Our history

Over two centuries ago, the foundations of the company were laid in pioneering fashion when in 1798 Richard Taylor launched the Philosophical Magazine, one of the first scientific journals produced by an independent company. It was the start of much close collaboration with scholarly societies. Dr William Francis, a chemist, joined Richard Taylor in 1852 and continued the tradition of the close links between the academic community and the company.

Today, we continue to be fully committed to the publication of academic and scholarly information of the highest quality and this remains our primary goal.

Taylor & Francis has grown rapidly to become a leading international, academic publisher. With offices across the globe, the Taylor & Francis Group now publishes more than 2,200 journals and over 5,200 new books each year; with a books backlist in excess of 110,000 specialist titles.

Prices featured are correct at time of going to press but are subject to change without notice.

Book orders should be addressed to the Taylor & Francis Customer Services Department at Bookpoint, or the appropriate overseas agent.

A Critical Introduction to the Philosophy of Language

Central Themes from Locke to Wittgenstein

John Fennell

A Critical Introduction to Philosophy of Language is a historically-oriented introduction to the central themes in philosophy of language. Its narrative arc covers Locke's 'idea' theory, Mill's empiricist account of math and logic, Frege's anti-psychologism, Frege and Russell's program of logical analysis, Ayer and Carnap's logical positivism, Quine's critique of logical positivism and elaboration of a naturalist-behaviorist approach to meaning, and later-Wittgenstein's 'ordinary language philosophy'-inspired rejection of the project of logical analysis.

Friendship and Social Media

A Philosophical Exploration

Diane Jeske, University of Iowa, USA

Friendship is regarded as crucial to living a good life. But how does friendship make our lives better? Do all friendships make our lives better? What sorts of interactions are necessary for maintaining valuable friendships?

This book answers these questions via a philosophical exploration of friendship and the ways that it contributes value to our lives. Written in a clear and engaging style, Friendship and Social Media brings philosophical rigor and clarity to the task of determining how we can responsibly use social media in our own lives. It is essential reading for anyone interested in the ethics of interpersonal relationships and the social impact of technology.

Emotion: The Basics

Michael Brady

Series: The Basics

What are emotions? Why are emotions important in our lives? Emotion: The Basics to answer these questions, and in doing so provides accounts of the nature and value of particular emotions that are central to human existence. These include affective states that are vital for us personally, such as curiosity and pain; emotions that are important for relationships, such as love and trust; emotions that are necessary for the functioning of social groups, such as guilt and shame; and emotions that are essential to morality, such as empathy and compassion. The overarching message is that our lives, both individual and social, would be significantly impoverished without the emotions.

Ethics Goes to the Movies

An Introduction to Moral Philosophy

Christopher Falzon, University of Newcastle, Australia

This book offers an introduction to ethical thinking in the Western tradition, using a wide range of films to illustrate and explore key theories, arguments and problems in the history of moral philosophy. Films from High Noon and Dirty Harry to Under the Skin, and Force Majeure are used to explore ethics across the ages, from Plato and Aristotle through to modern times.

Film, Philosophy, and Reality

Ancient Greece to Godard

Nathan Andersen, Eckerd College, USA

Film, Philosophy, and Reality: Ancient Greece to Godard is a significant original contribution to film-philosophy that shows how thinking about movies can lead us into a richer appreciation and understanding of both reality and the nature of human experience. Focused on the question of the relationship between how things seem to us and how they really are, it is at once an introduction to philosophy through film and an introduction to film through philosophy.

Philosophy of Sex and Love

An Opinionated Introduction

Patricia Marino

From the 1970s until recently, philosophers' discussions about sex and love have tended to dwell on certain metaphysical questions (e.g., whether we have reasons to love) or—in ethics—on questions about perversion and normalcy. In the last few years, however, philosophers have foregrounded political concerns and begun to focus on a wide range of emerging social issues. In this student-friendly introduction to the subject, Patricia Marino offers a contemporary approach to sex and love, highlighting the social, political, and economic problems at play in issues like same-sex marriage, sexual objectification, ethical non-monogamy, and many more relevant topics that will interest readers today.

The Routledge Guidebook to Berkeley's Three Dialogues

Stefan Storrie, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland
Series: The Routledge Guides to the Great Books

The Routledge Guidebook to Berkeley's Three Dialogues is an engaging introduction to the last of a trio of works that cemented Berkeley's position as one of the great philosophers of the western canon. Written for readers approaching this seminal work for the first time, this book provides the philosophical context in which Three Dialogues was written, critically discusses the arguments in each of the Three Dialogues and examines some of the principle disputes concerning the interpretation of his work. The Routledge Guidebook to Berkeley's Three Dialogues offers a clear and comprehensive guide to this ground-breaking volume and includes further reading sections at the end of each chapter.

A Defense of Simulated Experience

New Noble Lies

Mark Silcox
Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book defends an account of the positive psychological, ethical, and political value of simulated human experience. The first half provides a highly schematic definition of simulated experience and compares it with some claims about the nature of simulation made by other philosophers about what it is for one thing to be a simulation of another. In the second half, the author defends an account of the positive social value of simulated experience and compares his own position to the ideas of a number of utopian political thinkers. He then makes practical suggestions about how a proper appreciation of the value of simulated experience might influence public policy decisions.

A Philosophy of the Art School

Michael Newall, University of Kent, UK
Series: Routledge Research in Aesthetics

This book presents a philosophical account of contemporary art school teaching. It analyses two models that have come to dominate art schools. The first of these is a training guided by the artistic values of a single artist-teacher. The second is based around the group crit, in which diverse voices contribute to an artist's development. Understanding the underlying principles and possibilities of these two models gives new insights into the character of contemporary art school teaching, demonstrating how art schools shape art and artists, how they can be an engine of creativity in contemporary culture and how they contribute to artistic research.

Care Ethics and Social Structures in Medicine

Ruth E. Groenhout, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA

Series: Routledge Annals of Bioethics

This book examines the central structures in medicine—medical knowledge, economics, technological innovation, and medical authority—from the perspective of an ethics of care. The author analyzes each of these structures in detail before considering the challenges they present to end of life care. The perspective of an ethics of care allows for a careful focus on how these structures affect the capacity of the health care system to provide the care patients need, on the impact they have on the relationships between patients and care-givers, and on how they affect the care-givers in terms of their own sense of identity and capacity for care.

Confucius and the Modern World

Lai Chen

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Chinese Philosophy

Starting from Confucianism's comeback in modern China, and ending with the proposal of the new philosophical concept of "multiple universality", this book conducts an in-depth analysis and discussion of many facets of the relationship between Confucianism and the modern world culture. It not only elucidates the Confucian position in the face of such challenges as global ethics, dialogues on human rights, and ecological civilization, but also provides a modern interpretation of classical Confucian ideas about education, politics and ritual politics. Besides, it provides insights into the development of Confucianism in modern times.

Delusions and Beliefs

A Philosophical Inquiry

Kengo Miyazono

Series: Routledge Focus on Philosophy

What causes delusions? Why are delusions pathological? This book examines these questions, which are normally considered separately, in a much-needed exploration of an important and fascinating topic. Kengo Miyazono assesses the philosophical, psychological and psychiatric literature on delusions to argue that delusions are malfunctioning beliefs. Delusions belong to the same category as beliefs but, unlike healthy irrational beliefs, fail to play the function of beliefs.

This book will be of great interest to students of philosophy of mind and psychology and philosophy of mental disorder, as well as those in related fields such as mental health and psychiatry.

Fictive Narrative Philosophy

How Fiction Can Act as Philosophy

Michael Boylan, Marymount University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Aesthetics

This book argues that some literary works indeed can make their own unique claims in different areas of philosophy, a method termed fictive narrative philosophy. It outlines detailed conceptions of the methods of presentation, audience engagement, logical mechanics, and constructional devices of fictive narrative philosophy, and brings this definition to bear on individual authors and works that can be considered prime examples of it. Finally, the book sets out why and when fictive narratives might be more favorable than traditional philosophical discourse, and how the concept of fictive narrative philosophy can move teaching and scholarship forward in a positive direction.

Ethics Beyond the Limits

New Essays on Bernard Williams' Ethics and the Limits of Philosophy

Edited by Sophie Grace Chappell and Marcel van Ackeren, Koln University, Germany

Bernard Williams' Ethics and the Limits of Philosophy is widely regarded as one of the most important works of moral philosophy in the last fifty years. In this outstanding collection of new essays, fourteen internationally-recognised philosophers examine the enduring contribution that Williams's book continues to make to ethics. Required reading for students and researchers in ethics, metaethics, and moral psychology, and highly recommended for anyone studying the work of Bernard Williams.

Hume on Art, Emotion, and Superstition

A Critical Study of the Four Dissertations

Amyas Merivale, University of Oxford, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

This book offers the first comprehensive critical study of David Hume's Four Dissertations of 1757. The author defends that these four works were not published together merely for convenience, but that they form a tightly integrated set, unified by the subject matter of the passions. He also defends the claim that the theory of the passions they jointly present is significantly different—indeed, significantly improved—from that of the earlier Treatise. This book is an important contribution to the scholarly literature on Hume's work on the passions, art, and superstitious belief.

Extended Consciousness and Predictive Processing

A Third Wave View

Michael D Kirchhoff, University of Wollongong, Australia and Julian Kiverstein

Series: Routledge Focus on Philosophy

The idea that the mind is extended and embedded in the world is one the biggest and most exciting areas of research in philosophy and cognitive science in recent years. Julian Kiverstein and Michael Kirchhoff critically assess the work of notable proponents of the extended mind, including Andy Clark and David Chalmers, arguing that a third-wave view of the extended mind, in which cognition is spatially and temporally grounded, also applies to consciousness.

Husserl's Phenomenology of Intersubjectivity

Historical Interpretations and Contemporary Applications

Edited by Frode Kjosavik, Norwegian University of Life Sciences, Christian Beyer, Georg-August-University Göttingen, Germany and Christel Fricke, University of Oslo, Norway

Series: Routledge Research in Phenomenology

This collection of essays examines the instrumental role of intersubjectivity in Husserl's philosophy, and then develops a method, informed by Husserl's own approach, as a way to resolve contemporary philosophical issues. The essays demonstrate how his theories on communication, empathy, and social phenomena are relevant for debates in epistemology, philosophy of language, philosophy of mind, philosophy of psychology, and meta-ethics. With contributions from Husserl scholars across the Analytic and Continental traditions, this book is a clear and accessible resource for scholars and advanced students interested in the relevance of intersubjectivity to philosophy, sociology, and psychology.

Kant on Intuition

Western and Asian Perspectives on Transcendental Idealism

Edited by Stephen R. Palmquist, Hong Kong Baptist University

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

This book features engagements between Kant and various Asian philosophers. Key themes include the nature of human intuition, the status of Kant's idealism/realism, and Kant's notion of an object. Roughly half of the chapters take a stance on the recent conceptualism/non-conceptualism debate.

Learning Cities in Late Antiquity

The Local Dimension of Education

Edited by Jan R. Stenger

This volume suggests a new explanatory model that helps to understand better how conditions in late antique cities shaped learning and teaching, and how in turn education had an impact on its urban context. Drawing inspiration from the modern idea of 'learning cities', the studies explore the interplay of teachers, learners, political leaders, communities and institutions in the Mediterranean polis, with a focus on the well-documented city of Gaza in the sixth century CE.

Logic from Kant to Russell

Laying the Foundations for Analytic Philosophy

Edited by Sandra Lapointe

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth-Century Philosophy

The aim of this book is to document the development of logic in the 19th century and illustrate how this work helped to create the conditions in which analytic philosophy could emerge. The essays question the standard narratives of analytic philosophy's past and also address concerns that are relevant to the contemporary philosophical study of language, mind, and cognition. The book covers a broad range of influential thinkers in 19th-century philosophy and analytic philosophy, including Kant, Bolzano, Hegel, Herbart, Lotze, the British Algebraists and Idealists, Moore, Russell, the Neo-Kantians, and Frege.

Methodology and Moral Philosophy

Edited by Jussi Suikkanen, University of Birmingham, UK and Antti Kauppinen, University of Helsinki, Finland

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

Many ethicists either accept the reflective equilibrium method or think that anything goes in ethical theorizing as long as the results are plausible. The aim of this book is to advance methodological thinking in ethics beyond these common attitudes and to raise new methodological questions about how moral philosophy should be done. The chapters investigate the prospects of empirical ethics, outline new methods of ethics, evaluate recent methodological advances, and explore whether different areas of moral philosophy are methodologically continuous or independent of one another.

Moral Rights and Their Grounds

David Alm, University of Lund, Sweden

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This book offers a novel theory of rights based on two distinct views. The first—the value view of rights—argues that for a person to have a right is to be valuable in a certain way, or to have a value property. Alm then argues that the familiar agency view of rights should be replaced with a different version according to which persons' rights, and thus at least in part their value, are based on their actions rather than their mere agency. This view, which Alm calls exercise-based rights, retains some of the most valuable features of the agency view while also defending it against common objections concerning right loss.

Phenomenology of the Broken Body

Edited by Espen Dahl, University of Tromsø – The Arctic University of Norway, Cassandra Falke, University of Tromsø – The Arctic University of Norway and Thor Eirik Eriksen, University Hospital of North Norway

Series: Routledge Research in Phenomenology

Some fundamental aspects of the lived body only become evident when it breaks down through illness, weakness or pain. From a phenomenological point of view, various breakdowns are worth analyzing for their own sake, and discussing them also opens up overlooked dimensions of our bodily constitution. This book brings together different approaches that shed light on the phenomenology of the lived body—its normality and abnormality, health and sickness, its activity as well as its passivity. The contributors integrate phenomenological insights with discussions about bodily brokenness in philosophy, theology, medical science and literary theory.

Putting Others First

The Christian Ideal of Others-Centeredness

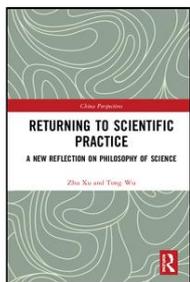

T. Ryan Byerly, University of Sheffield, UK
Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory
When deciding what to do, is it best to treat one's own interests as more important than the interests of others, others' interests as more important than one's own, or one's own and others' interests as equally important? This book develops an account of others-centeredness, a way of putting others first in the process of deciding what to do. It investigates other-centeredness by drawing upon a wide range of academic disciplines including biblical studies, feminist scholarship, philosophy, psychology, and theology.

