japanese animation, and of the overall dynamics of its globalization. Specific chapters cover production techniques, "anime" as an "emotion industry" and the involvement of a range of East Asia countries both in the production of and consumption of Japanese animation.

Modernist Reform Movements in Islam, Hinduism and Confucianism, 1870-1940

Globalization and the Post-Traditional Society

Christian Lekan

Series: Routledge Religion in Contemporary Asia Series

This book presents a comparison of three major religious reform movements of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Each of these movements attempted to bring a major world religion in line with global modernity by creatively re-interpreting the traditions on which the religion was based. The book outlines the history and major tenets of the reform movements, discusses the similarities and differences between them, relates them to theoretical concepts of globalization and the post-traditional society, and analyses the reasons both for their simultaneous emergence in the last decades of the nineteenth century and for the different trajectories of their successors during the twentieth and early twenty-first centuries. While there are numerous studies dealing with each of these reform movements, the original contribution of this book is to provide a systematic comparison between the movements and to link them with current discussions of globalization.

Popular Culture and the Formation of Hong Kong Identity

Karin Ling-fung Chau, The University of Hong Kong, Heung Wah Wong, The University of Hong Kong and Hoi-yan Yau, Tsukuba University, Japan

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book charts the development of Hong Kong identity from the Second World War to the present. It argues that understanding popular culture is key to understanding how Hong Kong identity has evolved, and it discusses the various phases that popular culture has gone through in the post-war period. The book examines how the consumption of popular culture has been related to the changing geopolitical situation, to the politics of economic transformation, and to community building. It shows how behind all these aspects of popular culture lies the essential "in-between-ness" of Hong Kong, neither Eastern/traditional/conservative nor Western/modern/liberal.

Regional Communities of Devotion in South Asia

Insiders, Outsiders, and Interlopers

Edited by Gil Ben-Herut, University of South Florida, US, Jon Keune, Michigan State University, US and Anne E Monius, Harvard Divinity School, US

Series: Routledge South Asian Religion Series

This book explores the key motif of the religious Other in devotional (bhakti) literatures and practices from across the Indian subcontinent, for the first time bridging the conventional North-South gap in scholarship by bringing together studies from a subcontinent-wide variety of linguistic, geographical, and historical frames. The contributions by experts in their fields reconsider and challenge, inherited notions of the bhakta's or devotee's Other and unmask processes of representation that involve adoption, appropriation, and rejection of different social and religious agents.

Ritual and Liturgy in Esoteric Chinese Buddhism

Tantric Subjects

Charles Orzech, University of Glasgow, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

This book reconceptualizes the historiography of East Asian Buddhism by shifting the focus of analysis from philosophical texts and doctrine to ritual and practice. The author analyses 7th century manuals for performing ritual consecrations which were designed to install a deity in a disciple and to make that disciple a vehicle for divine action. These rituals have often been designated "tantric". Here, they are examined from the perspective of subject formation in the practice of ritual, not from the perspective of sectarian identification in doctrine. The author argues that the new "tantric" rites are developments of earlier practices surrounding ordination and the use of visions.

Ritual Journeys in South Asia

Constellations and Contestations of Mobility and Space

Edited by Jürgen Schaflechner, University of Heidelberg, Germany and Christoph Bergmann, University of Heidelberg, Germany

This book analyses and compares a wider and loosely connected range of phenomena, of which pilgrimage is only one special instance, namely ritual journeys. Establishing a new analytical framework for the study of ritual journeys, contributions focus on South Asian regions that have been largely understudied. The book engages with recent theoretical advances and broadens the scope of 'classical' Pilgrimage Studies in South Asia by presenting individual case studies on , thus giving itempirical depth.

Routledge Handbook of Food in Asia

Edited by Cecilia Leong-Salobir

Throwing new light on how colonisation and globalization have affected the food practices of different communities in Asia, the Routledge Handbook of Food in Asia explores the changes and variations in the region's dishes, meals and ways of eating. By illustrating the different methodologies and theoretical approaches employed by scholars, the contributions discuss everyday food practices in the Asian home and provide a fascinating coverage of less common phenomenon, such as the practice of wood eating and the evolution of pufferfish eating in Japan.

Security, Society and the State in the Caucasus

Edited by Kevork Oskanian and Derek Averre

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

The Caucasus continues to be an area of instability and conflict. This book explores in detail at both the local and regional level the interaction between state and society and the impact of external actors' engagement in the region within a conceptual framework linking security and democracy. Unlike other books on the subject, which tend to examine the issues from a Western political science perspective, this book incorporates insights from sociology, geography and anthropology as well as politics and contains contributions from scholars who have carried out extensive research in the region within a European Commission-funded Seventh Framework Programme project.

Singapore's Multiculturalism

Evolving Diversity

Chan Heng Chee, Singapore University of Technology and Design, Singapore, Sharon Siddique, Singapore University of Technology and Design, Singapore, Irna Nurlina Masron, Singapore University of Technology and Design, Singapore and Dominic Cooray, Singapore University of Technology and Design, Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

In the writing of this book, the author team set themselves the task of projecting the impact of current domestic and international social trends into the future, to anticipate what Singapore society might look like by around 2040. In doing so they analyse the particular path that Singapore has taken since independence, in comparison with other multicultural societies and with regard to the balance between the necessity of forging a new national identity after British rule and departure from Malaysia, and the need to ensure that Singapore's ethnic minority populations remain socially enfranchised.

Social Work and Sustainability in Asia

Facing the Challenges of Global Environmental Changes

Edited by Alice M. L. Chong and Iris Chi, University of Southern California, Los Angeles

Series: Routledge Advances in Asia-Pacific Studies

Combining case studies and country reports from around Asia and the Pacific Rim with a theoretical framework for understanding sustainability concerns, this book aims to show how social work can play a valuable role in mitigating and adapting to environmental challenges and social sustainability. For social work to develop to be a meaningful and viable profession that addresses contemporary sustainability issues, it requires changes and transformation in paradigm, theories, strategies, social policy and social services that will facilitate a sustainable future for all mankind.

South Korean Popular Culture and North Korea

Edited by Youna Kim, American University of Paris, France
Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia

Over recent decades South Korea's vibrant and distinctive populist culture has spread extensively throughout the world. This book explores how this "Korean wave" has also made an impact in North Korea. The book reveals that although South Korean media has to be consumed underground and unofficially in North Korea, it is widely watched and listened to. The book examines the ways in which this is leading to popular yearning in North Korea for migration, defecting to the South or for people to just become more like South Koreans. Overall, the book demonstrates that the soft power of the Korean wave is having an undermining impact on the hard, constraining cultural climate of North Korea.

The Sociology of Structural Disaster

Beyond Fukushima

Edited by Miwao Matsumoto, University of Tokyo, Japan

Series: Routledge Studies in Science, Technology and Society

The book presents the path-dependent development of structural disaster through a sociological reformulation of path-dependent mechanisms not only in the context of nuclear energy but also in the context of renewable energy. It traces the origins of structural disaster to a secret accident involving standardized military technology immediately before World War II, and opportunistic utilization of the Great Kanto Earthquake of 1923, thus reconstructing the development of structural disaster within a long-term historical perspective.

Transnational Retailing in East Asia

A Japanese Supermarket Chain in Hong Kong and China

Heung-wah Wong

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book explores cross-cultural interaction in East Asia, arguing that globalisation of products and consumer tastes is much more complex than simply homogenisation along Western lines, or local adaption as a reaction against Western products and tastes. It considers specifically how a Japanese supermarket chain, Yaohan, expanded into Hong Kong in the 1980s and mainland China in the 1990s, and how this expansion evolved from initial success to ultimate failure and the company's bankruptcy, relating all this to the changing nature of society, consumerism and shopping in East Asia.

Women in Contemporary British Buddhism

Commitment, Connection and Community

Caroline Starkey, University of Leeds, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

This book is the first multi-tradition study of ordained Buddhist women in Britain. Drawing on contemporary Buddhist Studies and Sociological theories to explain the global flows of Buddhism into and out of Britain, and to compare the British context with other manifestations of Buddhism in Western and Asian societies, the author presents new and original recent research on Buddhist women in Britain. She describes in rich detail, the personal dharma journeys taken by women across seven different Buddhist traditions and groups, examining their biographies and backgrounds, their initial contact with Buddhist teachings and teachers, and their path to ordination.