Returning to Scientific Practice

A New Reflection on Philosophy of Science

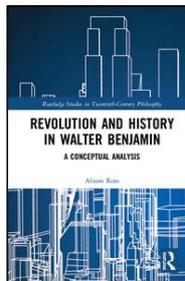

Zhu Xu, Associate Professor in Department of Philosophy, ECNU and Tong Wu, Professor, Institute of Science, Technology and Society, Tsinghua University, China
Series: China Perspectives

This book is a result from a collective study on philosophy of scientific practice (PSP), which began around 2002 and still in an ongoing process. The authors believe that it is necessary for PSP to turn from the theory-dominant position to the practice-dominant position. PSP has also put forward some possibility to reinterpret epistemic status of local knowledge in Chinese tradition, which provides the most significant motivation to participate this study.

Revolution and History in Walter Benjamin

A Conceptual Analysis

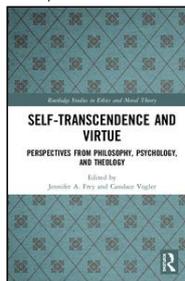

Alison Ross, Monash University, Melbourne, Australia Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Philosophy
The fundamental problem that faces any analysis of Benjamin's approach to revolution is that he deploys notions that belong to the domain of individual experience. Benjamin himself understood the problem of revolution to be primarily that of the conceptualization of collective experience under the conditions of modern bourgeois society. Through a detailed study of Benjamin's writings on the topics of the child and the dream, and an analysis of his ideas of history, the fulfilled wish, similitude and communist society, this book shows how the conceptual analysis of his corpus can get to the heart of Benjamin's conception of revolutionary experience and distil its difficulties and mechanisms.

Self-Transcendence and Virtue

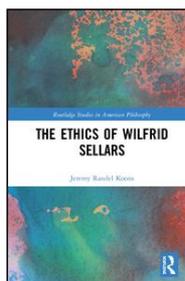

Perspectives from Philosophy, Psychology, and Theology

Edited by Jennifer A. Frey, University of South Carolina, USA and Candace Vogler, University of Chicago, USA
Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory
Recent research suggests that individuals who understand themselves as belonging to something greater than the self—a family, community, or religious or spiritual group—often feel happier, have a deeper sense of purpose or meaning in their lives, and have overall better life outcomes than those who do not. Some positive and personality psychologists have labeled this location of the self within a broader perspective "self-transcendence." This book presents and integrates new, interdisciplinary research into virtue, happiness, and the meaning of life by re-orienting these discussions around the concept of self-transcendence.

The Ethics of Wilfrid Sellars

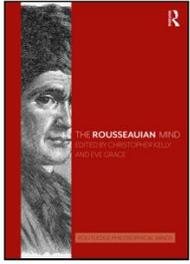

Jeremy Randel Koons, Georgetown University School of Foreign Service in Qatar
Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

Within Sellars's ethical theory lie answers to a number of pressing questions: Are there any objectively true moral statements? What is the nature of moral reasoning? What is the connection between moral judgments and motivation? How to we fit morality into a scientific view of the world? In resolving questions, and combining Sellars's work with the latest work—both from later Sellarsian philosophers, and from contemporary ethicists and rationality theorists—this book presents a strikingly original and comprehensive theory that has much to contribute to contemporary debates in ethics and metaethics.

The Routledge Handbook of the Philosophy and Psychology of Luck

Edited by Ian M. Church and Robert J. Hartman

Series: Routledge Handbooks in Philosophy

The Handbook's 39 chapters, published here for the first time, cover a wide range of topics, from the problem of moral luck, to anti-luck epistemology, to the relationship between luck attributions and cognitive biases, to meta-questions regarding the nature of luck, to a range of other theoretical and empirical questions currently being investigated by ethicists, epistemologists, and psychologists. By bringing this research together, the Handbook serves as both a touchstone for understanding the relevant issues and a first port of call for future research on luck.

Unjust Borders

Individuals and the Ethics of Immigration

Javier S. Hidalgo, University of Richmond, USA

Series: Political Philosophy for the Real World

This book explores how individuals should respond to the injustice of immigration restrictions. Hidalgo focuses on unauthorized migrants, people smugglers, and citizens of states that enforce unjust immigration restrictions and argues that it is permissible for foreigners to cross borders illegally and resist immigration agents by deceiving them; the smuggling of migrants across borders is morally permissible and often praiseworthy; states owe reparations to unauthorized migrants; and citizens have duties to disobey immigration laws. He draws on empirical evidence from the social sciences to argue that conventional wisdom about the individual ethics of immigration is wrong.

Wilfrid Sellars and Buddhist Philosophy

Freedom from Foundations

Edited by Jay L. Garfield

Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

The aim of this book is to address the relevance of Wilfrid Sellars' philosophy to understanding topics in Buddhist philosophy. The essays are divided into two sections organized around two of Sellars' essays that have been particularly influential in Buddhist Studies: "Philosophy and the Scientific Image of Man" and "Empiricism and the Philosophy of Mind." The chapters in Part I address questions concerning the two truths, while those in Part II concern issues in epistemology and philosophy of mind. The volume will be of interest to Sellars scholars, to scholars interested in the contemporary interaction of Buddhist philosophy and Western philosophy and to scholars of Buddhist Studies.

Variations on a Theme of Augustine

Shao Kai Tseng, Zhejiang University, China

Series: Barth Studies

Looking at issues such as original sin, universal salvation and human will, Barth is shown to be radically redefining the relationship between humans, their actions and the divine. This book argues that human 'nature' is the total determination of the human being 'from above' by God's grace in Christ, while the existential dimension of the human being is also totally determined 'from below' by the Adamic history of sin. This serves to demonstrate Barth's endeavours in eliminating the vestiges of natural theology within the Western tradition handed down from Augustine.

Mitigating Market-Government Failure in Emerging Nations

Albino Barrera

Series: Studies in World Christianity and Interreligious Relations

This book explores the vital role of faith-based organizations (FBOs) in compensating for the market's and government's inability to provide vital services. Its key theoretical contribution is the notion that poverty is the result of a triadic failure—when markets, government, and civil society become dysfunctional at the same time. Using data on Catholic missionaries' development work, this study presents the various ways by which FBOs mitigate market and government failures in healthcare, education, and social services, and in the process build and strengthen civil society.

Theodicy without a Fall

Bethany N. Sollereder, University of Oxford, UK

Series: Routledge Science and Religion Series

With the publication of On the Origin of Species in 1859, theologians were faced with the dilemma of God creating through evolution. Suddenly, pain, suffering, untimely death and extinction appeared to be the very tools of creation, and not a result of the sin of humanity. This book dismantles the popular theological view that roots violence and suffering in the animal kingdom in the fall of humanity. It affirms instead that there are multiple reasons to suggest that God and creation can both be "good", even with presence of violence and suffering. It will be of keen interest to scholars and academics of religion and science, the philosophy of religion, theodicy, and biblical studies.

Mormons, Quakers, and Muslims in the United States

Kathryn Montalbano, Young Harris College, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion

This book analyzes government monitoring of Mormons of the Territory of Utah in the 1870s and 1880s for polygamy, Quakers of the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC) from the 1940s to the 1960s for communist infiltration, and Muslims of Brooklyn, New York, from 2002 to 2013 for suspected terrorism. Government agencies in these case studies attempted to understand how their religious beliefs might shape their actions in the public sphere. It follows that government agents did not just observe these communities, but they probed precisely what constituted religion itself alongside shifting legal and political definitions relative to their respective time periods.

Medicine and Religion in the Life of an Ottoman Sheikh

Al-Damanhuri's "Clear Statement" on Anatomy
Ahmed Ragab, Harvard Divinity School, USA

Series: Religious Cultures in the Early Modern World

This book aims to shed light on Ahmad al-Damanhūrī's diverse intellectual background, and that of his contemporaries, continuing the scholarship on the academic thought of the late Ottoman Empire. It includes an edited translation of al-Damanhūrī's The Clear Statement, which is a well-known but unstudied and unpublished manuscript. It also provides a summary translation and analysis of al-Damanhūrī's own intellectual autobiography. This study, therefore, will be of keen interest to scholars working on the "post-Classical" Islamic world, as well as historians of religion, science and medicine looking beyond Europe in the Early Modern period.

Muslim and Jew

Origins, Growth, Resentment

Aaron W Hughes, Philip S. Bernstein Chair of Jewish Studies

Series: Routledge Focus on Religion

Muslim and Jew: Origins, Growth, Resentment seeks to show how and why these two religious traditions have been involved in political and theological self-definitions using the other since the seventh century. This short volume provides a historical and comparative survey of how each religion has thought about the other and, in so doing, about itself. It confines itself to those points at which Judaism and Islam intersect and cross-pollinate and explores how this delicate process continues into the present with the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

Practical Theology in Progress

Showcasing an emerging discipline

Edited by Nigel Rooms and Zoë Bennett, Cambridge Theological Federation, UK

Practical Theology has emerged as an important discipline in recent decades, making a major contribution both in the academy and amongst reflective practitioners on the ground. This book celebrates the 10th anniversary of the journal Practical Theology, presenting ten of the most important articles published in the journal since it was founded. This book is a 'showcase' of examples of good practical theology utilising a wide range of methodologies. It answers the question 'what is practical theology?' with real live examples that are accessible, readable and engaging.

Being, Nothingness, Love

George Pattison and Kate Kirkpatrick, University of Oxford, UK

Series: Contemporary Theological Explorations in Mysticism

This book begins by delving into definitions of mysticism and existentialism, and then traces the elements of mysticism present in German and French thought during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The book goes on to make original contributions to the study of figures including Kierkegaard, Buber, Heidegger, Beauvoir, Sartre, Marcel, Camus, Weil, Bataille, Berdyaev, and Tillich, linking their existentialist philosophy back to some of the key concerns of the mystical tradition.

The Theology of Sanctification and Resignation in Charles Wesley's Hymns

Julie A. Lunn, Nazarene Theological College, UK

Series: Routledge Methodist Studies Series

This book uses Charles Wesley's many poetic texts as a window into his rich theological thought on sanctification, particularly uncovering the role of resignation in the development of his views on this key doctrine. The book begins by putting Charles' position in the context of contemporary theology, and then shows how he differed in attitude from his brother John. It then discusses how his hymns use the concept of resignation, both in relation to Jesus Christ and the believer. It concludes this analysis by identifying the ways in which Charles understood the relationship between resignation and sanctification; namely, that resignation is a lens through which Charles views holiness.

Crimes against History

Antoon De Baets

Crimes against History takes a global approach to the extreme forms of censorship to which history and historians have been subjected through the ages. The book is divided into two parts. Part 1 tells the tragic story of how the censorship of history has sometimes turned into deadly crimes against history, while Part 2 reverses the perspective and examines how the censorship of history has backfired. Comparing case studies from across the world and written from a human rights perspective, Crimes against History is an essential resource for anyone interested in how deeply history and politics influence each other, as well as for anyone wanting a fuller view of the history of history.

Neutrality in World History

Leos Müller

Series: Themes in World History

Neutrality in World History highlights the period from 1500-2000, during which neutrality became an integrated part of international relations. Leos Muller argues that neutrality and neutral states, such as Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands and others, have played an important historical role in implementing the free trade paradigm, shaping the law of nations and humanitarianism, and serving as key global centers of trade and finance. The book offers an intriguing alternative to dominant world history narratives, which hinge primarily on the international relations and policies of empires and major world powers.

The Post Cold War World

Turbulence and Change in World Politics Since the Fall

Michael Cox, London School of Economics & Political Science, London, UK

This book by a leading scholar of international relations examines the origins of the new world disorder - the resurgence of Russia, the rise of populism in the West, deep tensions in the Atlantic alliance, and the new strategic partnership between China and Russia - and asks why so many assumptions about how the world might look after the Cold War - liberal, democratic and increasingly global - have proven to be so wrong.

The Uses of Justice in Global Perspective, 1600–1900

Edited by Griet Vermeesch, Vrije Universiteit Brussels, Belgium, Manon Van Der Heijden, Leiden University, The Netherlands and Jaco Zijderdijn, Lund University, Sweden

The Uses of Justice in Global Perspective, 1600–1900 presents a new perspective on the uses of justice between 1600 and 1900 and confronts prevailing Eurocentric historiography in its examination of how people of this period made use of the law. It is ideal for students and scholars of early modern justice, crime and legal history.

Early Modern Ireland

New Sources, Methods, and Perspectives

Edited by Sarah Covington, Queen's College, CUNY, USA, Valerie McGowan-Doyle, Lorain County Community College, USA and Vincent Carey, SUNY Plattsburgh University, USA

Early Modern Ireland: New Sources, Methods, and Perspectives offers fresh approaches and case studies that push the field of early modern Ireland, and of British and European history more generally, into unexplored directions. Provoking a reevaluation of the terms and assumptions which have been used to describe Ireland's past, and a consideration of the new directions in which the study of early modern Ireland could be taken, this is the perfect collection for students and scholars studying early modern Irish history.

The Wars of Napoleon

Charles J Esdaile, University of Liverpool, UK

Series: Modern Wars In Perspective

First published in 1995 to great acclaim, The Wars of Napoleon provides a comprehensive survey of the Napoleonic Wars around the central theme of the scale of French military power and its impact on other European states, from Portugal to Russia and from Scandinavia to Sicily. Revised throughout, this edition includes a re-written section on collaboration and resistance, a new chapter on the impact of the Napoleonic Wars in the wider world and material on the ways in which women became involved in, or were affected by, the conflict. It remains an essential resource for all students of the French Revolutionary Wars as well as students of European and military history during this period.

A Personalist Philosophy of History

Bennett Gilbert, Portland State University, USA

Series: Routledge Approaches to History

Historical study has traditionally been built around the placement of the human at the center of inquiry. The de-stabilized concepts of the human in contemporary thought challenge this configuration. However, the ways in which these challenges provoke new historical perspectives both expands and enriches historical study but are also weak and vulnerable in their concept of the human, lacking or omitting something valuable in our self-understanding. A Personalist Philosophy of History argues for a robust concept of personhood in our experience of the past as a way to resolve this conflict.

Agrarian Reform and Resistance in an Age of Globalisation

The Euro-American World and Beyond, 1780-1914

Edited by Joe Regan, National University of Ireland, Galway and Cathal Smith, National University of Ireland, Galway

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

This book investigates the causes and effects of modernisation in rural regions of Britain and Ireland, continental Europe, the Americas and Australasia between 1780 and 1914. In this period, the transformation of the world economy associated with the Industrial Revolution fuelled dramatic changes in the international countryside, as landowning elites, agricultural workers and states adapted to the consequences of globalisation in a variety of ways. The chapters in this volume illustrate similarities, differences and connections between the resulting manifestations of agrarian reform and resistance that spread throughout the Euro-American world and beyond during the long nineteenth century.

All for Union, Empire and Homeland

The Labours of "Honest John" Drummond of Quarrel

George McGilvary

The importance of the Scot, John Drummond - a favourite of Britain's rulers - is revealed here: how as a master-fixer, merchant-banker, diplomat, spy and patronage-monger he served the new Britain created in 1707. The book shows how he laboured on behalf of the burgeoning empire and for fellow-Britons, without sacrificing his beloved Scotland.

Authoritarianism and Corporatism in Europe and Latin America

Crossing Borders

Edited by António Costa Pinto, University of Lisbon, Portugal and Federico Finchelstein, The New School for Social Research, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

What drove the horizontal spread of authoritarianism and corporatism between Europe and Latin America in the twentieth century? What processes of transnational diffusion were in motion and from where to where? In what type of 'critical junctures' were they adopted and why did corporatism largely transcend the cultural background of its origins? What was the role of Intellectual-politicians in the process? This book will tackle these issues by adopting a transnational and comparative research design encompassing a wide range of countries.

Criminal Justice During the Long Eighteenth Century

Theatre, Representation and Emotion

Edited by David Lemmings, University of Adelaide, Australia and Allyson N. May, University of Western Ontario, Canada

Series: Routledge Research in Early Modern History

This book draws upon three overlapping bodies of work to generate fresh approaches to the study of crime and criminal justice in Britain and Ireland between 1660 and 1850: the conceptual lens of the "public sphere", "performativity" and speech act theory, and the history of the emotions. It opens new perspectives on the theatre of justice.

Crusading and Masculinities

Edited by Natasha R. Hodgson, Katherine J. Lewis and Matthew M. Mesley

Series: Crusades - Subsidia

This volume presents the first substantial exploration of crusading and masculinity, focusing on the varied ways in which the symbiotic relationship between the two was made manifest in a range of medieval settings and sources, and to what ends. Individual essays consider western campaigns to the Middle East and Islamic responses to these, events and sources from the Iberian peninsula and Prussia are also interrogated and re-examined, thus enabling cross-cultural comparison of the meanings attached to medieval manhood.

Food and Age in Europe, 1800–2000

Edited by Tenna Jensen, Copenhagen University, Denmark, Caroline Nyvang, Royal Danish Library, Peter Scholliers, Free University of Brussels, Belgium and Peter J. Atkins, Durham University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

People eat and drink very differently throughout their life. Each stage has diets with specific ingredients, preparations, palates, meaning or settings. Moreover, physicians, authorities and general observers have particular views on what and how to eat according to age. All this changed frequently during the previous two centuries. Infant feeding has for a long time attracted historical attention, but interest in diets of youngsters, adults of various ages, and elderly people seem to have dissolved in more general food historiography. This volume puts age on the agenda of food history by focusing on the very diverse diets throughout the lifecycle.

Knowledge and Acknowledgement in the Politics of Memory of the Armenian Genocide

Vahagn Avedian, Lund University, Sweden

Series: Mass Violence in Modern History

A century later, the Armenian genocide in the Ottoman Empire is still capable of steering up emotions, cause heated debates, even diplomatic rows. Some would suggest leaving the issue to the pages of history and instead look to the future. The reality, however, seems to be quite different. The issue of the Armenian genocide not only continues to play an important role in the relations between Armenia and Turkey, but it has also a continuous impact on respective nation's identity and society. By following the politics of memory of the Armenian question during the past century, this study aims to explain why the issue is still topical in our days.

Milton Keynes in British Culture

Imagining England

Lauren Pikó, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern British History

Milton Keynes in British Culture traces the representations of Milton Keynes in British national media, political rhetoric and popular culture in detail from 1967 to 1992, demonstrating how the town's founding principles came to be understood as symbolic of the worst excesses of a postwar state planning system which was falling from favour. Combining approaches from urban planning history, cultural history and cultural studies, political economy and heritage studies, the book maps the ways in which Milton Keynes' newness formed an existential challenge to ideals of English landscapes as receptacles of tradition and closed, fixed national identities.

Policing the Home Front in Britain, 1914-1918

The control of the British population at war

Mary Fraser

Series: Routledge Studies in First World War History

The civilian police during the First World War in Great Britain were central to the control of the population at home. This book will show the detail and challenges of police work during the First World War and how this impacted on ordinary people's daily lives. The aim is to tell the story of the police as they saw themselves through the pages of their best-known journal, The Police Review and Parade Gossip, in addition to a wide range of other published, archival and private sources.

This study is the first to utilise The Police Review and Parade Gossip as a central archival source, and offers a new and intimate perspective on policing during the Great War.

Refugees, Human Rights and Realpolitik

The Clandestine Immigration of Jewish Refugees from Italy to Palestine, 1945-1948

Daphna Sharfman, Western Galilee College, Israel

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

This book presents a multidimensional case of international human rights in the immediate post World War II period, and the way complex refugee problems created by the war were often in direct competition with strategic interests and national sovereignty.

The case study is the clandestine immigration of Jewish refugees from Italy to Palestine in 1945-48, part of a conflict involving both strategic and humanitarian interests. The result was a clear subjection of human rights considerations to strategic and political interests.

Social Closure and International Society

Status Groups from the Family of Civilised Nations to the G20

Tristen Naylor, University of Oxford, UK

Series: Global Governance

Laying the foundations of a theory of 'international social closure' this book examines how actors compete for a seat at the table in the management of international society and how that competition stratifies the international domain. This book is of interest to IR scholars interested in the 'expansion' and globalisation of international society, the history of international summits, and transformations in international order, as well as to those examining concepts including stratification, hierarchy, and networked governance. With its emphasis on non-state actors in global governance, scholars and practitioners alike working on/for civil society will also find this research of great value.

An English Translation of the Urbanus Magnus of Daniel of Beccles

Edited by Fiona Whelan, Middlebury-CMRS, UK, Olivia Spenser and Francesca Petrizzo

A translation of The Book of the Civilised Man by Daniel of Beccles brings to light the social and cultural life of medieval people in the twelfth and thirteenth century through a previously little-known text.

Often described as one of the earliest 'courtesy texts', this translation will reveal a text which cannot be easily categorised in any genre but is relevant widely for anyone with an interest in medieval life. An expansive text of enormous breadth, this translation will provide scholars new insight in areas such as social hierarchy, citizenship, morality, friendship, family ties, household administration, food consumption, standards of etiquette, and much more.

The Catholic Church and Liberal Democracy

Bernt Torvild Oftestad, Norwegian School of Theology

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

The Roman Catholic Church's critical stance towards liberalism and democracy following the French Revolution and through the nineteenth century was often entrenched but the Second Vatican Council of the 1960s saw a shift in the Church's attitude towards democracy. In addition, in recent years, a conflict has emerged between Church doctrine and modern liberalism under Popes John Paul II and Benedict XVI.

The theme of this book is the Catholic Church's relationship to modern liberal democracy, from the end of the eighteenth century until today, a connection that is situated within the context of the history of ideas itself.

The Communist International, Anti-Imperialism and Racial Equality in British Dominions

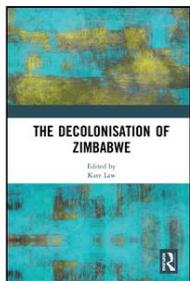

Oleksa Drachewych, McMaster University, Canada
Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

This book analyses the stance of international communism towards nationality, anti-colonialism, and racial equality as defined by the Communist International (Comintern) during the interwar period. Central to the volume is a comparative analysis of the communist parties of three British dominions; South Africa, Canada and Australia, demonstrating how each party attempted to follow Moscow's lead and how each party produced its own attempts to deal with these issues locally, while considering the limits of their own agency within the movement at large.

The Great War in the Middle East

A Clash of Empires

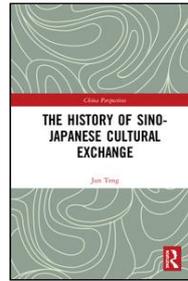

Edited by Robert Johnson, Oxford University, UK and James E. Kitchen, Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in First World War History

The thirteen chapters in this volume cover a broad range of perspectives on the First World War in the Middle East, from strategic planning issues wrestled with by statesmen through to the experience of religious communities trying to survive in warzones. All of the chapter authors look at their specific topics through a global lens, relating their areas of research to wider arguments on the history of the First World War.

The History of Sino-Japanese Cultural Exchange

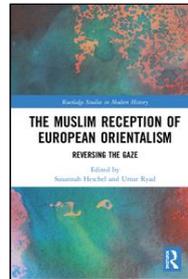

Jun Teng, Professor, Peking University, China
Series: China Perspectives

As neighbours across the sea, China and Japan enjoy a long history of cultural exchange, covering a wide range of areas and having a far-reaching influence on both countries, which is rarely seen in world history. Based on the description, the authors visited many historical sites in China and Japan, made on-the-spot investigations and got much first-hand materials on Sino-Japan cultural exchange in the first millennium. Besides, communication between people of the two countries are specifically studied with vivid details, which will give readers a concrete understanding of cultural exchange.

The Muslim Reception of European Orientalism

Reversing the Gaze

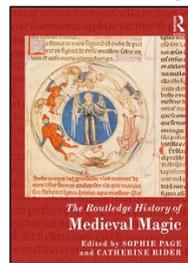

Edited by Susannah Heschel, Dartmouth College, USA and Umar Ryad, University of Utrecht, the Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

Edward Said's Orientalism, now more than fifty years old, has to be one of the most frequently cited books among academics in a wide range of disciplines, and the most frequently assigned book to undergraduates at colleges. One question less raised (or less has been done about the question) is How were the Orientalist writings of European scholars of Islam received among their Muslim contemporaries? An international team of contributors rectify this oversight in this volume.

Unknown Conflicts of the Second World War

Forgotten Fronts

Edited by Chris Murray, King's College London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Second World War History

Forgotten Fronts is a collection of chapters dealing with various overlooked aspects of the Second World War. The aim is to give greater depth and context to the war by introducing new stories about regions of the world and elements of the war rarely considered. These chapters represent new discussions on previously undeveloped narratives that help to expand our understanding of the interconnectedness of the war. It also provides an expanded view of the war as a mosaic of overlapping conflicts rather than a two-sided affair between massive alliance structures.

Winston Churchill: At War and Thinking of War before 1939

Edited by B. J. C. McKercher, University of Victoria, Canada and Antoine Capet, University of Rouen, France

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern British History

Although remembered and even lauded in the public mind as the British prime minister during the Second World War who played a major role in Allied victory over the Axis Powers and Japan, Winston Churchill had a life and political career before 1939 conditioned by fighting other wars and, in peacetime, thinking about war. While historians debate his achievements and failures between 1939 and 1945, a less explored dimension is Churchill's earlier connexion with war and warfare. This book explores Churchill's earlier experience in fighting wars as a soldier and politician.

Women and Politics in Wartime China

Networking Across Geopolitical Borders

Vivienne Xiangwei Guo, University of Exeter, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

This book concerns Chinese women intellectuals' political networking across party lines and geo-political borders during the extended wars in China of the 1930s and 1940s. It provides readers with both an engaging story and in-depth analysis of the emergence, development, integration and transformation of these networks—networks that were at first endorsed by the enlargement of a relatively liberal political space under the auspices of the Anti-Japanese United Front, but then affected by the political polarisation between Right and Left at the end of the War. The book demonstrates how the experience of women intellectuals helped shape the socio political landscape of wartime China.

Writing the Past

Knowledge and Literary Production in Archaeology

Edited by Gavin Lucas, University of Iceland

Writing the Past attempts to re-introduce a normative dimension to knowledge practices in archaeology, especially in relation to archaeological practice further down the 'assembly line' in the production of published texts, where archaeological knowledge becomes most stabilised and is widely disseminated. By exploring the composition of texts in archaeology and the relation between their structural, performative characteristics and key epistemic virtues, this book aims to move debate in both knowledge and writing practices in a new direction.

An Archaeology of the Contemporary Era

The Age of Destruction

Edited by Alfredo Gonzalez-Ruibal

An Archaeology of the Contemporary Era approaches the contemporary era, between the late nineteenth and twenty-first centuries, as an archaeological age defined by specific material processes. The materiality of our era, the book argues, and particularly its ruins and rubbish, reveals something profound, original and disturbing about humanity.

This is the first attempt at describing the contemporary era from an archaeological point of view. Global in scope, the book brings together case studies from every continent and considers sources from peripheral and rarely considered traditions.

Archaeological Theory in Practice

Edited by Patricia A Urban and Edward Schortman, Kenyon College, USA

This book bridges the gap between theory and practice by looking in detail at how the authors and their colleagues used theory to interpret what they found while conducting research in northwest Honduras.

The book is of special interest to undergraduate Anthropology/Archaeology majors and first- and second-year graduate students, along with anyone interested in how archaeologists convert the static materials we find into dynamic histories of long-vanished people.

Historical Archaeology and Heritage in the Middle East

Edited by Ruth Young, University of Leicester, UK

Historical Archaeology and Heritage in the Middle East explores everyday, rural communities in Iran and Oman in the 19th and 20th centuries, through a combination of building analysis, excavation, artefact analysis and ethnographic interviews. The first of its kind, the book draws on the results of original field projects and brings together methodologies, research questions, and themes never before used or addressed in the Middle East. It helps establish historical archaeology in the Middle East and provides new ways in which the memorable, quotidian past can be exploited for its social and economic value in contemporary community and heritage developments.