Women's and Gender Studies in India

Edited by Anu Aneja, Professor, School of Gender & Development Studies, Indira Gandhi National Open University, New Delhi, India

This book frames the major debates and contemporary issues in women's and gender studies in India. It locates them in the context of key theories, their interlinkages, and significant crossings and overlaps within the field while juxtaposing feminist and queer perspectives.

The essays in the volume foreground emerging challenges as well as offer clues to future trajectories for women's and gender studies in the country through a comprehensive and interdisciplinary survey of intersectionality in gender, activism and theory; caste and class; feminist, queer and transgender studies; femininity and masculinity; disability; feminist pedagogy; and Indian and western feminisms.

Ahmadiyya Islam and the Muslim Diaspora

Living in the End of Days

Marzia Balzani, New York University, Abu Dhabi

Series: Routledge/Asian Studies Association of Australia (ASAA) South Asian Series

This book is a study of the British Ahmadi Muslims and of the complex nexus of religious, social and political forces within which they maintain their faith and community. Unlike most new religious movements that do not usually survive the death of a charismatic leader, the Ahmadi Muslims have not only endured but thrived and become a truly global community. It is in part precisely because they are a persecuted minority faith group that the Ahmadi Muslims have had to organize to defend their faith and find new and effective ways to protect their members and to sustain and grow their community.

Sikh Communal Identity in Southeast Asia

Arunajeet Kaur, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

Focusing on Singapore with a comparative case study with Malaysia, this book analyses Sikh communal identity as it was established in the Far East under the auspices of the British Empire. Sikh communities form a significant minority in terms of numbers and visibility and have had significant interaction with their respective post colonial states, and the book charts the trajectory of assimilation of Sikh communal identity in Singapore and Malaya. This is the first booklength study of Sikh settlements in Southeast Asia. It will be of interest to scholars of diaspora and minority studies, post colonialism, multiculturalism and South and Southeast Asian studies.

China and Southeast Asia

Edited by Geoff Wade and James K. Chin, University of Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

Examining the relationships which have proven integral to connecting Northeast and Southeast Asia with other parts of the world, the contributors of the volume provide a thorough context to changing contemporary relations in the region and perhaps one of the most intense re-orderings occurring anywhere in the world today. From maritime trading relations and political interactions to overland Chinese expansion and commerce in Southeast Asia, this book reveals connections across the China-Southeast Asia interface, which often remain hidden. In so doing, it goes beyond existing Area Studies scholarship to present an invaluable new perspective to the field.

Environmental Policy in Asia

Akihisa Mori, Kyoto University, Japan

Environmental Policy in Asia highlights the development of environmental policies throughout the region and the environmental challenges that policymakers face in a time of rapid economic growth amid globalization. Akihisa Mori then goes on to assess how effective these policies are for managing local, national and trans-boundary environmental challenges and how the policies reflect a tradeoff between regional and global environmental challenges and the governments own priorities. This book is suitable for undergraduate and postgraduate students in the fields of Asian Studies, Environmental Studies, Sustainable Development, Environmental Politics and Environmental Economics.

Critical Approaches to Security in Central Asia

Edited by Edward Lemon, Columbia University, USA

Series: Central Asian Studies

Central Asia remains on the periphery, both spatially and in people's imaginations. When the region does attract international attention, it is often related to security issues, including terrorism, ethnic conflict and drug trafficking. This book brings together leading specialists from a range of disciplines including geography, anthropology, sociology and political science to discuss how citizens and governments within Central Asia think about and practise security. This book will be of interest to students and researchers of Central Asian Studies as well as Security Studies and Political Science. Critical International Relations Theories in East Asia

Relationality, Subjectivity, and Pragmatism

Edited by Kosuke Shimizu, Ryukoku University, Japan

Series: IR Theory and Practice in Asia

This book interrogates the meanings of the established ontology and subjectivity embedded in the discourse of 'Western' and 'non-Western' IR. We are predisposed to see a nation-state as a unified entity, everlasting and moving towards a particular end. This leads us to say, for example, 'Japan is threatened by the possible Chinese attack' without questioning what 'Japan' and 'China' mean in this context. This book tries to locate and unearth the consistent structure and system of the world, with a particular focus on subjectivity and temporality in IR, that captures the way in which we conceive and misconceive the world.

Human Rights in South Asia

Kashmir and the Policies of India and Pakistan

Piotr Balcerowicz, University of Warsaw, Poland and Agnieszka Kuszewska, University of Social Sciences and Humanities, Poland

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

The unresolved India-Pakistan conflict remains one of the major challenges in contemporary international relations. This book analyses the conflict between India and Pakistan. It examines the India-Pakistan complexity by focusing on the problems of human rights violations perpetrated by state and non-state actors in Indian and Pakistani administered Kashmir. The two South Asian states use, either explicitly or indirectly, the Kashmir issue as an important determinant of their internal and foreign policies and the Kashmir conflict is embedded in the power structures of both states.

Iran's Foreign Policy in the South Caucasus

Relations with Azerbaijan and Armenia

Marzieh Kouhi-Esfahani

Series: Durham Modern Middle East and Islamic World Series

Iran has an important role as a regional power, lying between Central Asia/the Caucasus and the Gulf region on one hand, and on the other between the Mediterranean/Levant region and South Asia. This book explores Iran's role as a regional power, focusing on relations with the countries of the South Caucasus - Azerbaijan and Armenia. It outlines the historical context including the Persian Empire's rule of these countries, discusses Iran's approach to regional foreign policy and how internal factors shape policy, and assesses Iran-Azerbaijan and Iran-Armenia bilateral relations. The book concludes by considering how relations in the region are likely to develop in future.

Kazakhstan's Foreign Policy

Regime neo-Eurasianism in the Nazarbaev era

Luca Anceschi, La Trobe University, Australia

Series: Central Asia Research Forum

For much of the post-Soviet era, Kazakhstan's international relations developed against a specific backdrop: the Eurasian continent, a (vaguely defined) politico-cultural space with the modern Kazakhstani state at its centre. This book looks at the central role occupied by 'regime neo-Eurasianism' in the foreign policy of post-Soviet Kazakhstan. With case studies on identity and power, this book offers a ground-breaking analysis of Kazakhstani foreign policy, and is of interest to students and scholars of Central Asian Politics, International Relations and Security Studies.

Norm Dilemmas in Humanitarian Intervention

How Bosnia Changed NATO

Yuki Abe, Kumamoto University, Japan

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

A detailed case study of NATO during the Bosnian war, this book explores how the differing views and preferences among the Western states on the intervention in Bosnia were reconciled as they agreed on the outline of NATO's reform. It examines detailed decision-making processes in Britain, France, Germany and the USA. In particular Abe analyses why conflicting norms led to an emphasis on conflict prevention capacity, rather than simply on armed intervention capacity.

Political Representation in Indonesia

The Emergence of the Innovative Technocrats

Michael Hatherell, Deakin University and Centre for Defence and Strategic Studies (CDSS), Australia

Series: Rethinking Southeast Asia

This book analyses the transformation of political representation in Indonesia. It argues that these emerging local and regional leaders share important traits. As 'innovative technocrats', these leaders have focused on technocratic policy successes beginning at the local level, while also engaging with communities in innovative ways. By adopting a new approach to the study of political representatives that focuses on the cultural and performative aspects of representation, the author emphasises the success of the representative claims developed by the innovative technocrats, while noting the impact their emergence has had on the broader context of Indonesian politics.

Politics of Development in Pakistan

Living Village

Haider Nizamani, Sustainable Development Policy Institute, Pakistan

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

By discussing how the village in Pakistan is intercalated in the grid of national and international capitalism, this book looks at the impact this feature has on how people work, conduct politics, look at and interact with the world, and the arrival of 'development' specialists in rural Pakistan. Instead of viewing the village, as it is often in popular discourse, as a self-sustaining world unto itself, this book brings into fore the processes, manners, and manifestations whereby the village is increasingly becoming intertwined in capillaries of capitalism and its attendant offshoots going by the name of globalization and development.

Public Administration in the 21st Century

A Global South Perspective

Rumki Basu, Professor of Public Administration and former Head of the Department of Political Science, Jamia Millia Islamia, New Delhi, India

This book examines the transformations in global societies, economy and politics to trace the trajectory of Public Administration as an academic discipline as well as a focus of social science research. It presents a reassessment of governance in heterogenous developing countries that go beyond the traditional Weberian bureaucratic model to new models of organization and management, informed by their legal, constitutional, economic and political needs, aspirations and ground realities.