Viking Silver, Hoards and Containers

The Archaeological and Historical Context of Viking-Age Silver Coin Deposits in the Baltic c. 800–1050

Jacek Gruszczyński

Series: Routledge Archaeologies of the Viking World

By investigating silver hoards and the context of their deposition, Viking Silver, Hoards and Containers seeks to understand the variety of functions performed by hoards; the differences in function within regions; the hoards' relationship with trade; and the nature and function of emporia. It also examines the extent to which the findings mesh with literary evidence and the nature of the different societies benefiting from the influx of silver in the Viking Age.

Damascus

A History

Ross Burns, Macquarie University, Sydney, Australia

Series: Cities of the Ancient World

Damascus, first published in 2005, was the first account in English of the history of the city, bringing out the crucial role it has played at many points in the region's past. This new edition has been thoroughly updated using recent scholarship and includes an additional chapter placing the events of the Syrian post-2011 conflict in the context of the city's tumultuous experiences over the last century. This volume is a must-read for anyone interested in the sweep of Syrian history and archaeology, and an ideal partner to Burns' Aleppo (Routledge, 2016). Lavishly illustrated, Damascus: A History remains a unique and compelling exploration of this fascinating city.

The Gaṇitatilaka and its Commentary

Two Medieval Sanskrit Mathematical Texts

Alessandra Petrocchi

Series: Scientific Writings from the Ancient and Medieval World

The Gaṇitatilaka and its Commentary: Two Medieval Sanskrit Mathematical Texts presents the first English annotated translation and analysis of the Gaṇitatilaka by Śrīpati and its Sanskrit commentary by the Jaina monk Siṃhatilakasūri (13th century CE). Siṃhatilakasūri's commentary upon the Gaṇitatilaka is a key text for the study of Sanskrit mathematical jargon and a precious source of information on mathematical practices of Medieval India; this is, in fact, the first known Sanskrit mathematical commentary written by a Jaina monk, upon whom we have substantial information, to survive to the present day.

The Multi-Sensory Image from Antiquity to the Renaissance

Edited by Heather Hunter-Crawley and Erica O'Brien

How do images relate to sensory experience beyond vision? This pressing question in contemporary studies of visual culture invites us to engage anew with our objects of study, whether painted, sculpted, or performed, and also to uncover the fully-embodied nature of the cultures, creators and users of pre-modern images.

Contributors to this volume take images from a range of historical and cultural contexts and tease out the invitations they make to senses besides sight.

Art Rooms as Centers for Design Education

Creativity and Innovation in K-12 Classrooms

George Szekely, University of Kentucky, USA

Merging the teaching of art innovation through design with traditional art media taught in K-12 art programs, this book introduces art theories and histories in design, offers classroom-tested pedagogical approaches that emphasize innovation, and includes a wealth of graphics and stories about bringing in curiosity, play, and creativity into the classroom. By breaking down how teacher encouragement and stimulating classroom environments can empower students and motivate them to challenge themselves, Szekely demonstrates how art rooms become sites where children act as critical makers and builders and are positioned to make major social contributions to the school and beyond.

Image-making for Animation

Thomas Paul Thesen

This book is about composition and its application in animation, illustration, games and film. It covers all various aspects of design and explains in detail the use of the specific aspect and provides examples of its impact. Focus is on the ability of each aspect to tell a story and how it affects story. Additionally case studies are included that explain the successful use of those aspects in film and animation. The book is geared to students and professionals, however tries to be as simple as possible in the presentation of each aspect, but also complex in its case studies. The book's goal is to see composition as a technical part of image and film and as an artistic tool.

Arts Programming for the Anthropocene

Art in Community and Environment

Bill Gilbert, Anicca Cox and Erika Osborne

Series: Routledge Environmental Humanities

Arts Programming for the Anthropocene argues for a role for the arts as an engaged, professional practice in contemporary culture, charting the evolution of arts over the previous half century from a primarily solitary practice involved with its own internal dialog to one actively seeking a larger discourse. The chapters investigate the origin and evolution of five academic field programs on three continents, mapping developments in field pedagogy in the arts over the past twenty years. This book is written for arts practitioners, aspiring artists, art educators and those interested in how the arts can contribute to strengthening cultural resiliency in the face of rapid environmental change.

Creating Intelligent Content with Lightweight DITA

Carlos Evia

Series: ATTW Series in Technical and Professional Communication

Creating Intelligent Content with Lightweight DITA documents the evolution of the Darwin Information Typing Architecture (DITA) — a widely used open standard for structuring technical content. DITA has grown in popularity and features since its origins as an internal grammar for structuring technical documentation at IBM. This book introduces Lightweight DITA (LwDITA, which should be read as "Lightweight DITA") as a proposed version of the DITA standard that reduces its dependence on complex Extensible Markup Language (XML) structures and simplifies its authoring experience.

Drawing as Performance

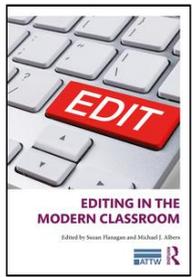

Theatrical Games and Techniques for Visual Artists
 Orly Orbach

Making connections between drama and drawing, Drama in the Drawing Studio introduces visual artists and designers to rehearsal techniques, theory and games as ways of developing image-making and visual communication skills.

Drawing from theatre and anthropology, this book is full of practical exercises that encourage experimentation and play as methods of making expressive, communicative and meaningful images. Ideas are adapted from the rehearsal room to the drawing studio, offering artists a fresh approach to translating experiences into visual images. Games and exercises are accompanied by demonstrations and responses from professional practitioners and visual communication students.

Social Media Materialities and Protest

Critical Reflections

Edited by Mette Mortensen, University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Christina Neumayer, IT University of Copenhagen, Denmark and Thomas Poell, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

The central question for this edited volume is: How should we theorise the tension between activist agency and platforms' techno-commercial strategies? To address this question, it is vital to move beyond case study research, which typically focuses on a single social media platform during intense periods of protest in particular locations. This volume develops a more systematic exploration into the relationships between protest and social media materialities. The major challenge taken up by this volume is to trace how social media materialities shape these spatial, material, and temporal relationships.

World Literature, Transnational Cinema, and Global Media

Towards a Transartistic Commons

Robert Stam

In this new book, Robert Stam argues that key terms in literature, film, and media studies, such as "World Literature," "Transnational Cinema," and "Global Media" have become baggy-monster concepts, signifying everything and nothing. By asking a series of questions of these terms, drawing on a range of disciplines in the humanities (literature, philosophy, history), the social sciences (anthropology, political science, sociology), and the transdisciplines (cultural studies, ethnic studies, critical race studies, media studies, and gender studies) and by drawing on a range of media, this book demonstrates how to think and research transnationally, transdisciplinary and transtextually.

Journalism, Power, and Investigation

Global and activist perspectives

Edited by Stuart Price, De Montfort University, UK

Journalism, Power, and Investigation presents a theoretical and practical guide to contemporary international investigative journalism to outline principles of modern investigative work in the digital world. A diverse range of contributions from academics, journalists, and activists interrogate wide ranging issues such as state power, freedom of speech and social justice, as well as exploring journalistic practices around online news video and creating documentary narratives. With chapters exploring journalism in countries including Spain, Iraq, Tunisia and Egypt, the book presents a truly global picture of investigative journalism's place in society today.

Nevertheless, They Persisted

Feminisms and Continued Resistance in the U.S. Women's Movement

Edited by Jo Reger

The year 2017 opened with a new presidency in the United States accompanied by confusion, outrage, fear, and women's marches across the globe. One thing was clear: feminism and feminist causes are not dead or in decline in the United States. Needed then are studies that capture the complexity of U.S. feminism. Nevertheless, They Persisted is an edited collection composed of empirical studies of the U.S. women's movement, pushing the feminist dialogue beyond literary analysis and personal reflection by using sociological and historical data.

Art, Cybernetics and Pedagogy in Post-War Britain

Roy Ascott's Groundcourse

Kate Sloan, University of Edinburgh

Series: Routledge Advances in Art and Visual Studies

This is the first full-length study about the British artist Roy Ascott, one of the first cybernetic artists. The book explores the evolution of his early interests in communication in the context of the rich overlaps between art, science and engineering in Britain during the 1950s and 1960s. The first part of the book looks at Ascott's training and early work, while the second looks solely at Groundcourse, Ascott's pedagogical model which used a systems-based model, drawing in behaviourism, analogue machines, performance and games. Using hitherto unpublished photographs and documents, this book will forge a more prominent place for cybernetics in post-war British art.

Batman and the Multiplicity of Identity

The Contemporary Comic Book Superhero as Cultural Nexus

Jeffrey A. Brown, Bowling Green State University, USA

Series: Routledge Advances in Comics Studies

Concentrating primarily on contemporary depictions of Batman in the comic books, this book analyzes why Batman is so immensely popular right now in America and globally, and how the fictional Dark Knight reveals both new cultural concerns and longstanding beliefs about American values. While Batman is perceived as a very clearly defined character, he is open to a wide range of interpretations and depictions in the comics. The idea of Batman functions as an anchoring point out of which multiple Batmen, or Batman-like characters, can occupy different positions, each opening up a discussion of different cultural issues, such as sexuality, ethnicity, feminism and familial relationships.

Black Women Filmmakers and Black Love on Screen

Brandale N. Mills, Norfolk State University, USA

Series: Routledge Transformations in Race and Media

This book offers a thorough analysis of how romantic love between Black men and women (referred to here as Black Love) is portrayed in Hollywood films, specifically from the perspective of Black female filmmakers. Using historical and contemporary images of Black female representation in the media as a foundation, the main themes of this text focus on the male gazes' influence on Hollywood narratives, the necessity for the Black female perspective in Hollywood, and that perspective's influence on ideologies and narratives.

British Art for Australia, 1860-1953

The Acquisition of Artworks from the United Kingdom by Australian National Galleries

Matthew C. Potter

Series: British Art: Histories and Interpretations since 1700

British art for Australia, 1860-1953: the acquisition of artworks from the United Kingdom by Australian national galleries represents the first systematic and comparative study of collecting British art in Australia between 1860 and 1953 using the archives of the Australian National Galleries and other key Australian and UK institutions. Multiple readerships in the disciplines of art history, cultural history and museology are addressed by analyzing how Australians used British art to carve a distinct identity, which artworks were desirable, economically attainable, and why, and how the acquisition of British art fits into a broader cultural context of the British world.

Digital Interfacing

Action and Perception through Technology

Daniel Black, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in New Media and Cyberculture

This book takes the interface – or rather to interface, a process rather than a discrete object or location – as a concept emblematic of our contemporary embodied relationship with technological artefacts. It grounds this discussion in specific technologies, e.g. new virtual reality and light field technologies, natural user interfaces, etc. In order to develop a detailed, generalizable theory of how we interface with technology, Black assembles an analytical toolkit from a number of different disciplines, including media theory, ethology, clinical psychology, cultural theory, philosophy, science and technology studies, cultural history, aesthetics and neuroscience.

Digital Media and Risk Culture in China's Financial Markets

Zhifei Mao, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Research in Digital Media and Culture in Asia

This book analyzes the risk cultures in China that have emerged from the entanglement of new communication technologies and financial markets, examining the role that digital media play in Asian modernity and offering an alternative narrative to that of the West. The book illustrates the impact of exclusively Asian digital media on power dynamics within risk definition, arguing that such digital media empower individuals, enabling them to compete with an expert-oriented risk culture controlled by Government- and banker-led media outlets.

Economic News

Informing The Inattentive Audience

Edited by Arjen van Dalen, University of Southern Denmark, Helle Svensson, Antonis Kalogeropoulos, University of Oxford, UK, Erik Albæk, University of Southern Denmark and Claes H. de Vreese, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands
 Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

This book tells the story of how the news media can help the inattentive members of the public become better educated and knowledgeable 'economic citizens'. The authors argue that changes in the economy, journalism and consumer culture have made economic news more visible, more mainstream and more accessible. They show how economic news not only affects economic perceptions, but also interest in the economy, knowledge about the economy, and economic voting. Relying on statistical analyses, the book provides a comprehensive and systematic study of the effects of economic news.

Emma Goldman's No-Conscription League and the First Amendment

Edited by Jared Schroeder, Southern Methodist University, USA and Erika Pribanic-Smith
 Emma Goldman's Supreme Court appeal occurred during a transitional point for First Amendment law. This project analyzes the communications that led to her arrest—writings in Mother Earth, a mass-mailed manifesto, and speeches related to compulsory military service during World War I—as well as the ensuing legal proceedings and media coverage. The authors place Goldman's Supreme Court appeal in the context of the more famous Schenck and Abrams trials to demonstrate her place in First Amendment history while providing insight into wartime censorship and the attitude of the mainstream press toward radical speech.

Ethnic Media in the Digital Age

Edited by Sherry S. Yu, University of Toronto, Canada and Matthew D. Matsaganis, Rutgers University, USA
 Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

The original research in this book 1) provides insight into how ethnic media are adapting to changing technologies in the media landscape of our times, 2) highlights the emergence of new trends in media production and consumption, and 3) underscores the enduring roles that ethnic media perform in local communities and in an increasingly globalized world. The ethnic media that authors discuss in this book are produced for broadcasting (television, radio), or distributed in print (newspapers, magazines), film, and the Web. Additionally, they serve numerous immigrant, ethnic, and indigenous communities, living in different regions of the world, including North America, Europe, and Oceania.

Indian Cinema Beyond Bollywood

The New Independent Cinema Revolution

Edited by Ashvin Immanuel Devasundaram, Queen Mary University of London, UK
 Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This volume on new independent Indian cinema is a compendium of diverse theoretical, philosophical, epistemological and practice-based perspectives, featuring contributions from multidisciplinary scholars across the world. Its credo is that the Indies are glocal— global in aesthetic and local in content. This cross-cultural, transdisciplinary and transdiscursive collection of essays focuses fully on the new Indian Indies as a bona fide field of film study worthy of dedicated analysis. In this regard, the volume draws independent Indian cinema out of Bollywood's shadow, simultaneously engaging with the contemporary socio-political and cultural context of the Indies' emergence.

Narratives of Place in Literature and Film

Edited by Steven Allen, University of Winchester, UK and Kirsten Møllegaard, University of Hawai'i at Hilo, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

Narratives of place link people and geographic location with a cultural imaginary through literature and visual narration. This interdisciplinary collection seeks to interrogate such connections to probe how place is narrativized in literature and film. Utilizing close readings of specific filmic and literary texts, all chapters serve to tease out cultural and historical meanings in respect of human engagement with landscapes. Always mindful of national, cultural and topographical specificity, the book is structured around five core themes: Contested Histories of Place; Environmental Landscapes; Cityscapes; The Social Construction of Place; and Landscapes of Belonging.

New Approaches to Cinematic Space

Edited by Filipa Rosário, University of Lisbon, Portugal and Iván Villarrea Álvarez, Universidade de Santiago de Compostela, Spain

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

New Approaches to Cinematic Space aims to discuss the process of creation of cinematic spaces through moving images and the subsequent interpretation of their purpose and meaning. Throughout seventeen chapters, this edited collection will attempt to identify and interpret the formal strategies used by different filmmakers to depict real or imaginary places and turn them into abstract, conceptual spaces. The contributors to this volume will specifically focus on a series of systems of representation that go beyond the mere visual reproduction of a given location to construct a network of meanings that ultimately shapes our spatial worldview.

Mediatized Religion in Asia

Studies on Digital Media and Religion

Edited by Kerstin Radde-Antweiler, University of Bremen, Germany and Xenia Zeiler, University of Helsinki, Finland

Series: Routledge Research in Digital Media and Culture in Asia

This edited volume discusses mediatized religion in Asia, examining the intensity and variety of constructions and processes related to digital media and religion in Asia today. Individual chapters present case studies from various regions and religious traditions in Asia, critically discussing the data collected in light of current mediatization theories. By directing the study to the geographical, cultural and religious contexts specific to Asia, it also provides new material for the theoretical discussion of the pros and cons of the concept mediatization, among other things interrogating whether this concept is useful in non-'Western' contexts."

Reporting Humanitarian Disasters in a Social Media Age

Glenda Cooper, City, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

Defining images and accounts of humanitarian crises are now often created not by journalists but by ordinary citizens using Twitter, Facebook, YouTube, Instagram and Snapchat. But how has the use of this content – and the way it is spread by social media – altered the rituals around disaster reporting, the close if not symbiotic relationship between journalists and aid workers, and the kind of crises that are covered? Drawing on more than 100 in-depth interviews with journalists, aid agency press officers and ordinary people who created the words and pictures that framed these disasters, this book reveals the nature and consequences of reporting humanitarian disasters in the 21st century.

Screening Characters

Characterization in Film, Television, and Interactive Media

Edited by Johannes Riis, University of Copenhagen, Denmark and Aaron Taylor

Series: AFI Film Readers

The contributors to Screening Characters draw on archival material, interviews, philosophical enquiry, and conceptual analysis in order to give a robust and multifaceted account of characterization in moving image fictions. Areas of investigation include the importance of performer and stars, the societal contexts of types, the constraints of the medium, the role of a specific genre and the question of emotional and moral engagement. Dedicated to a pluralistic account of fictional beings across different representational forms, this volume offers essential new approaches to the study of character in interactive media, television and film.

Social Media Livestreaming

Design for Disruption?

Claudette Guzan Artwick

Series: Disruptions

This book addresses a host of emerging issues concerning social media livestreaming, exploring this technology as a disruption and its potential to shape journalism practice and influence society. Using international case studies, interviews with journalists, and survey research with citizens, this book explores major themes including livestreaming's implications for journalism practice and news content production; citizen activism and participation in democracy; ethical, legal, safety and privacy considerations; and the role of livestreaming in shaping public perception.

The Black Arts Movement and the Black Panther Party in American Visual Culture

Jo-Ann Morgan, Western Illinois University

Series: Routledge Research in Art and Race

This book examines a range of visual expressions of Black Power across American art and popular culture from 1965 through 1972. It begins with case studies of artist groups, including Spiral, OBAC and AfriCOBRA, who began questioning Western aesthetic traditions and created work that honored leaders, offered painted abstractions of proud families, and used symbolic references to Africa. By 1968 the concept was so well established that Oakland Museum mounted the exhibition "New Perspectives in Black Art." This fourth case study asks if Black Panther Party activities within the Oakland/Berkeley community impacted the artists' work.

Socially Engaged Art and the Neoliberal City

Cecile Sachs Olsen, Royal Holloway University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Urbanism and the City

This book explores alternative understandings of socially-engaged art projects in the age of neoliberal urbanism. The book adopts a practice-led approach to range of case studies from across Europe and North America, asking how artists reconcile the creation of critically-informed transformative art practice with the increasingly limited constraints placed on public art by the dominance of commercial funding and neoliberal frameworks. The author points to the transcendence of a neoliberal urban through alternative productions of space, drawing upon a Lefebvrian framework of spatial practice and 'lived space', using a structuralist method to challenge neoliberal structures.

The Culture of Ships and Maritime Narratives

Edited by Chryssanthi Papadopoulou

Series: British School at Athens - Modern Greek and Byzantine Studies

This maritime anthropology volume presents a cosmology of ships. In order for this cosmology to be written, some of the volume's contributors have travelled on ships and interviewed mariners, fishermen, boat-builders and boat-dwellers; others have traced the courses of ships in poems, films, philosophical texts, and collective myths of genealogy and heritage. Overall the volume shows where ships can go, and how they are perceived and experienced by those living and travelling in them, watching and waiting for them, dreaming and writing about them, and, finally, what literal and metaphorical crews man them.

Superhero Bodies

Identity, Materiality, Transformation

Edited by Wendy Haslem, University of Melbourne, Australia, Elizabeth MacFarlane, University of Melbourne, Australia and Sarah Richardson, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Advances in Comics Studies

Throughout the history of the genre, the superhero has been characterized primarily by physical transformation and physical difference. This volume attends to the physicality of superheroes: the transformative bodies of superheroes, the superhero's position in urban and natural spaces, the dialectic between the superhero's physical and metaphysical self, and the superhero body's relationship with violence. It examines how ideologies of race, gender and disability are signified or destabilized in the physicality of the superhero and presents an exploration of superheroes across multiple media forms including comics, film, television, literature and the graphic novel.

The Nasty Woman and The Neo Femme Fatale in Contemporary Cinema

Agnieszka Piotrowska, University of Bedfordshire, UK

Series: Routledge Focus on Feminism and Film

Taken from the insult thrown at Hilary Clinton during the 2016 Presidential election debates, this book puts forward a theoretical concept of the "Nasty woman" as a contemporary embodiment of the femme fatale of film noir, a woman who offers a way out of the rigid patriarchal systems of power and autonomy. Through a range of contemporary films, predominantly directed by women, including Zero Dark Thirty, Red Road and Stories We Tell, the book examines female protagonists and their navigation of new and alternative ways to build allegiances with men, without buying into patriarchal expectations and structures. This is an unashamedly feminist celebration of female filmmaking and authorship.

The Re-Emergence of Virtual Reality

Leighton Evans, University of Brighton, UK

Series: Routledge Focus on Digital Culture

In this short book, Evans interrogates the implications of VR's re-emergence into the media mainstream, critiquing the notion of a VR revolution by analysing the development and ownership of VR companies while also exploring the possibilities of immersion in VR and the importance of immersion in the interest and ownership of VR enterprises. He assesses how the ideologies and desires of both computer programmers and major Silicon Valley industries may influence how VR worlds are conceived and experienced by users while also exploring the mechanisms that create the immersive experience that underpins interest in the medium.

The Rise of NonProfit Investigative Journalism in the United States

Bill Birnbauer, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

As battered news media struggled to survive in the United States, investigative reporting start-ups funded by foundations, billionaires and everyday citizens sprang up at the state and national level. This book examines the growth, impact and sustainability of not-for-profit investigative reporting and its impact on US democracy. It addresses key questions of the sustainability of foundation funding, the agendas of foundations, and the independence of philanthropically funded journalism.

The Routledge Companion to the Cultural Industries

Edited by Kate Oakley, University of Leeds, UK and Justin O'Connor, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Media and Cultural Studies Companions

The Routledge Companion to the Cultural Industries takes a distinct and critical 'cultural industries' approach to the subject of mass cultural production, focusing on the production and consumption of goods and services whose economic value are drawn primarily from their cultural or symbolic value.

Individual essays focus on questions of industry and of policy from a perspective of cultural value, as well as economic growth. The companion aims to reassert the role of cultural industries as precisely that; cultural industries with a distinct relation to wider areas of cultural and other public policy and to broader social and economic change.

The Routledge Handbook of Positive Communication

Edited by José Antonio Muñoz Velázquez, Loyola Andalucía University, Spain and Cristina Pulido, University of Barcelona, Spain

Series: Routledge Handbooks in Communication Studies

The Routledge Handbook of Positive Communication forms a comprehensive reference point for cross-disciplinary approaches to understanding the central role of communication in the construction of hedonic and eudemonic happiness, or subjective and psychological well-being. Including contributions from internationally recognized authors in their respective fields, this reference uses as its focus five main scenarios where communication affects the life of individuals: mass and digital media, advertising and marketing communication, external and internal communication in companies and organizations, communication in education, and communication in daily life interactions.

Transformation of Chinese Newspaper Companies

Management, Production and Administration

Miao Huang, Post-doctor Researcher, the Journalism School of Renmin University of China, Beijing

Series: Chinese Perspectives on Journalism and Communication

This book focuses on the transformation of Chinese newspaper companies in aspects of managerial strategies, newsroom practices and interactions with national policies. The comparative case study of two publishers comprises empirical evidence from editors, editor-in-chiefs, commercial staff, managers, technicians and scholarly experts. Locating in the intersection of media management, journalism and media policy, its analytical devices include differing but related theories. With the primary data and integrated theoretical frameworks, the primary argue is that the transformation is oriented to the Internet market, which is a consensus of newspaper practitioners and government administrators.

Typography and Motion Graphics: The 'Reading-Image'

Michael Betancourt, Savannah College of Art and Design, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Media Theory and Practice

In his latest book, Michael Betancourt explores the nature and role of typography in motion graphics as a way to consider its distinction from static design, using the concept of the 'reading-image' to model the ways that motion typography dramatizes the process of reading and audience recognition of language on-screen. Moving beyond title sequences, Betancourt also analyzes moving or kinetic typography in logo designs, commercials, film trailers, and information graphics, offering a striking theoretical model for understanding typography in media.

Working Toward Racial Equity in First-Year Composition

Six Perspectives

Edited by Renee DeLong, Taiyon Coleman, Kathleen Sheerin DeVore, Shannon Gibney, Michael Kuhne and Valerie Déus

Series: Routledge Research in Higher Education

Written from a wide range of subject and identity positions, this volume explores issues that arise among students inside historically white-dominant classrooms, among faculty as curriculum and hiring decisions are made, and among colleagues when they attempt to engage the wider institution in equity work. Aiming to significantly change how urban Community College writing instruction is delivered in this country, the book operates on the principle that equity is essential to successful writing pedagogy, curricular development, and student success.

Unplugging Popular Culture

Reconsidering Analog Technology, Materiality, and the "Digital Native"

K. Shannon Howard, Auburn University Montgomery, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

This book showcases youth and young adult characters from film and television who defy the stereotype of the "digital native" or unquestioning devotee to technology. Unplugged tools, or non-digital tools, do not necessitate a ban on technology or a refusal to acknowledge its affordances, but work instead to highlight the ability of fictional characters to move from high tech settings to low tech ones. By repurposing everyday materials, characters model the process of reusing and upcycling existing materials in innovative ways. In studying examples such as Pitch Perfect, Stranger Things, and Get Out, the book aims to make theories surrounding materiality apparent within popular culture.

Visualizing the Body in Art, Anatomy, and Medicine since 1800

Models and Modeling

Edited by Andrew Graciano, University of South Carolina

Series: Science and the Arts since 1750

This book expands the art historical perspective on art's connection to anatomy and medicine, bringing together in one text several case studies from various methodological perspectives. The contributors focus on the common visual and bodily nature of (figural) art, anatomy, and medicine—around the central concept of modelling (posing, exemplifying and fabricating). Topics covered include the role of anatomical study in artistic training, the importance of art and visual literacy in anatomical/medical training and in the dissemination (via models) of medical knowledge/information, and artistic representations of the medical body in the contexts of public health and propaganda.

Art, Race, and Fantastic Color Change in the Victorian Novel

Jessica Durgan

Series: Among the Victorians and Modernists

As a study of color in the Victorian novel, this volume analyzes a peculiar literary phenomenon in which Victorian authors who were also trained as artists dream up fantastically colored characters for their fiction. These strange and eccentric characters include the purple madwoman Bertha Mason in Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre (1847), and the little yellow girls of Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Yellow Face" (1893) and Frances Hodgson Burnett's The Secret Garden (1911). These artist-authors draw on color's traditional association with constructions of otherness to consider questions of identity and difference through the imaginative possibilities of color.

Before Crusoe

Defoe, Voice, and the Ministry

Penny Pritchard

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Literature

Offering new perspective on the 1719 literary watershed that was Robinson Crusoe, this work argues that Defoe established a new form of moral authority through the spectrum of 'voices' which articulate his earlier works. Defoe's profoundly ambivalent relationship with his London-based nonconformity, as well as the changing popular status of ministerial authority in the period, enabled his crafting of myriad anonymized personae across a diverse canon. This volume offers alternative readings of Robinson Crusoe and later novels, foregrounding Defoe's reconfiguration of moral and religious authority.