4th Edition

The International Politics of the Asia-Pacific

Michael Yahuda, London School of Economics & Political Science, London, UK

Series: Politics in Asia

This fully revised fourth edition of Michael Yahuda's successful textbook brings the subject up-to-date, introducing students to the international politics of the Asia-Pacific region since 1945. As well as assessing the post-cold War uncertainties that challenged balance and power with the region, the book also examines the first two decades of the new millennium, which includes no let up on the 'war on terror', new political administrations in all the key player-states and increased cooperative security between some nations, polarised by volatile relationships between others.

Violence and Resistance in Uzbekistan

Matteo Fumagalli, Central European University, Hungary

Series: Central Asian Studies

This book examines the origins of the current waves of protest in Uzbekistan. The author analyses how these have changed over the years and provides an outlook into the country's future. Arguing that the 'Andijan events' were not an isolated episode of resistance and/or repression in post-Soviet Uzbekistan, the author shows that they are simply the latest episode in the deterioration of state-society relations in Uzbekistan.

Birth of a Colonial City

Calcutta

Ranjit Sen, Department of Islamic History and Culture, University of Calcutta

This book brings home the story of how three clustered villages - a garrison town, a port city and the capital of an empire merged into one entity - Calcutta. It examines the geopolitical factors that were significant in securing Calcutta's position in the light of growing influence of the East India Company and subsequently the British Empire. It examines how Calcutta came to be nucleus of the British Raj in India and the eventual stripping away of the powers of the Nawab.

Cowrie Shells and Cowrie Money

A Global History

Bin Yang, University of Macau, China

Series: Routledge Approaches to History

By focusing on cowrie money in Indian, Chinese, Southeast Asian, and West African societies and shell money in Pacific and North American societies, Yang synthesises and illustrates the economic and cultural connections, networks and interactions over a longue durée and in a cross-regional context. Analysing locally varied experiences of cowrie money from a global perspective, Yang argued that cowrie money was the first global money that shaped Afro-Eurasian societies both individually and collectively. He proposed a paradigm of the cowrie money world that engages local, regional, transregional and global themes.

Britain and the Arab Gulf after Empire

Simon C. Smith, University of Hull, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern History

Although Britain's formal imperial role in the smaller, oil-rich sheikhdoms of the Arab Gulf - Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates - ended in 1971, Britain continued to have a strong interest and continuing presence in the region. This book explores the nature of Britain's role after the formal end of empire. It traces the historical events of the post-imperial years, including the 1973 oil shock, the fall of the Shah in Iran and the beginnings of the Iran-Iraq War, considers the changing positions towards the region of other major world powers, including the United States, and engages with debates on the nature of empire and the end of empire.

Epidemic Malaria and Hunger in Colonial Punjab

Weakened by Want

Sheila Zurbrigg, Physician and Independent Scholar, Toronto, Canada

Series: The Social History of Health and Medicine in South Asia

This book documents the primary role of acute hunger (semi- and frank starvation) in the 'fulminant' malaria epidemics that repeatedly afflicted the northwest plains of British India through the first half of colonial rule. Using Punjab vital registration data and regression analysis it also tracks the marked decline in annual malaria mortality after 1908 with the control of famine, despite continuing post-monsoonal malaria transmission across the province. The work reclaims the role of hunger in Punjab malaria mortality history and raises larger epistemic questions regarding the adequacy of modern concepts of nutrition and epidemic causation in historical and demographic analysis.

Ethnographic Inquiry and Lived Experience

An Epistemological Critique

Wing-Chung Ho, The City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Advances in Sociology

Ho addresses two fundamental theoretical questions about how best to practice ethnographic inquiries to obtain qualitative, experience-near, and shareable accounts of human living. The first question is the epistemology of ethnography. The second question is: what is the putative object that the ethnographer writes about? By addressing these two questions, this book offers refreshed epistemological guidelines for conducting ethnographic research for scientific reasoning. More importantly, it also provides a crucial knowledge base for comprehending the current epistemological debates inherent in the production of ethnographic knowledge and furthering discussions.

Everyday Soviet Utopias

Planning, Design and the Aesthetics of Developed Socialism

Anna Alekseyeva

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

This book explores how Soviet intellectuals of the later Soviet decades sought to bring about the socialist utopian world. It argues that the last two decades of the Soviet Union were not characterised by state withdrawal and malaise, as some scholars have argued. The book considers what these utopian ideas looked like through housing schemes, layouts of districts and cities, design of objects and interiors, and proposals for the organisation of family and social life. Relating developments in the Soviet Union to evolving social theory and postmodernism more broadly, the book draws transnational parallels between the intellectual history of east and west in the late twentieth century.

Hereditary Physicians of Kerala

Traditional Medicine and Ayurveda in Modern India

Indudharan Menon, National Centre for Biological Sciences, Bangalore, India

This book examines the history and evolution of Ayurveda and other indigenous medical traditions in juxtaposition with their encounter with colonial modernity. Through the lens of hereditary folk and Ayurvedic practitioners, it focuses on Kerala's heterogeneous medical traditions and presents them against the backdrop of the geographical, historical, socio-cultural, ethnographic and regional contexts in which they developed and transformed. The author explores the world of Kerala's last traditionally trained hereditary practitioners (folk healers, poison therapists, Sanskrit-speaking Muslim Ayurvedic practitioners and the legendary Brahman Ashtavaidyan physicians).

Instrumental Lives

An Intimate Biography of an Indian Laboratory

Pankaj Sekhsaria

Series: Routledge Focus on Modern Subjects

The book is an account of instrument making in a modern Indian scientific laboratory. It uses qualitative research methods such as interviews, historical analysis and laboratory ethnography, to present the micro-details of this enterprise, the counter-intuitive methods employed, and the un-expected material, human and intellectual resources that were mobilised in the process. It locates scientific research and innovation within the social, political and cultural context of a laboratory's physical location and asks important questions of the dominant narratives of innovation that remain fixated on quantitative metrics of publishing, patenting and generating commerce.

Megacity Seoul

Yu-Min Joo, Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in Korean Studies

In Asia, there are a growing number of gigantic megacities, accompanied by a series of speculative and extravagant megaprojects. Amid the fast-paced urban and development challenges, many Asian governments have started to search for replicable and inspirational cases in Asia. South Korea and its capital city Seoul are among frequently referenced models. However, South Korea's "economic miracle" of the late twentieth century has been mostly studied through an economic policy lens. This book revisits the development of South Korea by looking at its urban dimension and exploring the city of Seoul as a developmental megaproject.

Literary and Non-literary Responses Towards 9/11

South Asia and Beyond

Edited by Nukhbah Taj Langah, Associate Professor of English and Dean of Humanities, Forman Christian College University, Lahore, Pakistan

This book presents a range of analytical responses towards 9/11 through a critical review of literary, non-literary and cultural representations. It examines the ways in which this event has shaped and complicated the relationship between various national and religious identities in contemporary world history. The work reconciles both eclectic and pragmatic approaches by analyzing the stereotypes of nationhood and identities as also by questioning theoretical concepts in the context of latest political developments. The essays focus on discourses, themes, imagery and symbolism from across fiction and non-fiction, films, art, music, political, literary and artistic movements.

Revolutionaries and Reformers in Lao Buddhism

Patrice Ladwig, Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology, Germany

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

Laos remains one of the few officially socialist countries in the world. Once a Buddhist kingdom, its involvement into the Vietnam War, the communist revolution of 1975 and the subsequent introduction of reformed socialism have deeply affected Buddhism, the religion of the ethnic majority. With a historical and anthropological focus on the religious field in the capital Vientiane, the book follows these transformations and extrapolates the ruptures and continuities of Buddhist religious life from 1958 to the present.

Altaf Hussain Para, Cluster University of Srinagar, Jammu and Kashmir, India

This book explores at Kashmir politics from the early twentieth century to the present day, and the life of Sheikh Abdullah, who played a crucial role in its transformation from a kingdom to a state in independent India. It also presents a keen analysis of pre-Independence events which led to the emergence of a controversial and a confused identity of the region. A major intervention in the political life of a fraught region, this book presents an inside-view of the history of modern Kashmir. It will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of politics, history, and modern South Asia.

The Tihamah Gazetteer

The Southern Red Sea Coast of Arabia to AH923/AD1517

Francine Stone, previously University of Manchester, UK

Series: Royal Asiatic Society Books

From antiquity onwards, the lower Red Sea coast of Arabia (Tihamah) has generated a body of historical documentation which is difficult to interpret without a working knowledge of human geography of the region, its people and its place names. The Tihamah Gazetteer has been created to assist scholars to identify over six hundred place names and tribal territories known from written sources. These sources are drawn primarily from the medieval period, the era that provides the richest corpus of extant texts about the region.

Spatializing Popular Sufi Shrines in Punjab

Dreams, Memories, Territoriality

Yogesh Snehi, School of Liberal Studies, Ambedkar University Delhi, India

This book explores the organic lives of popular Sufi shrines in contemporary north-west India. It traverses the worldview of shrine spaces, rituals and their complex narratives, and provides an insight into their urban and rural landscapes in the post-Partition (Indian) Punjab. The book utilizes a combination of analytical tools and new theoretical tropes to understand and situate popular Sufi shrines so that they become both historicized and spatialized.

The Transformation of Tamil Religion

Ramalinga Swamigal and Modern Dravidian Sainthood

Srilata Raman, University of Michigan, USA

Series: Routledge South Asian Religion Series

This book analyses the articulations of Tamil identity in the period of colonial modernity and beyond. It examines the development of Tamil religion by focusing on the important 19th century Tamil Hindu reformer and saint, Ramalinga Swamigal. The book presents him as inhabiting a "border" zone between early modernity and modernity, tradition and charisma, Hinduism and Christianity, indigenous identity (Dravidian nationalism) and colonialism. The book argues that these transformations are one meaningful way for a religious tradition to cope with and come to terms with the implications of historicization and the demands of colonial modernity.

Understanding Human Ecology

Knowledge, Ethics and Politics

Geetha Devi T. V., Project Coordinator, Institute for Social and Ecological Studies (ISES), an NGO based in Kozhikode, Kerala, India

This book examines the domain of human agency–environment interaction from a multidimensional point of view. It explores the human–environment interface by analysing its ethical, political and epistemic aspects — the value aspects that humans attribute to their environment, the relations of power in which the actions and their consequences are implicated, and the meaning of human actions in relation to the environment. The volume delineates the character of this domain and works out a theoretical framework for the field of human ecology.

Work, Love, and Learning in Utopia

Equality Reimagined

Martin Schoenhals, Amrita University, India and Columbia University, USA

Work, Love, and Learning in Utopia breathes new life into the age-old human preoccupation with how to create a happier society. With a fascinating mix of research from cross-cultural psychology, macro history, and evolutionary biology, the book gives new credibility to the advocacy of radical equality. Written in an easily accessible style, this book will appeal to anyone who has ever puzzled over how our social world could be remade. In particular, it will be very useful to students and scholars of anthropology, sociology and psychology.

Blackness and Race in Soviet Cinema

Irina Novikova

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book argues that although Soviet ideology did not accept the principle of biologically based racial inferiority, nevertheless Soviet films that addressed issues of "race" still exposed their authors' views. Moreover, the book contends that these views made a significant contribution to popular perceptions and to the gradual rise of "white supremacy" thinking in the late Soviet period, with such thinking being now very widely held in post-Soviet, contemporary Russia. The book discusses a wide range of films, explores in detail the Soviet social construction of race, gender and identity and contrasts this with the development of racial thinking in the Western world.

Ethnic Politics in Post-Soviet Central Asia

Exit, Voice, and Loyalty among Uzbek Minorities

Matteo Fumagalli, Central European University, Hungary

Series: Routledge Advances in Central Asian Studies

The book explores how, and to what extent, Central Asia's ethnic minorities have adjusted to being "at home abroad" nearly three decades after the collapse of the Soviet Union. It finds that minority groups have alternated between 'exit' (from the political system), 'loyalty' (participation in it and support for the leadership), and 'voice' (contentious politics). In this book, the case of Uzbek minorities living outside of Uzbekistan serves as a vantage point to reflect on questions of cultural and political loyalties, contentious politics, and the relationship between identity and political action. Uzbeks represent the largest non-Russian minority group in Central Asia.

Law and Power in Russia

Making Sense of Quasi-Legal Practices

Håvard Bækken

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book explores the issue of selective law enforcement, arguing that the manipulation of the legal system by powerful insiders is a distinctive feature of Putinism, reflecting both its hybrid authoritarianism and Russian legal culture. Based on extensive research including interviews with the victims of selective law enforcement, the book analyses how selective law enforcement works in Russia, discusses the link between law and power, and relates the Russian situation to examples from elsewhere and to general legal theories and ideas of political hybridity.

Leadership and Nationalism in Azerbaijan

Ali Mardan bey Topchibashov, Founder and Creator

Jamil Hasanli, Formerly Baku State University and Khazar University, Azerbaijan

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

This book analyses and presents the life of the first independent Azerbaijani political leaders. Based on extensive research from archives in Azerbaijan, France, Georgia, Russia (Moscow and Kazan) and the UK, some of which are newly accessible, it traces the political personality of Topchibashov as one of the largest Muslim leaders and founder of the Azerbaijan Republic. At the same time, it offers insights into the history of the formation and creation of the national consciousness of the Russian Muslims and tracks the challenges in the national and religious policy of the Imperial administration of the Soviet Union.

Memory, Forgetting and the Legacy of Post-1945 Displacement in Russia and Eastern Europe

Uilleam Blacker, University of Oxford, UK

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

After the Second World War, millions of people across Eastern Europe, displaced as a result of wartime destruction, deportations and redrawing of state boundaries, found themselves living in cities filled with the traces of the foreign cultures of the former inhabitants. In the immediate post-war period these traces were not acknowledged but in time the former "other pasts" have been embraced and taken on board as part of local cultural memory. This book explores this interesting and increasingly important phenomenon, examining official ideologies, popular memory, literature, film, memorialisation and tourism to show how other pasts are incorporated into local cultural memory.

Orthodox Religion and Politics in Contemporary Eastern Europe

On Multiple Secularisms and Entanglements

Edited by Tobias Koellner

Series: Routledge Religion, Society and Government in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet States

This book explores the relationship between Orthodox religion and politics in Eastern Europe, Russia and Georgia. It demonstrates how as these societies undergo substantial transformation Orthodox religion can be both a limiting and an enabling factor, how the relationship between religion and politics is complex, and how the spheres of religion and politics complement, reinforce, influence, and sometimes contradict each other. Considering a range of issues, with examples from a wide range of countries with significant Orthodox religious groups, and setting the present situation in its historical context the book provides a rich picture of a subject which has been too often oversimplified.

Putin's Third Term as Russia's President, 2012-18

Larry Black

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book provides a comprehensive and systematic overview of Putin's third term as Russia's president. It covers political, international relations, economic and social issues, and provides a balanced assessment of Putin's successes and failures. These include the conflict in Ukraine, the annexation of Crimea, scandals associated with the Olympics, Russia's increasing involvement with Asia and shifts in the economy away from huge reliance on energy resources. The book sets Putin's activities as president in their wider context, discussing his overall popularity, the weakness of potential opposition and the development of the Russian Federation as a relatively new state.

Russian Culture in the Age of Globalization

Edited by Vlad Strukov and Sarah Hudspith

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book brings together scholars from a variety of disciplines who use different methodologies to interrogate the changing nature of Russian culture in the twenty-first century. The book considers a range of cultural forms that have been instrumental in globalising Russia. These include literature, art, music, film, media, the internet, sport, urban spaces, and the Russian language. It pays special attention to the processes by which cultural producers negotiate between Russian government and global cultural capital. Overall, the book provides a conceptual framework for analyzing Russia as a transnational entity and its contemporary culture in the globalized world.

Soviet and Post-Soviet Sexualities

Edited by Richard C. M. Mole

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

Despite Soviet Russia having been one of the first major powers to decriminalise homosexual acts between men, attitudes towards lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) people in contemporary Russia and the other post-Soviet states have become increasingly hostile. This book explores how this situation has come about. It discusses how attitudes to non-normative sexualities developed historically and examines the current situation in the post-Soviet space, including Russia, Transcaucasia, Central Asia and the Baltic States. The book provides a wealth of detail on this understudied subject and assesses how LGBT subjects are responding to this state of affairs.