Before Emotion: The Language of Feeling, 400-1800

Edited by JUANITA RUYs, Michael Champion and Kirk Essary

Series: Routledge Studies in Medieval Literature and Culture

Before Emotion: The Language of Feeling, 400-1800 advances current interdisciplinary research in the history of emotions through in-depth studies of the European language of emotion from late antiquity to the modern period. Focusing specifically on the premodern cognates of 'affect' or 'affection', an international team of scholars explores the cultural and intellectual contexts in which emotion was discussed before the term 'emotion' itself came into widespread use. By tracing the history of key terms and concepts associated with what we identify as 'emotions' today, the volume offers a first-time critical foundation for understanding pre- and early modern emotions discourse.

California and the Melancholic American Identity in Joan Didion's Novels

Exiled from Eden

Katarzyna Nowak McNeice

Series: Literary Criticism and Cultural Theory

This book focuses on the concept of Californian identity in the fiction of Joan Didion. Curiously enough, Didion presents Californian history as a history of white settlement, disregarding whole chapters of the history of the region in which the Californios and Native Americans, among other groups, played a crucial role: it is this reticence that the monograph sees as the main problem of Didion's fiction and presents it as the silent center of gravity in Didion's oeuvre. The monograph proposes to see the melancholy expressed by Didion's fiction organized into four losses: of Nature, History, Ethics, and Language; around which the main analytical chapters are constructed.

Caring for Community

Towards a New Ethics of Responsibility in Contemporary Postcolonial Novels

Marijke Denger

Series: Routledge Research in Postcolonial Literatures

Caring for Community: Towards a New Ethics of Responsibility in Contemporary Postcolonial Novels focuses on four highly acclaimed publications in order to argue for a new understanding of community and its ethical framework in recent literary texts. Overall, this book establishes that the novels' protagonists, by investing in an ethics of responsibility that does not require reciprocity, acquire the agency to envisage new forms of community. By reflecting on the nature and effect of this agency and its representation in contemporary literary texts, the book also considers the role of postcolonial studies in addressing highly topical questions regarding our co-existence with others.

Composing Modernist Connections in China and Europe

Chunjie Zhang

Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Literature

Investigating global modernisms, a period of great transformations in life, style, and historical consciousness, crisis in values and ethics, this book emphasizes "connecting moments" in respect to cultural, aesthetic, and media community as well as visions of the world. Connecting Moments in Chinese and European Modernisms recognizes "connection" as a quintessential quality of global modernisms and provides examples from Chinese and European contexts. Not being confined by reception studies, this book features new approaches that endeavor to place Chinese and European modernisms on equal footing.

Constructing Coherence in the British Short Story Cycle

Edited by Patrick Gill and Florian Kläger, University of Münster, Germany

Series: Literary Criticism and Cultural Theory

The first major collection of essays on the contemporary British short story cycle, this volume offers in-depth explorations of the genre by comparing its strategies for creating coherence with those of the novel and the short story collection, inquiring after the ties that bind individual short stories into a cycle. Unique in its combination of a focus on the literary traditions, politics and markets of the UK with a thorough examination of the genre's manifold formal and thematic potentials, the volume explores what is at the heart of the short story cycle as a literary form: the constant negotiation between unity and separateness, collective and individual, of coherence and autonomy.

Contemporary Narratives of Dementia

Ethics, Ageing, Politics

Sarah Falcus, University of Huddersfield, UK and Katsura Sako, Keio University, Japan

Series: Routledge Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Literature

This book examines narratives of dementia in contemporary literary texts, studying what is now a pressing issue with deep political, economic, and social implications for many ageing societies. As part of the increasing visibility of dementia in social and cultural life, these narratives pose ethical, aesthetic, and political questions about subjectivity, agency, and care that help us to interrogate the cultural discourse of dementia. Contemporary Narratives of Dementia is a seminal book that offers a sustained examination of a wide range of literary narratives, from auto/biographies and detective fiction, to children's books and comic books.

Cultural Evolution and its Discontents

Cognitive Overload, Parasitic Cultures, and the Humanistic Cure

Robert Watson

Series: Literary Criticism and Cultural Theory

People worry that computers, robots, interstellar aliens, or Satan himself – brilliant, stealthy, ruthless creatures – may seize control of our world and destroy what's uniquely valuable about the human race. Cultural Evolution and its Discontents shows that our cultural systems – especially those whose last names are "ism" – are already doing that, and doing it so adeptly that we seldom even notice. Like other parasites, they've blindly evolved to exploit us for their own survival. Creative arts and humanistic scholarship are our best tools for diagnosis and cure. Anyone who has wondered how our species can be so brilliant and so stupid at the same time may find an answer here.

Early Modern English Marginalia

Edited by Katherine Acheson, University of Waterloo

Series: Material Readings in Early Modern Culture

Marginalia in early modern and medieval texts – printed, handwritten, drawn, scratched, colored, and pasted in – offer a crazy quilt composed of fragments of how people, as individuals and in groups, interacted with books and manuscripts over often lengthy periods of time. This volume builds on earlier scholarship that established marginalia as intellectual method and raises broad historical, cultural, and theoretical questions about the relationship between animal parts and human society, the construction of authorship, the strange, marvelous, metamorphic thing we call the book, and the equally multiplicities, and inscrutable known as the reader.

Errors and Reconciliations

Marriage in the Plays and Novels of Henry Fielding

Anaclara Castro-Santana

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Literature

Henry Fielding is most well-known for his monumental novel Tom Jones. Though not necessarily common knowledge, Henry Fielding started his literary career as a dramatist and eventually transitioned to writing novels. Though vastly different in their approach and subject, there is a common thread in Fielding's work that spanned his career: marriage. Errors and Reconciliations: Marriage in the Plays and Novels of Henry Fielding explores this theme, focusing on Fielding's fascination with matrimony and the ever-present paradoxical nature of marriage in the first half of the eighteenth-century, as a state easily attained but nearly impossible to escape.

From Medievalism to Early-Modernism

Adapting the English Past

Edited by Marina Gerzic and Aidan Norrie

Series: Routledge Studies in Medieval Literature and Culture

From Medievalism to Early-Modernism: Adapting the English Past is a collection of essays that both analyses the historical and cultural medieval and early modern past, and engages with the medievalism and early-modernism—a new term introduced in this collection—present in contemporary popular culture. By focusing on often overlooked uses of the past in contemporary culture, the contributors illustrate how cinematic, televisual, artistic, and literary depictions of the historical and cultural past not only re-purpose the past in varying ways, but also build on a history of adaptations that audiences have come to know and expect.

Extreme States

The Evolution of American Transgressive Fiction 1960-2000

Coco D'Hont

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Literature

Transgressive fiction explores the crossing of boundaries. Because of its extreme content and style, it is often considered controversial. However, transgressive fiction is not just shocking or disruptive. It is a continuation of an American tradition of creating culture through the crossing of moral, geographical and social boundaries. Extreme States traces the evolution of American transgressive fiction from the 1960s to 2000, exploring how transgressive fiction reflects, exaggerates and critically interrogates how central American ideologies are perpetually (re)constructed in its extra-textual context.

George Eliot's Moral Aesthetic

Compelling Contradictions

Constance Fulmer

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

George Eliot's serious readers have been intrigued by the fact that she declared that she had lost her faith in God and had renounced her hope for a traditional Christian heaven, yet continued to preach her own version of morality in everything she wrote. This volume aims to investigate Eliot's ethical and artistic principles by defining her moral aesthetic as it relates to her self-concept and explores Eliot's narrative decisions and the decisions made by her characters. Dr. Fulmer illuminates the paradoxes and contradictions in George Eliot's life and in her philosophy by focusing on Eliot's use of animals, mirrors, windows, and other tangible images in her poetry as well as her novels.

Fortification and Its Discontents from Shakespeare to Milton

Trouble in the Walled City

Adam N. McKeown

Series: Routledge Studies in Renaissance Literature and Culture

Fortification and Its Discontents from Shakespeare to Milton gives new coherence to the literature of the early modern Atlantic world by placing it in the context of radical changes to urban space following the Italian War of 1494-1498. The new walled city that emerged in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries on both sides of the Atlantic provided an outlet for a wide range of humanistic fascinations with urban design, composition, and community organization, but it also promoted centrality of control and subordinated the human environment to military functionality.

Henry James' Travel

Fiction and Non-Fiction

Edited by Mirosława Buchholtz

Each chapter of Henry James' Travel addresses a different selection of James' work and offers a different approach towards the ideas that are still with us today: history reflected in art and architecture, the tourist gaze, the museum culture, transnationalism and the return home. As a whole, the book encompasses both early and late fiction and non-fiction by Henry James, giving the reader a sense of how his idea of travel evolved over several decades of his creative activity and shows how thin the line between fiction and non-fiction travel writing really is.

Medieval Gossips and the Art of Listening

Avid Ears

Christine Neufeld

Series: Routledge Studies in Medieval Literature and Culture

Arguing that women's "silencing" is in part the result of women's voices being treated as the white noise of history, Medieval Gossips and the Art of Listening: Avid Ears explores the historical representation of female voices as actual acoustic phenomena. The volume focuses on English antifeminist satire during the linguistically dynamic late Middle Ages to argue that the resonant gossips' circle offers a cultural poetics of listening for those attentive to medieval auditory regimes. As the first monograph to use sound studies to explore how gender registers in the medieval soundscape, Avid Ears attunes critics to how and what we hear when women speak in literature.

Philanthropy and Early Twentieth-Century Literature

Milena Radeva-Costello

Series: Among the Victorians and Modernists

Philanthropy and Early Twentieth-Century Literature explores the relationship between British literature and philanthropy at the end of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. This book considers how writers in the modernist period drew on the liberal welfare reforms, the adoption of scientific methods in charity, the Cambridge tradition of public service, the Irish nationalist movement, and the influence of the Victorian woman philanthropist in order to advocate for an individualist art, revolutionize their aesthetics, redefine ideals of hospitality and beneficence, and affirm the national, social, and economic liberation of the modern subject.

Narrative Machine

The Naturalist, Modernist, and Postmodernist Novel

Zena Meadowson

Series: Narrative Theory and Culture

Narrative Machine: the Naturalist, Modernist, and Postmodernist Novel advances a new history of the novel, identifying a crucial link between narrative innovation and the historical process of mechanization. In the late nineteenth century, the novel grapples with a new and increasingly acute problem: In its attempt to represent the colossal power of modern machinery—the steam-driven machines of the Industrial Revolution, the electrical machines of the modern city, and the atomic and digital machines developed after the Second World War—it encounters the limitations of traditional representative strategies.

Routledge Companion to Shen Congwen

Edited by Gang Zhou, Jeffrey C Kinkley and Sihe Chen

Series: Chinese Literature Series from a Global Perspective

This volume is about studies of Shen Congwen (1902-1988), one of the most important writers in modern China, but more importantly, it is about how Shen Congwen has been received in and beyond Mainland China. By presenting the best literary criticism on Shen Congwen in Mainland China over the past eighty years, and views of how Shen Congwen has been understood, interpreted, and appreciated in Japan, the US, France, and other European countries, the editors propose a new way to approach the topics of canonic writers, modern Chinese literature, and world literature.

On Declaring Love

Eighteenth-Century Literature and Jane Austen

Fred Parker

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Literature

This book explores the act of declaring love in works of literature written between the middle of the eighteenth century and the death of Jane Austen - and uncovers the uncertain boundaries of the self in the force-field of courtship. This was a period highly sensitive to the propriety and artificiality of public forms, and hence peculiarly alive to problems around the idea of saying what you feel. Through this historical lens the author considers the ways in which we may become entangled with one another through language, the limits to our operation as independent individuals, and whether in love you can only feel what you can tell.

Seven Lectures on Wang Guowei's Renjian Cihua

Florence Chia-Ying Yeh, Professor, School of Literature, Nankai University, China

Series: China Perspectives

Renjian Cihua is a masterpiece in Chinese literary criticism written by Wang Guowei, a famous scholar in the study of Chinese classics. This book contains two parts. The first part is the content of the lectures given by the author Florence Chia-ying Yeh, who is a Chinese-born Canadian poet and scholar of classical Chinese poetry. With accessible, graceful and refined language, the author explains the theory on "artistic conceptions" in Renjian Cihua, the difference between Shi and Ci in aesthetic traits, and the works of celebrated Ci poets in various dynasties. The second part is the translation of Renjian Cihua.

The Evangelical Party and Samuel Taylor Coleridge's Return to the Church of England

Christopher W Corbin

Series: Routledge Studies in Romanticism

When Samuel Taylor Coleridge rejected the Unitarianism of his youth and returned to the Church of England, he did so while accepting a general Christian orthodoxy. When placed in a chronological context, Coleridge's form of Christian orthodoxy developed in conversation with Anglican Evangelicals, which likely helped facilitate his return to the Church of England. Corbin not only demonstrates the similarities between Coleridge's relationship to a form of evangelicalism with which most people have little familiarity, but also offers greater insight into the complexities and tensions of religious identity in late eighteenth and early nineteenth century Britain as a whole.

The Fairy Tale World

Edited by Andrew Teverson, Kingston University, UK

Series: Routledge Worlds

Recent critical attention has transformed the fairy tale genre, away from the romantic notion of timeless tales of good and evil, to culturally astute narratives reflecting the historical and material circumstances of the societies in which they are produced. The 40 new essays in this volume will offer a comprehensive picture of the 'critical turn' in fairy tale studies whilst exploring a range of newly emerging directions in fairy tale criticism. Taking a very global perspective, The Fairy Tale World will broaden the international, cultural and critical scope of fairy tale studies, looking at issues such as colonialism, feminism, disability, sexuality, the environment and class.

The Philosophical Mysticism of Gerard Manley Hopkins

Aakanksha Virkar Yates

Series: The Nineteenth Century Series

Through the lens of Hopkins's 'masterwork', The Philosophical Mysticism of Gerard Manley Hopkins readdresses Hopkins's frequently overlooked mysticism as an interior narrative within his corpus. Drawing on a range of religious, literary and visual traditions from Augustine's Confessions to the seventeenth-century spiritual emblem, this book demonstrates the ways in which the Wreck deliberately constructs and conceals a mystical and contemplative narrative. On the centenary of the publication of Hopkins's poems, this book places the writer firmly within a mystical tradition, necessitating a fundamental reconsideration of the legacy of this major Victorian poet.