China's Developmental Keynesianism

A Lesson for Crisis Response

Yang Jiang, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark

Series: China Policy Series

This book looks at the policies that China adopted in response to the global financial crisis, with particular focus on the concepts of Keynesianism and developmental state. It discusses where China sits in the Keynesianism debate, and questions whether Chinese developmental Keynesianism is a recommendable model for other countries. The book goes on to look at the implications that the Chinese crisis response has for China and for world economy, and argues that both the concepts of Keynesianism and developmental state have been hijacked by Chinese policymakers in the process of partial reform and political consolidation.

Chinese Scholars and Foreign Policy

Debating International Relations

Edited by Huiyun Feng, Griffith University, Australia, Kai He, Griffith University, Australia and Yan Xuetong, Tsinghua University, China

Series: Routledge Studies on Asia in the World

How does China see the rest of the world? One way to answer this question is to look at the work of China's scholars in the field of International Relations (IR). This leads to a second question – to what extent do Chinese IR scholars influence Beijing's foreign policy and outlook? The contributors to this book seek to answer these key questions, drawing on their own first- and second-hand experiences of involvement in scholarly IR debates in China.

Chinese Theology and Translation

The Christianity of the Jesuit Figurists and their Christianized Yijing

Sophie Ling-chia Wei, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

This book analyses the Chinese works by the Jesuit Figurists on the Yijing. The aim of the re-interpretation of the Book of Changes and their proselytization was to promote Catholicism as a national religion in China. This was not successful, however these works in Chinese played a very important role during the time of the Chinese Rites Controversy in China and before the Jesuit Order was disbanded. The author shows that the Jesuit Figurists discovered connection and parallels between the Yijing and Christianity.

Conflict in India and China's Contested Borderlands

A Comparative Study

Kunal Mukherjee, Lancaster University, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary Asia Series

This book compares and contrasts the situation in India's disputed borderlands – Kashmir and the Indian north eastern states – with China's contested borderlands – Xinjiang and Tibet. The book looks at the root causes of the conflict and how these conflicts have evolved and changed their character with the passage of time. Analysing how the countries have dealt with their territorial disputes from the 50's till more recent times, the author shows to what extent these state policies have exacerbated the already strained situation. Using primary data collected primarily through interviews, from the people/inhabitants of these conflict zones, the book throws new

Conflict, Community, and the State in Late Imperial Sichuan

Making Local Justice

Quinn Javers

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

The book examines over 350 legal cases that comprise the 'cases of unnatural death' archival file from 1890 to 1900 in Ba County, Sichuan Province. The archive presents an untidy array of death, including homicides, suicides and found bodies. Analysing the muddled and often petty disputes found in these records, the existence of a local system of authority is highlighted, which disciplined and maintained daily life. Often relying on violence, this local justice system occasionally intersected with the state's justice system, but crucially was not dependent on it. As such, this book demonstrates the importance of informal, local authority to our understanding of justice in the late Qing era.

Daoism in Modern China

Edited by Vincent Goossaert, Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, France and Xun Liu, Rutgers University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Taoism

The modern history of Chinese temples and Daoism go hand in hand, and while both temples and Daoists serve Chinese society, the relationship between the two has yet to be thoroughly analysed. This book questions whether temples and Daoism are two independent aspects of modern Chinese religion, or if they are indissolubly linked. Using an interdisciplinary approach combining historical research and fieldwork, the book focuses on urban centres in China, as this is where socio-political changes came earliest and affected religious life to the greatest extent, and also where the largest central Daoist temples were and are located.

Digital China's Informal Circuits

Platforms, Labour and Governance

Elaine Jing Zhao

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia

Informal media activities are vibrant in circuits of cultural production, distribution, consumption and labour utilisation in China. They involve multiple actors and challenge polemic views. This book engages with forms of the informal and their interactions with the formal in the broader context of the rise of digital platforms, and evolving roles of users. The book provides an original account of how digital platforms navigate formal and informal boundaries; how enthusiastic fans, aspiring amateurs, "ordinary" users and necessity-driven labourers become integral to the formal/informal interface; and how state and non-state actors intervene in governing the formal/informal dynamics.

Germany's Colony in China

Fion Wai Ling So

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

This book explores the economic development of the northern Chinese city of Qingdao, which was held by Germany as a colony from 1898 to 1914. It focuses especially on the economic policies of the German colonial government and of the provincial government of the neighbouring Chinese province of Shandong, considering amongst other issues free trade and protection, the impact of the Gold Standard and assistance given to particular companies. The book shows how the Qingdao and Shandong economies fitted into overall East Asian and global trade patterns and concludes by discussing both the co-operation and the tensions between the Qingdao and Shandong governments.

Modern China

Society, Culture and Literature

Edited by Geeta Kochhar, Assistant Professor, Centre for Chinese and South East Asian Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India

This book looks at the transition of modern Chinese society in terms of its culture and literature. China is headed towards becoming an ultra-modern advanced society and a world superpower. Among the pillars of great change are the advances in technology and communication that have reshaped Chinese society. The book discusses China's social structure, aging population, gender stratification, marriages, cultural identity, cosmopolitanism, its history of communism, law, economic reforms, financial institutions, and challenges of the global markets. It sheds light on Chinese literature and media and brings out various facets of social changes across time.

Routledge Handbook of Chinese Medicine

Edited by Vivienne Lo, University College London, UK and Michael Stanley-Baker, University College London, UK

This handbook showcases the latest research on medicine in China as it has developed over 3,000 years. It identifies themes concerned with both history and culture and the significance of Chinese medicine in the modern world, and invite established experts together with some of the most exciting and innovative younger researchers to respond. The Handbook will end by exploring the significance of Chinese medicine in the modern world, addressing issues of evidence and, most significantly, an analysis of the global impact of everyday Chinese attitudes to health.

Soft Power With Chinese Characteristics

China's Campaign for Hearts and Minds

Edited by Kingsley Edney, University of Leeds, UK, Stanley Rosen and Ying Zhu, City University of New York, USA

This book represents an effort by leading scholars of Chinese politics, international relations and media studies to shed new light on China's contemporary global soft power. By tackling the issues of China's contemporary standing in the world, the tensions associated with China's rising power, and particularly the development of China's domestic and foreign policy under the leadership of Xi Jinping, the expert contributors grapple with some of the most important issues of the current era of shifting global power balances.

The Early Transnational Chinese Cinema Industry, 1897-1937

Yongchun Fu

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia

Based on extensive original research including in studio archives, industrial surveys, official records, trade journals, and English and Chinese newspapers, this book explores the role of the American film industry in the development of cinema in China. It examines the Chinese industry's response to the American industry, and the consequences of this response. It also considers the attitudes of Chinese film practitioners towards Hollywood, and the contribution of those figures who acted as intermediaries between the two industries. Overall, the book casts much new light on the early development of the film industry in China and demonstrates the huge influence Hollywood had on this.

The Land Question in China

Agrarian Capitalism, Industrious Revolution, and East Asian Development

Shaohua Zhan, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

The Land Question in China traces the roots of the industrious revolution in China back to the 18th century, drawing comparisons between contemporary rural development and economic prosperity in the mid-Qing dynasty. In the context of neoliberal restructuring and the transfer of land use rights from peasants to large producers and urban investors, it argues that labour-intensive reforms may offer a solution to precarious urban employment and population pressure. Comparisons with South Africa and the East Asian economies of Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan further illustrate this, and help to develop a new interpretation of the industrious revolution and its contemporary relevance.

Tradition and Transformation in a Chinese Family Business

Heung-Wah Wong, The University of Hong Kong and Karin Ling-fung Chau

Family businesses have been an important part of the economy in Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore and the Chinese diaspora, and, since the reforms, in mainland China itself. Some people have argued that the success of Chinese family businesses occurs because of the special characteristics and approach of such businesses. This book examines the nature of Chinese family business, considering the motivations and strategies of Chinese people setting up their own businesses, discussing company management and relations between family members. It charts the evolution of Chinese family businesses and discusses how Chinese family business are likely to evolve in the future.

Work Safety Regulation in China

How the CCP's fatality quotas are cleansing China's blood-soaked GDP

Jie Gao, Jie Gao is Assistant Professor of Sociology at National University of Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Fatality quotas implemented in China's industrial sector are being used to promote work safety and therefore, reducing the number of work-related deaths. Given the controversial nature of this policy, Gao analyzes how the fatality quotas are functioning to aid the country in balancing economic growth and social stability. The book also examines significant implications caused of this policy's implementation in the local regions, and reveals how local officials attempt to handle these problems. This is the first book to systematically examine the role of death indicators in work safety improvement in contemporary China, revealing insight into Beijing's quota-oriented approach to policy-making.

Britain and Japan's Security, 1945-54

Tomoki Kuniyoshi, Waseda University, Japan

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

The US-Japan security treaty, which was signed in 1951 as part of the peace settlement following the Pacific War, has continued to the present to be the main basis for Japan's security and a key part of the United States' international involvement in East Asia. Although the treaty has been viewed as the outcome of discussions between the US and Japan, in fact, as this book shows, the British, then still a regional power with a continuing direct interest in Hong Kong, Southeast Asia and the Pacific Commonwealth nations, played a key role in formulating the thinking on which the treaty was based.

Censorship in Japan

Heung Wah Wong and Hoi Yan Yau

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book explores censorship, particularly film and video censorship, in Japan in modern times. It shows how most censorship has been the industry exercising self-censorship, but how this system has been problematic in that it has allowed dominant players to impose their own standards and exclude independent film makers. It outlines notable obscenity cases, and discusses how industry self-censorship bodies have been undermined both by industry outsiders setting up alternative regimes, and by the industry self-censorship bodies themselves being prosecuted for obscenity. The book also examines the conflict between the obscenity law and the freedom of speech law.

Japan's Cold War Policy Toward China

Two Perceptions of Order

Yutaka Kanda, Niigata University, Japan

Series: Politics in Asia

During the period 1960-1972, Cold War international politics saw significant change from a bipolar structure to a more complicated situation. After the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962, Washington and Moscow accelerated the détente process, leading China to perceive a "collusion" of the two superpowers. Publically attacking its former ally while continuing to fight against the US, China rose as a symbol of multipolarization in international politics during the 1960s. Focusing on Japan's policy towards China, Kanda examines what sort of perceptions of the international order Japanese leaders had and how they reacted to this changing international environment.

Japanese Consumer Creativity

User Innovations, Role Playing and Consumer Communities

Edited by Heung-Wah Wong, The University of Hong Kong and Miki Sugiura, Tokyo International University, Japan

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book explores how the process of adapting global products for local markets, a process in which consumers are increasingly involved, has become a rich source of product innovation. It examines a range of concepts, including product domestication and localisation, collaborative branding, product hybridisation, portrayals and perceptions of images of beauty, and the contrast between imagined and actual consumers. The book thereby provides rich insights on the interaction between business producers and individuals' differing cultures of consumption in evolving globalised and localised marketplaces.

Japan's "New Deal" for China

Propaganda Aimed at Americans before Pearl Harbor

June Grasso, Boston University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

In the decade leading up to the attack on Pearl Harbour, several Japanese institutions set about trying to convince Americans to support Tokyo's plans and ambitions for China. This book analyzes the original publications produced by these organizations and explores the methods used by the Japanese to influence American attitudes and policy. Examining original Japanese English-language propaganda sources from the 1920s and 1930s, this book will be of huge interest to historians of Japan, China, the US and World War II more broadly.

Narrative Memory, Trauma and Recovery in Japanese Literature and Film

David C. Stahl, Binghamton University, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

This book provides a comprehensive analysis of Japanese literature and film through the interpretive lens of trauma studies, focusing on depictions of protagonists who dissociated their childhood and adolescent traumas, failed to mourn their losses and developed psychological defense mechanisms of incorporation, substitution and revenge. This volume also concentrates on literary and filmic texts in which traumatized protagonists are eventually able, through the creation of narrative memory and other means, to effect partial and advanced recovery. As such, the book will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Japanese film and literature, as well as those of trauma studies.

Routledge Handbook of Japanese Sociolinguistics

Edited by Patrick Heinrich, Ca' Foscari University, Italy

Japanese sociolinguistics is an immensely popular discipline in Japan, and it has contributed a great deal to our understanding of how language and society are interrelated on an international level. Japanese sociolinguistics is taught in a number of Japanese Studies Programs around the world but there exists at present no single book which can serve as a general reference source for Japanese sociolinguistics written in English. The Handbook fills a long-standing gap in the literature and provides a much-needed comprehensive outline of Japanese sociolinguistics, which can be presented to an international readership.

Zainichi Korean Women in Japan

Voices

Jackie J. Kim-Wachutka, Ritsumeikan University, Japan

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

Featuring in-depth interviews from 1994 to the present, three generations of Zainichi Korean women—those born in Japan, whose parents migrated from colonial Korea before or during WWII and the Asia-Pacific War—share their version of history, revealing their lives as members of an ethnic minority. No longer silenced by constricting patriarchal traditions, the women in this book are now able to tell their history. Ethnography, interviews, and the women's personal and creative writings offer an in-depth look into their intergenerational dynamics and provide a new way of exploring the hidden inner world of migrant women and the different ways displacement affects subsequent generations.

Adivasis, Migrants and the State in India

Jagannath Ambagudia, Associate Prof, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies, School of Social Sciences & Humanities; Chairperson, Unit for R&D, Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Assam, India

This book looks at the contested relationship between Adivasis or the indigenous peoples, migrants and the state in India. It delves into the nature and dynamics of competition and resource conflicts between the Adivasis and the migrants. Drawing on the ground experiences of the Dandakaranya Project — when Bengali migrants from erstwhile East Pakistan (now Bangladesh) were rehabilitated in eastern and central India — the author traces the connection between resource scarcity and the emergence of Naxalite politics in the region in tandem with the key role played by the state.

Christianity in India

The Anti-Colonial Turn

Clara A.B. Joseph, University of Calgary, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

The book analyses texts and contexts to show how communities of Indian Christians predetermined Western expansionist goals and later defined the Western colonial and Indian national imaginary. Combining historical research and literary analysis, the author prompts a re-evaluation of how Indian Christians reacted to colonialism in India and its potential to influence ongoing events of religious intolerance. Through a rethinking of a postcolonial theoretical framework, the book argues that Thomas Christians attempted an anti-colonial turn in the face of ecclesiastical and civic occupation that was colonial at its core.

Dalit Women of Nepal

Strategies of Resistance

Jung H. Lee, Northeastern University, US

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book examines the strategies of resistance among the Dalit women of Nepal in their struggle against the social injustice of the caste system and related practices of "untouchability", particularly in regard to the ways in which these injustices lead to capability failures that diminish human dignity and the quality of life. The book shows the moral lives of this historically understudied group in ways that challenge the guiding assumptions and methodologies of comparative ethics and political philosophy. A groundbreaking study of the lived ethics of Dalit women, this book will be of interest to academics in the fields of South Asian Studies, Religious Studies and Women's Studies.

Economic Development

A Comparative Performance of Indian States

Edited by Amit Shovon Ray, Manmohan Agarwal and M Parameswaran

This monograph conceptualizes development, consisting of eight dimensions – material prosperity, education, health, economic security among others. The authors implement this concept to design not only an overall index of development (DI) for Indian states but also three sub indices, human development (HD), security (SEC) and voice and confidence (VC). This study will enable states to reflect on whether they have been performing according to their priorities and if not, they may choose to tweak their policies or their development strategies. Evolution, Race and Public Spheres in India

Vernacular Concepts and Sciences (1860-1930)

Luzia Savary, Formerly Swiss Federal Institute of Technology (ETH), Zurich, Switzerland

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian History

This book provides an in-depth exploration of South Asian adaptations of race in vernacular languages. The focus is on a diverse set of printed texts, periodicals and books in Hindi and Urdu, two of the major print languages of British North India, written between 1860 and 1930. The author demonstrates that these sources provide a more varied and complex picture of the ways in which South Asians reinterpreted racial concepts, thereby highlighting the importance of scrutinising the vernacular dimensions of global entanglements. The first part of the book centres on the concepts of 'civilization' and 'civility'.

From Civil War to Soft Authoritarianism

Ethnonationalism and Democratic Regression in Sri Lanka

Neil DeVotta, Wake Forest University, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book shows how Sri Lanka's civil war gradually undermined liberal democracy and caused the country to regress toward the current soft authoritarian dispensation. In doing so, it introduces the concept of 'ethnic supererogation,' a governing system built around the notion that a majority ethnic group and/or the state could go beyond the standard expectations to accommodate minority concerns and institute incentives for ethnic minorities to operate within a united state so as to preclude dissension and secession.

The Naxalite Decade

Edited by Ranabir Samaddar

This book argues that without an understanding of the popular sources of the rebellion of that time, the age of the Naxalite revolt will remain beyond our understanding. It brings out for the first time unknown peasant heroes and heroines of that era, analyses the nature of the urban revolt, and shows how the urban revolt of that time anticipated street protests and occupy movements that were to shake the world forty-fifty years later.