The Radical Ecology of the Shelleys

Eros and Environment

Colin Carman

Series: Routledge Studies in World Literatures and the Environment

The Radical Ecology of the Shelleys: Eros and Environment is the first full-length study to explore a radically queer ecology at work in writings by Percy Bysshe Shelley and Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley as their discussions of nature and the natural consistently link ecology and erotic practice. The issues raised by Eros and Environment are fundamental not only to literary and queer history but to all humanistic studies. They render the study of nature from a queer perspective a matter of intense interest to scholars in numerous disciplines ranging from ecocriticism and the natural sciences, including climate studies, to feminist criticism and sexuality studies.

We Find Ourselves in Other People's Stories

On Narrative Collapse and a Lifetime Search for Story

Amy E. Robillard, Illinois State University, USA

We Find Ourselves in Other People's Stories: On Narrative Collapse and a Lifetime Search for Story is a collection of five essays that dissolves the boundary between personal writing and academic writing, a longstanding binary construct in the discipline of composition and writing studies, in order to examine the rhetorical effects of narrative collapse on the stories we tell about ourselves and others. Taken together, the essays theorize the relationships between language and violence, between narrative and dementia, between genre and certainty, and between writing and life.

The Stability of Laughter

The Problem of Joy in Modernist Literature

James Nikopoulos

Series: Routledge Studies in Twentieth-Century Literature

A "sad and corrupt" age, a period of "crisis" and "upheaval"—what T.S. Eliot famously summed up as "the panorama of futility and anarchy which is contemporary history." Modernism has always been characterized by its self-conscious sense of suffering. Why, then, was it so obsessed with laughter? From Baudelaire, Nietzsche, Bergson and Freud to Pirandello, Beckett, Hughes, Barnes, and Joyce, no moment in cultural history has written about laughter this much. James Nikopoulos investigates modernity's paradoxical relationship with mirth and our ongoing relationship with laughter.

Women's Emancipation Writing at the Fin de Siècle

Edited by Elena V. Shabliy, Dmitry Kurochkin and O'Donnell Karen

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth Century Literature

Many novelists in various national literatures touched upon the theme of an emancipated woman in the long nineteenth century and at the fin de siècle. Philosophers, poets, writers, and journalists were concerned with this problem and began popularizing wholeheartedly the so-called "burning" questions. The new femininity was represented not only in the Christian context; many other traditions and cultures opened the discussion about the women's lot. This volume analyzes women's voices from different parts of the world—Turkey, England, the U.S., Italy, Russia, Spain, and others.

Wordsworth and Evolution in Victorian Literature

Entangled Influence

Trenton B. Olsen

Series: The Nineteenth Century Series

The influences of William Wordsworth's writing and evolutionary theory—the nineteenth century's two defining visions of nature—conflicted in the Victorian period. For Victorians, Wordsworthian nature was a caring source of inspiration and moral guidance, signaling humanity's divine origins and potential. Darwin's nature, by contrast, appeared as an indifferent and amoral reminder of an evolutionary past that demanded participation in a brutal struggle for existence. Victorian authors like Matthew Arnold, George Eliot, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Thomas Hardy grappled with these competing representations in their work.

Zöopedagogies

Creatures as Teachers in Middle English Romance

Bonnie J. Erwin

Series: Routledge Studies in Medieval Literature and Culture

The human protagonists of medieval romance are works in progress. They are learners, taught by an unexpected set of teachers: non-human animals including horses, raptors, lions, and other species. These "creature teachers" show humans how to be more perfectly human—how to love, fight, survive, and live according to medieval culture's highest ideals. Zöopedagogies is the first monograph to explore the pedagogical function of animals in medieval romance, a genre whose surreal elements enable animal characters to behave in ways inspired by, but not limited to their real-world actions.

English Vocabulary Today

Into the 21st Century

Barry J. Blake

English Vocabulary Today: Into the 21st Century offers an innovative perspective on the ways in which contemporary English language vocabulary continues to adapt and grow in light of emerging technologies and ideas. The book features discussions of core topics in English language studies, including lexical change, semantic change, and word-formation, in addition to subjects less frequently covered in the literature, such as the mental lexicon and inclusive language. Chapter discussions are enhanced by dynamic examples from a wide range of varieties of English, including American, British, Australian, New Zealand, Canadian, South African, and South Asian.

Populist Discourse

Critical Approaches to Contemporary Politics

Edited by Encarnación Hidalgo Tenorio, Miguel-Angel Benitez-Castro and Francesca De Cesare

Populist Discourse brings together experts from both linguistics and political science to analyze the language of populist leaders and the media representation on populism in different temporal, geographical and ideological contexts, including Nazi Germany, Sweden, the Netherlands, Spain, Italy, Portugal, Austria, Greece, the UK, the US and South America. With eighteen contributions split into four sections, Populist Discourse covers a variety of approaches such as corpus-based discourse analysis, critical discourse analysis, as well as political perspectives.

A Systemic Functional Grammar of English

A Simple Introduction

David Banks, Université de Bretagne Occidentale, France

Providing a simple – but not simplistic – introduction to the systemic functional grammar of English, this book serves as a launching pad for the beginning student and a review for the more seasoned linguist. With an introduction to systemic functional grammar (SFG) through lexicogrammar and the concept of rankshift, this book is the first introduction to SFG (including Appraisal) with examples exclusively sourced from twenty-first century texts. Written for those learning English and English linguistics as a foreign language, this serves as an easy-to-read introduction or refresher course for systemic functional linguistics.

Introducing English Grammar

Kersti Borjars, University of Manchester, UK and Kate Burridge, Monash University, Australia

Introducing English Grammar introduces readers to the methodology and terminology needed to analyse English sentences. The approach taken is in line with current research in grammar, a particular advantage for students who may go on to study syntax in more depth. All the examples and exercises use real language taken from newspaper articles, non-standard dialects and include excerpts from studies of patients with language difficulties. Written for readers with no previous experience of grammatical analysis, this book is suited to anyone beginning a study of linguistics, English language or speech pathology.

Second Language Learning Theories

Fourth Edition

Rosamond Mitchell, University of Southampton, UK, Florence Myles, University of Essex, UK and Emma Marsden, University of York, UK

Written by experts working in different SLA specialisms, this fourth edition is a unified introduction to the main theories of second language acquisition from multiple perspectives, updated to reflect the latest developments in SLA research. Chapters examine how each theory views language, the learner, and the acquisition process, supplemented by key studies and examples from a variety of languages. Key features to this edition include accounts of developments in cognitive approaches to L2 learning, the implications of advances in generative linguistics, and the "social turn" in L2 research, with re-worked chapters on functional, sociocultural and sociolinguistic perspectives.

Shakespeare's Language

Perspectives Past and Present

Keith Johnson

This project offers an overview of the rich and dynamic history of the reception and study of Shakespeare's language from his death right up to the present. The historical approach provides a comprehensive overview, plotting the attitudes towards Shakespeare's language, as well as a history of its study. This approach reveals how different cultural, literary and linguistic climates have moulded these attitudes and reflects changing linguistic climates. Shakespeare's Language is therefore not only an essential guide to the language of Shakespeare, but offers crucial insights to broader approaches to language as a whole.

Sign Languages

Structures and Contexts

Joseph C. Hill, Diane C. Lillo-Martin, University of Connecticut, USA and Sandra K. Wood, McDaniel College, USA

Series: Routledge Guides to Linguistics

This book provides an introduction to sign languages for students studying this topic for the first time with little or no background in linguistics. This book addresses the key questions of: Who uses sign languages? How do sign languages around the world differ from each other and from spoken languages? How are natural sign languages different from sign systems? It also explores sign languages within three key areas that includes grammar, sociolinguistics and developmental contexts. Providing an engaging and accessible introduction and supported by online resources featuring videos, this book is essential reading for those studying modules on sign languages.

Modern European Poet-Translators

Jacob S. D. Blakesley, University of Leeds, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Translation and Interpreting Studies

This volume provides an in-depth comparative study of translation practices and the role of the poet-translator across different countries. Drawing on a corpus comprised of data from national library catalogues and Worldcat, the book examines translation practices of English-language, French-language, and Italian-language poet-translators through the lens of a broad sociological approach. Taken together, the volume advocates for the need to study translation data against broader aesthetic, historical, and political trends and will be of particular interest to students and scholars in translation studies and comparative

Agency in Language Policy and Planning:

Critical Inquiries

Edited by Jeremie Bouchard and Gregory Paul Glasgow
Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Multilingualism

This collection brings together theory and ethnographic research from a range of national contexts to offer unique insights into the nature of agency in language policy and planning. Situated within a broader sociological framework, the book explores agentive processes at work in case studies from around the world, engaging in discussions of such key themes as language and identity, language ideologies, linguistic diversity in education, and language revitalization. Each chapter examines the ways in which decisions made at both the local and national level impact language use and in turn, the dynamic relationship between language use, policy, and practice in these contexts.

Discourses of (De)Legitimization

Participatory Culture in Digital Contexts

Edited by Andrew S. Ross and Damian J. Rivers
Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Discourse

This volume provides a comprehensive analysis of the ways in which digital communication facilitate and inform discourses of legitimization and delegitimization in contemporary participatory cultures. The book draws on theoretical traditions from critical discourse analysis to allow for a greater critical engagement of the ways in which values are either justified or criticized on social media platforms across a variety of social milieus, including the personal, political, religious, corporate, and commercial. The volume highlights data from across ten national contexts and a range of online platforms to demonstrate how these discursive practices manifest themselves differently.

Intensification and Modal Necessity in Mandarin Chinese

Jiun-Shiung Wu

Series: Routledge Studies in Chinese Linguistics

This book addresses intensification and modal necessity in Mandarin Chinese. Intensification is used in this book to describe the speaker's emphasis on a proposition, because, by emphasizing on a proposition, the speaker intensifies the degree of his/her confidence and affirmativeness toward the truth of a proposition, cf. the distinction between 'weaker' and 'stronger'. Modal necessity discussed in this book refers either to the speaker's certainty regarding the truth of an inference, judgment or stipulation, that is, epistemic necessity or to the speaker's certainty concerning the obligatoriness of a proposition, based on rules or regulations, i.e., deontic necessity.

Lexical Ontological Semantics

Guoxiang Wu, Associate Professor, College of Foreign Languages of Huaqiao University, Fujian, China. and Yulin Yuan, Professor, Department of Chinese Language and Literature, Peking University, China

Series: Routledge Studies in Chinese Linguistics

Lexical Ontological Semantics (LOS) introduces ontological methods into lexical semantic studies to give impetus to various fields of endeavours which envision and model the semantic network of a language. LOS provides a cognition-based computation-oriented framework in which nouns and predicates are described in terms of their semantic knowledge, and models the mechanism in which the noun system is coupled with the predicate system. It expands the scope of lexical semantics, updates methodologies to semantic representation, guides the construction of semantic resources for natural language processing, and develops new theories for human-machine interactions and communications.

News Framing through English-Chinese translation

A comparative study of Chinese and English media discourse

Nancy Xiuzhi Liu

Series: Routledge Studies in Chinese Discourse Analysis

News Framing through English-Chinese Translation provides a useful tool to depict how Chinese news translation can be examined in the era of globalization. The author has integrated framing theory in journalism studies with translation studies and developed a new theoretical model/framework named Transframing. This interdisciplinary model is pioneering and will make theoretical and conceptual contributions to translation studies. This book aims to reveal ideological, sociocultural and linguistic factors creating media discourse by examining Chinese media discourse, in comparison to its counterpart in English.

Pictorial Framing in Moral Politics

A Corpus-Based Experimental Study

Ahmed Abdel-Raheem

Series: Routledge Studies in Multimodality

Drawing on perspectives from frame semantics, blending theory, relevance theory, and pragmatics, the volume establishes a model of "pictorial framing", arguing that subtle alterations in the visual presentation of issues around judgment and choice in such texts impact perception, and applies this framework to a range of case studies from Egyptian, British, and American cartoons and illustrations. The book demonstrates the affordances of applying this framework in enhancing our understanding of both the nature of word-image relations and issues of representation in the op-ed genre, but also in other forms of media more generally.

Prosodic Syntax in Chinese

Theory and Facts

Feng Shengli, Professor of Chinese linguistics at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

Series: Chinese Linguistics

This book has shown that prosody has played a crucial role in triggering the many changes in the diachronic development of Chinese. The book has investigated the existence of SOV structures in Early Archaic Chinese, a SVO language, and then demonstrated the role of VO prosody in causing the disappearance of the remnant structures after Han Dynasty. It has also surveyed the historical evidence for analyses of bei passives and Ba-constructions, and then offered a prosodic analysis on the origin of these two sentence patterns in Chinese. It is claimed that prosody can be an important factor in triggering, balancing and finally terminating changes in the syntactic evolution of Chinese.

Prosodic Syntax in Chinese

History and Changes

Feng Shengli, Professor of Chinese linguistics at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

Series: Chinese Linguistics

The author has first introduced the relevant theories and concepts of Metrical Phonology, Prosodic Phonology and Formal Syntax and formulated the Government-based Nuclear Stress Rule in Chinese which can explain how and why Mandarin Chinese sentences are structured in a particular way. It is proposed that prosody can not only blocks the legitimate syntactic structures but also activates the potential syntactic operations. The former can be seen from the ungrammatical sentences that are caused by the inoperable NSR in these structures while the latter can be seen from sentences that are derived from syntactic movements which, however, are operable only when being motivated by prosody.

The Reflexivity of Language and Linguistic Inquiry

Integrational Linguistics in Practice

Dorthe Duncker, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

Series: Routledge Advances in Communication and Linguistic Theory

In this book, the important role of linguistic reflexivity to our everyday communicational practices and to the study of language is explored in theory and practice. Drawing on extensive materials from ten years of continuous written interaction on the public web, this original study shows how linguistic reflexivity dynamically enables the communicating participants to organize and make their language while they are busy solving all sorts of daily communicational tasks.