Gender and Hindu Nationalism

Understanding masculine hegemony

Prem Kumar Vijayan, previously Institute of Social Studies (ISS), The Hague, The Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book analyses the broader social base of Hindu nationalist organisation in order to understand the growth of 'Hinduva', or Hindu nationalism. It also puts forward the argument that Hindu nationalist thought and predilections are not just the ideological constructions of specific political and/or 'cultural' agents and agencies, but emerge out of, and in turn feed, pre-existing gendered tendencies. This concept is defined as 'masculine hegemony', specifically Brahmanical masculine hegemony.

Gender and Labour in Contemporary India

Eroding Citizenship

Amrita Chhachhi, Institute of Social Studies, The Hague, the Netherlands Institute of Social Studies, the Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in the Growth Economies of Asia

Providing a comprehensive analysis of the electronics industry in India, this book highlights the gendered nature of labour regimes and domestic regimes, and also the links between households, labour markets, factories and the state, to provide a more comprehensive understanding of the relationship between gender and economic/industrial restructuring. Making an important contribution to the growing amount of available literature on gender and globalization, the author analyzes the struggles that women workers have been engaged in over their work, wages and service conditions and in their personal lives.

Hierarchy of Labour in a Central Indian Steel Town

Jonathan Parry and Ajay T.G

The book deals with social transformations brought about by industrialization in and around the steel town of Bhilai in the Indian state of Chhattisgarh. The focus is, firstly, on differences in the working lives of regular workers in public and private sector factories and the insecure contract labour force employed by this sector and the informal sector labour that is condemned to work outside it. It is, secondly, on the way the differences in social life outside the world of work – in kinship and marriage practices; in the texture of neighbourhood relationships; in life styles, life chances and consumption patterns, and in the salience of identities based on caste and on class.

Identity and Marginality in India

Settlement Experience of Afghan Migrants

Anwesha Ghosh, Centre for Studies in International Relations and Development (CSIRD), Kolkata, India

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book is a study of the displaced Afghan migrant population in India, in particular the persecuted Sikhs and Hindus who are religious minorities in Afghanistan and make up a majority of Afghan migrants in India. It explores the relationship between acculturation and identity development. By focusing on the interactions between the Afghan immigrant population and the Indian society, the author analyses how the community negotiates identity and marginality in a country that does not recognize them as refugees.

India, Democracy and Constitutional Identity

Ideological Beliefs and Preferences

Bidyut Chakrabarty, University of Delhi, India
 Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book conceptualizes the gradual evolution of an idea by tracing the history of India's constitutionalism with reference to its conceptual roots, historical antecedents and the landmark judicial pronouncements in which the concern for its retention and protection is always privileged. The author examines specific constitutional designs that the 1950 Constitution of India put in place and argues that constitutional identity, despite being drawn on specific constitutional provisions, is also changeable in view of the rapidly transforming socio-economic milieu.

Negotiating Marginality

Subaltern Citizens and Conflicts over Development in India

Edited by Rajakishor Mahana

Providing a critical ethnography of five different tribal movements fighting against the mega-industrialization projects in Odisha, India, the book presents a thick description of the confrontation of the tribals to the authoritative forces of state domination. Drawing on long-term ethnographic fieldwork carried over a decade (2006-16), this book provides empirical evidences and conceptual explorations on the resistance of subaltern citizens against domination.; Please note: Taylor & Francis does not sell or distribute the Hardback in India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka.

Of Colonial Bungalows and Piano Lessons

An Indian Woman's Memoirs

Edited by Malavika Karlekar

Of Colonial Bungalows and Piano Lessons can be read as a metaphor — as an icon — of the encounter between cultures. The memoir is based on Monica Chanda's recollections between about 1913 and 1927, of life in Calcutta, districts of undivided Bengal, holidays in Kashmir and in Europe. She presents facts and situations as she saw them — though there are a few times when emotions of love, fear and excitement ripple through the pages of this tightly-woven memoir.

Renewable Energy Policies in South Asia

The World Bank's Solar Lighting Strategies and Design Principles

Sam Wong, University of Liverpool, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

The World Bank's 'Design Principles' for successful renewable energy interventions are cost management, good governance and a choice of technology that meets local needs.

Focusing on solar lighting and drawing on case studies in Bangladesh and India, this book problematizes the underpinning assumptions of the 'Design Principles'. It critically examines the obstacles against effective implementation in the field and points to the weaknesses of the World Bank's renewable energy policies.

Routledge Handbook of Urban South Asia

Edited by Henrike Donner, Goldsmiths, University of London, UK

This Handbook is the first to systematically discuss the way urban South Asia has been analysed – as a result of colonial rule, as a set of problems associated with 'underdevelopment' and, increasingly, as exemplary for capitalist integration and problematics associated with urbanisation worldwide. It draws attention to processes and phenomena that emerge at different points in metropolitan, city and small town development, and their social and cultural implications. Contributions by experts in the field shed light on different aspects of urbanity, and focus on what makes South Asian urban social and cultural relations singularly interesting.

Identities in South Asia

Conflicts and Assertions

Edited by Vivek Sachdeva, Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University, New Delhi, India, Queeny Pradhan, Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University, New Delhi, India and Anu Venugopalan, Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University, New Delhi, India

This book examines identity formations and assertion in South Asia. Drawing on history, literature, politics, and sociology, it highlights how the shared history of colonialism and partition, communal violence, bloodshed and pogrom are instrumental in understanding present-day concerns. The essays in the volume look at themes like borders and nations, race and ethnicity, identity politics and fundamentalism, language and regionalism, memory and community, and resistance and assertion.

An important intervention in South Asian studies, this volume will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of modern South Asian history, politics, sociology and social exclusion.

The Politics of US Aid to Pakistan

Aid Allocation and Delivery from Truman to Trump

Murad Ali, Alexander von Humboldt Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the German Development Institute/ Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE), Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

Focusing on a comprehensive analysis of aid allocation and delivery mechanisms, this book uncovers the primary factors behind historical and contemporary US aid to Pakistan so far not thoroughly and empirically studied, especially in the post-2001 period of the 'war on terror'. Furthermore, based on findings that have emerged from interviews with over 200 respondents, including government officials, representatives of donor aid agencies, the private sector, civil society organizations and primary beneficiaries of US-funded projects, this book offers significant insights to researchers, policy-makers and practitioners interested in the discipline of aid and development effectiveness.

Unbecoming Modern

Colonialism, Modernity, Colonial Modernities

Edited by Saurabh Dube and Ishita Banerjee Dube

This volume discusses the concepts of modernity and colonialism, and describe how the two relate to each other. It explores the vital impact of the colonial pasts of India, Mexico, China and even the Unites States on the processes through which these countries have become modern. The topics discussed include the Zapatista movement in southern Mexico, the image of the South in recent African-American literature, the theories of Andre Gunder Frank about the early modernization of Asian countries, and the contradictions of the colonial state in India. ; Please note: Taylor & Francis does not sell or distribute the Hardback in India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka.

The International People's Tribunal for 1965 and the Indonesian Genocide

Edited by Saskia E. Wieringa, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Annie Pohlman, University of Queensland, Australia and Jess Melvin

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book offers new and previously unpublished insights into the 1965 genocide in Indonesia and how the International People's Tribunal addressed the many forms of violence during this period. It systematically analyses the types of crimes committed during the massacres of 1965–1966 and how these crimes were prosecuted at the International People's Tribunal for 1965, held in The Hague in November 2015, to commemorate fifty years since the killings began. Divided thematically, each chapter analyses a different crime - enslavement, sexual violence, torture - perpetrated during the Indonesian killings.

Trafficking and Sex Work in Cambodia

Larissa Sandy, RMIT University, Australia

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book shows how policies to combat human trafficking and regulate sex work have shaped both the structure of the modern Cambodian sex industry and sex workers' experiences. It is rich in empirical detail, based on extensive long-term fieldwork and in-depth interviews and highly original, as the author describes the largely undocumented experiences of male and female sex workers to show how sex work remains prevalent in Cambodia and continues to be a dynamic terrain responding to global and local socioeconomic forces and moulded by government control and people's constantly changing social and sexual tastes.

Women Warriors in Southeast Asia

Edited by Tobias Rettig, Singapore Management University and Vina A. Lanzona, University of Hawai'i-Manoa, USA.

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

Based on multidisciplinary perspectives, this book brings together a wide range of case studies covering women as agents of violence in periods of armed conflict in Southeast Asia. It discusses why these women were active in a domain traditionally preserved for men, and how it arguably transgressed peacetime gender boundaries. Using a number of different sources, including epigraphs, royal chronicles, diaries, memoirs and interviews, the book looks at Southeast Asian woman in both ancient and modern times, and in a variety of roles, such as palace guards, guerrillas and war leaders.

Islamism, Populism, and Turkish Foreign Policy

Edited by Burak Bilgehan Özpek, TOBB University of Economics and Technology, Turkey and Bill Park, King's College, London, UK

This comprehensive volume analyses the phenomena of populism and Islamism in Turkey under Justice and Development Party (JDP) rule since 2002, and its impact on the country's foreign policy. The authors explore the apparent rise of authoritarianism and illiberalism under the JDP and especially under President Erdogan. They examine Turkey's EU accession prospects and its western alliances, explore the country's approach to the Arab Spring, and consider its status as an emerging economy in an economically globalizing context. This book will interest students and researchers of political science and IR, with a focus on Turkey. It was originally published as a special issue of Turkish Studies.

Patterns of Nationhood and Saving the State in Turkey

Ottomanism, Nationalism and Multiculturalism

Serhun Al

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern Politics

Patterns of Nationhood and Saving the State in Turkey tackles a theoretical puzzle in understanding the state policy changes toward minorities and nationhood. First by placing the state in the historical context of the international system and second by unpacking the state through analyzing intra-elite competition in relation to the counter-discourses by minority groups within the context of Ottoman Empire and Turkey.

The book is an important contribution to studies in ethnicity and nationalism, therefore it is an essential resource for students and scholars interested in the Comparative Politics, Ottoman Empire, Turkey and Middle East Studies.

Routledge Handbook of International Relations in the Middle East

Edited by Shahram Akbarzadeh

This handbook book examines the regional and international dynamics of the Middle East. It challenges the state society dichotomy to make sense of decision making and behaviour by ruling regimes. The 28 chapters include the world's leading scholars of the Middle East and International Relations (IR) in order to make sense of the region. This synthesis of area studies expertise and IR theory provides a unique and rigorous account of the region's current dynamics, which have reached crisis point since the beginning of the Arab Spring.

The Palestinian Authority in the West Bank

The Theatrics of Woeful Statecraft

Michelle Pace and Somdeep Sen

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern Democratization and Government

The Palestinian Authority in the West Bank explores the manner in which the Palestinian Authority's performative acts affect and shape the lives and subjective identities of those in its vicinity in the occupied West Bank.

The Palestinian Authority in the West Bank makes an important and long-due intervention by integrating performance studies and politics to suggest an understanding of the theatrics of woeful statecraft in Palestine. The book is an essential resource for students and scholars interested in the study of the state, International Relations and Politics, Palestine Studies and the Middle East.

The Russians in Israel

A New Ethnic Group in a Tribal Society

Majid Ibrahim Al-Haj

Series: Routledge Studies on the Arab-Israeli Conflict

This comprehensive study covers the thirty-year period since the beginning of the immigrant influx from the former Soviet Union in the 1990s and incorporates data based quantitative and qualitative research methods. It provides an important opportunity to examine identity and patterns of adaptation among immigrants, with the added perspective afforded by the passage of time. Moreover, it sheds light on the Russians' cumulative influence on Israeli society and on the Israel-Palestinian conflict. Considering all groups within Israeli society, it covers Palestinian-Arab citizens in Israel who have almost never been included in analyses addressing questions of Jewish immigration to Israel.

Israel in a Turbulent Region

Security and Foreign Policy

Edited by Tore T. Petersen

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern Politics

Israel in a Turbulent Region examines and deconstructs what Israeli security looks like and how its various security identities have evolved both before the establishment of the state and in the years and decades since 1948. It casts light on how aspects of Israel's foreign relations have been shaped as much by internal politics as by external challenge. Further, not only does it answer the questions surrounding Israel's past, but examines carefully what type of country it has now become.

Palestine

Evolution Toward Statehood?

Nigel Parsons, Massey University, New Zealand

Series: The Contemporary Middle East

Focussing on Palestine through the lens of nation-statehood, this book documents the unrealised quest for sovereignty and independence, fragmentation of the nation across multiple borders, the related prominence of a large and diverse diaspora, and the physical and political division of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. It examines the limitations besetting Palestinian economic development and goes on to analyse Palestine's international relations both within, and without, the Middle East. Aiming to convey the continuity, resilience and achievements of the Palestinian nation propelling the case for self-determination, it explores the divisions, failings and obstacles attending that struggle.

Post-conflict transition in Lebanon

The disappeared of the civil war

Lyna Comaty

Series: Routledge Studies in Middle Eastern Society

The book adopts a political sociological and anthropological approach to look at periods of transition from conflict to peace in Lebanon after the civil war (1975-1990). It principally looks at answering why many issues related to the civil war are still lingering and unresolved 25 years after the end of violence. Through the unresolved question of those who disappeared during the war, the book induces a set of questions about the social and political system in a country in transition. It delves precisely into the notion of the transition from conflict to peace in Lebanon by taking the issue of the estimated 17000 disappeared of the civil war as a case study.

Religious Zionism and the Six Day War

From Realism to Messianism

Avi Sagi and Dov Schwartz

Series: Routledge Jewish Studies Series

Before the Six-Day War, religious-Zionism had limited its concern to the protection of specific religious interests, with its representatives having little share in the determination of Israel's national agenda. Fifty years after it, religious-Zionism has turned into one of Israeli society's dominant elements. Delving into this dramatic transformation, the book depicts the Six-Day War as a constitutive event that indelibly changed the political and religious consciousness of religious-Zionists. The book will be of interest to readers and scholars concerned with changing dynamic societies and with the study of religion and particularly with the relationship between religion and politics.

Rival Conceptions of Freedom in Modern Iran

An Intellectual History of the Constitutional Revolution

Ahmad Hashemi

Series: Iranian Studies

Rival Conceptions of Freedom in Modern Iran is an original historiographic examination of the idea of freedom in early modern Iran within a larger context of the formation of modern Muslim thought. The study develops an appropriate method for the historiography of ideas by taking into consideration cultural, linguistic, and socio-political limitations and obstacles to free thinking in closed societies.

Routledge Handbook on Tourism in the Middle East and North Africa

Edited by Dallen J. Timothy, Arizona State University, USA

This handbook provides a comprehensive statement about the supply and demand for tourism in the Middle East, deconstructs the challenges and opportunities facing the region from a tourism perspective, and delivers a succinct account of the important variables affecting the industry's growth and development throughout the region. The book adopts a thematic approach, rather than a country-by-country account of tourism.

The Ottoman Empire in the Tanzimat Era

Provincial Perspectives from Ankara to Edirne

Yonca Köksal

Series: SOAS/Routledge Studies on the Middle East

This book is a new history of the Ottoman Empire's Tanzimat reforms in the provinces of Edirne and Ankara. It studies variation across the two provinces and the crucial role of local intermediaries such as notables, tribal leaders and merchants who at times undermined the power of the state but in other times worked hand-in-hand with state officials to build roads, improve infrastructure and provide security.

The Qur'an between the Ottoman Empire and the Turkish Republic

An Exegetical Tradition

Susan Gunasti

Series: Routledge Studies in the Qur'an

This book is the first book-length study of the Ottoman exegetical tradition in the English language. It examines Elmalılı Muhammed Hamdi Yazır's Qur'an translation and Qur'an commentary, Hak Dini, Kur'an Dili (The Religion of the Truth, The Language of the Qur'an) and looks at the final expression of the Ottoman exegetical tradition in the twentieth century.

The Unending War on Iraq

Tareq Y Ismael, University of Calgary, Canada

Series: Durham Modern Middle East and Islamic World Series

The murderous conflict in Iraq and the humanitarian catastrophe fomented by the 2003 Anglo-American invasion continue to have a huge impact. This book assesses the extent of the continuing damage. It considers the numerous reports compiled over recent years by UN agencies and similar bodies which provide a great deal of empirical evidence showing how the catastrophe continues. The book includes lengthy extracts from these reports, which document problems such as food scarcity, forced displacement of people, the adverse effect on children, the adverse economic impact, abuse of women and human rights abuses. The overall picture painted is that the situation in Iraq continues dire.