The Routledge Handbook of Second Language Acquisition and Pragmatics

Edited by Naoko Taguchi

Series: The Routledge Handbooks in Second Language Acquisition

The Routledge Handbook of Second Language Acquisition and Pragmatics is a critical survey of L2 pragmatics, collecting 32 chapters that highlight the field's key theories, pedagogies, and research findings. Demonstrating the ways in which pragmatics can shed light on L2 development, the volume is divided into six parts – constructs and units of analysis; theoretical, methodological, and pedagogical approaches; contexts and individuals in pragmatics learning; and L2 pragmatics in the global world – which reflect the field's evolution. This collection is an essential resource for those with an interest in second language acquisition, pragmatics, and applied linguistics.

Time Series Analysis of Discourse

Method and Case Studies

Dennis Tay

Series: Routledge Studies in Linguistics

This volume serves as a comprehensive introduction to Time Series Analysis (TSA) to demonstrate its potential to complement qualitative approaches in discourse analysis research. The book discusses how time has previously been conceptualized in the literature, then segues into a discussion of how TSA is applied in other contexts in which observed values are expected to be dependent on earlier values, such as stock markets and sales figures, and introduces a range of discourse-specific contexts to show how the technique might be extended to analyze trends or shed further light on relevant themes in discourse over time.

Topicalization in Asian Englishes

Forms, Functions and Frequencies of a Fronting Construction

Edited by Sven Leuckert, Technical University of Dresden, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in World Englishes

This book offers the first comprehensive analysis of topicalization in Asian second-language varieties of English and provides an in-depth analysis of the forms, functions, and frequencies of topicalization in four Asian Englishes. Topicalization has been found to occur frequently in the English spoken by many Asians, but the possible reasons for this have never been scrutinized. This book closes this gap by taking into account the structures of the major contact languages, the roles of second-language acquisition and politeness as well as other factors in order to explain why topicalization is highly frequent in some varieties and much less frequent in others.

The Arabic/English Translator as Photographer

A Linguistic Account

Ali Almanna, University of Nizwa, the Sultanate of Oman. and Khaled Al-Shehri

By choosing to use different linguistic approaches as a theoretical basis of their study of translation as a process of picture-taking this offers readers an original view of the translator's work. It provides an accessible introduction to structural semiotics, interpretive semiotics, functional grammar, semantics and cognitive linguistics. The book can be used as a basis for (post)graduate students, especially students of MA and PhD in Translation Studies as well as students in modern languages schools. The book focuses on a specific pair of languages, English and Arabic, and presents the relationships generated by texts' translation, including adverts and other types of texts.

Gramática española

Variación social

Kim Potowski and Naomi L. Shin, The University of New Mexico, USA

Series: Routledge Introductions to Spanish Language and Linguistics

Gramática española: Variación social introduces intermediate to advanced students of Spanish to the main grammatical features of the language in a way that emphasizes the social underpinnings of language. Written entirely in Spanish, this unique approach to the study of grammar guides students in an examination of how Spanish grammar varies depending on place, social group, and situation. Students examine why some varieties of Spanish are considered prestigious while others are not, drawing on current and historical sociopolitical contexts, all while learning grammatical terminology and how to identify categories and constructions in Spanish.

Semantics of Chinese Questions

An Interface Approach

Hongyuan Dong

Series: Routledge Studies in Chinese Linguistics

Semantics of Chinese Questions is the first major study of Chinese questions, especially wh-questions, within the framework of Alternative Semantics. It takes an interface approach to study the syntax, semantics and phonology of questions and proposes a phonological scope-marking strategy in Chinese questions, based upon experimental data. It also incorporates historical linguistic data regarding the grammaticalization of sentence-final particles such as -ne and -ma to study the formal diachronic semantics of questions. Primarily suitable for scholars in the field of Chinese linguistics, this book makes new theoretical contributions to the study of questions.

The Architecture of Periphery in Chinese

Cartography and Minimalism

Victor Junnan Pan

Series: Routledge Studies in Chinese Linguistics

This is the first monograph to study sentence final particles in Chinese from a cartographic perspective, and the first study trying to account for the derivation of A'-dependencies in Mandarin Chinese from a minimalist perspective. It will show how the generative syntax model can deal with this very important phenomenon of traditional Chinese grammar. The syntax of the left-periphery and of different types of A'-dependencies in Mandarin Chinese is the focus, and based on the Split-CP hypothesis proposed by Rizzi (1997), different orders established between functional projections in the left-periphery have been proposed for Mandarin.

The Routledge Handbook of Chinese Applied Linguistics

Edited by Chu-Ren Huang, Zhuo Jing-Schmidt and Barbara Meisterernst, Humboldt University, Berlin

The Routledge Handbook of Chinese Applied Linguistics is written for those wanting to acquire comprehensive knowledge of China, the diaspora, and the Sino-sphere communities through Chinese language. It examines how Chinese language is used in different contexts, and how the use of Chinese language affects culture, society, expression of self, persuasion of others; as well as how neurophysiological aspects of language disorder affects how we function, and how the advance of technology changes the way the Chinese language is used and perceived. The handbook will concentrate on the cultural, societal, and communicative characteristics of the Chinese language environment.

The Routledge Handbook of Chinese Discourse Analysis

Chris Shei, Swansea University, UK

Chinese is a discourse oriented language and the underlying mechanisms of the language involve encoding and decoding so the language can be correctly delivered and understood. To date, there has been a lack of consolidation at the discourse level such that a reference framework for understanding the language in a top-down fashion is still underdeveloped. The work is the first to showcase the latest research in the field of Chinese discourse analysis to consolidate existing findings, put the language in both theoretical and socio-functional perspectives, offer guidance and insights for further research and inspire innovative ideas for exploring the Chinese language in the discourse domain.

Auditioning for Musical Theatre

Denny Berry

Auditioning for Musical Theatre demystifies the process of giving the best possible professional audition for a role in a musical. It is the result of Denny Berry's own experience, sitting 'behind the audition desk' for 30 years of professional Broadway auditions, as well as teaching newcomers and coaching established actors. The book coaches performers on how to be their best selves, intended for the talented newcomer as well as the experienced actor who wants to deliver a more effective audition. Auditioning for Musical Theatre takes the reader through the parts of auditioning that they can control, and helps them tailor every situation to show their individual best.

Choreographing Discourses

A Mark Franko Reader

Mark Franko and Alessandra Nicifero

Choreographing Discourses brings together essays originally published by Mark Franko between 1996 and the contemporary moment. The volume's constellation of topics delves into controversies that are essential turning points in the field, which illuminate the spine of the field while interlinking dance scholarship with performance theory, film, visual, and public art. This book contains the first critical assessments of Franko's contribution to the field by André Lepecki and Gay Morris, and an interview incorporating a biographical dimension to the development of Franko's work and its relation to his dance and choreography.

J. M. Barrie's Peter Pan

Lucie Sutherland

Peter Pan is a narrative many of us believe we know well, and yet the play that premiered in December 1904 is not the depiction of Never Land that most people have experienced. It was the critical and commercial success of this particular play which propelled the story's notoriety and appeal, and without the success of that first production, Peter Pan would not be such a familiar part of our mainstream culture. Lucie Sutherland examines how, and why, this play became so popular, why the trans-Atlantic collaboration of J.M. Barrie and Charles Frohman was vital to the 1904 production's success, and how key versions in England and America have created an iconic narrative still popular today.

The Secret Life of Theatre

On the Nature and Function of Theatrical Representation

Brian Kulick

What is the secret DNA of theatre? What makes it unique from its sister arts? Why was it invented? Why does it persist? And now, in such an advanced technological age, why do we still feel compelled to return to a mode of expression that was invented over two thousand years ago? These are some of the foundational questions that are asked in this study of theatre from its inception to today. In an age when many studies are concerned with the 'how' of theatre, this work returns us to theatre's essential 'why'. The Secret Life of Theatre suggests that by reframing the question, we can re-enchant this unique and ever-vital medium of expression.

TEXTBOOK • READER

What is the Theatre?

Christian Biet, Christophe Triau, Jason Allen-Paisant and Joanne Brueton

In this book, Christian Biet and Christophe Triau focus on the practical, theoretical, and historical positions that the spectator and the reader have had in relation to the locations that they frequent and the texts that they handle. They adopt two approaches: analysing the spectacle in its theatrical and historical context in an attempt to seek out the principles and paradigms of approaching the theatre experience on one hand, and analysing the dramaturgy of a production in order to establish lines of interpretation and how to read, represent, and stage a text on the other.

History Dances

Chronicling the History of Traditional Mandinka Dance

Ofosuwa M Abiola

Series: Routledge Advances in Theatre & Performance Studies

The field of history is founded on the interrogation of written documents from the past. However, culture is the centre of life in Africa. As a result, in the past – and to a degree in the present – the process for documenting events in Africa was not written, it was performed. History Dances argues that a wealth of information is housed within traditional Mandinka dance, and consequently, the dances can be used as an African derived primary source for writing African history.

History Dances proves to be a vital read for both undergraduate students and scholars in the fields of dance history, African history, performance studies, and cultural anthropology.

Incapacity and Theatricality

Politics and Aesthetics in Theatre Involving Actors with Intellectual Disabilities

Tony McCaffrey

Series: Routledge Advances in Theatre & Performance Studies

Incapacity and Theatricality acknowledges the distinctive contribution to contemporary theatrical performance made by actors with intellectual disabilities. Tracing a global path of performances, this book offers an analysis of how these actors have emerged onto the main stage, and how their inclusion calls into question long-held assumptions about theatre and intellectual disability. For postgraduate students, or anyone interested in the shifting dynamics of twenty-first century theatre, McCaffrey's work ultimately addresses urgent questions about the situation and representation of the contemporary subject caught up somewhere between incapacity and theatricality.

Performing Arts in Transition

Moving between Media

Edited by Susanne Foellmer, Katharina Schmidt and Cornelia Schmitz

Series: Routledge Advances in Theatre & Performance Studies

Performing artists – especially from dance and performance art, as well as opera – are involved to an increasing degree in the transfer between different media, not only in their productions but also the events, materials, and documents that surround them. At the same time, the focus on that which remains has become central to any discussion of performance. Performing Arts in Transition explores what takes place in the moments of transition from one medium to another, and from the live performance to that which "survives" it.

The Routledge Companion to Theatre of the Oppressed

Edited by Kelly Howe, Julian Boal and José Soeiro

Series: Routledge Companions

This dynamic book offers a comprehensive companion to the theory and practice of Theatre of the Oppressed. Developed by Brazilian director and theorist Augusto Boal, these theatrical forms invite people to mobilize their knowledge and rehearse struggles against oppression. Featuring a diverse array of voices (many of them as yet unheard in the academic world), the book hosts dialogues on the creation of Theatre of the Oppressed, how it evolved and spread, and where it fits in today's world. Broad in scope yet rich in detail, The Routledge Companion to Theatre of the Oppressed contains practical and critical content relevant to artists, activists, teachers, students, and researchers.

The Shakespearean International Yearbook

17: Special Section, Shakespeare and Value

Edited by Tom Bishop, University of Auckland and Alexa Joubin, George Washington University

Series: The Shakespearean International Yearbook

Currently in its seventeenth year and formerly published by Ashgate, The Shakespearean International Yearbook surveys the present state of Shakespeare studies, addressing issues that are fundamental to our interpretive encounter with Shakespeare's work and his time, across the whole spectrum of his literary output. Each issue includes a special section under the guidance of a specialist Guest Editor, as well as a production diary or record of a notable Shakespeare performance. An essential reference tool for scholars of early modern literature and culture, this annual captures, from year to year, current and developing thought in Shakespeare scholarship and theater practice worldwide.

Bending the Rules of Music Theory

Lessons from Great Composers

Timothy Cutler

For students learning the basics of music theory, it can seem as though there are immutable rules about which chords, tones, and intervals can be used where. Yet even within the classical canon, there are many examples of composers breaking these apparent 'rules.' Drawing on examples from J.S. Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Brahms, and more, Bending the Rules of Music Theory takes readers beyond the basics of music theory and helps them to understand the inherent flexibility in the system of tonal music. Chapters explore the use of different rule-breaking elements in practice and why they work, introducing students to a more nuanced understanding of music theory.

Embodying Voice

Singing Verdi, Singing Wagner

Margaret Medlyn, New Zealand School of Music

Embodying Voice: Singing Verdi, Singing Wagner articulates the process of developing an operatic voice, explaining how and why the training of such a voice is as complex and sophisticated as it is mysterious. Building on scholarship about embodiment and drawing from many other fields of influence, this book illustrates how putting together a voice, embodying a sound, and creating a character are vital to an audience's emotional involvement and enjoyment. Moreover, it addresses an imbalance of power between the director and the conductor—ultimately, it is the communicative power of the singer's voice that brings life to an opera, a fact well known by Verdi and Wagner.

Hans Keller 1919 - 1985

A musician in dialogue with his times

Alison Garnham and Susi Woodhouse

A musician of penetrating insight, Hans Keller (1919-1985) was also an exceptional writer whose importance for post-war music in Britain is fundamental. Witty, passionate, sometimes disarmingly honest, Keller's letters present not only a vivid picture of an extraordinary mind, but also a significant insight into his musical times. Keller's correspondents included Alfred Brendel, Yehudi Menuhin, Peter Pears, Benjamin Britten, Alexander Goehr, Peter Maxwell Davies, H.C. Robbins Landon, Deryck Cooke and Nicholas Kenyon. Garnham and Woodhouse present a fascinating biography, illuminated by Keller's own letters, which shall appeal to all serious classical music lovers.

Leadership and Musician Development in Higher Music Education

Edited by Dawn Bennett, Jennifer Rowley and Patrick Schmidt

Series: ISME Global Perspectives in Music Education Series

Leadership and Musician Development in Higher Music Education informs, challenges and evaluates the central practices, policies and theories which underpin the preparation of future music leaders and the leadership of music in higher education. In higher education, it is often presumed that preparing for professional work is the responsibility of the individual rather than the institution. This anthology draws on the expertise of music practitioners to present the complexities surrounding this topic, exploring approaches to leadership development while addressing prevalent leadership issues from multiple standpoints.

Music and Sound in Silent Film

From the Nickelodeon to The Artist

Edited by Ruth Barton, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland and Simon Trezise, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland

Series: Routledge Music and Screen Media Series

Despite their name, the silent films of the early cinematic era were frequently accompanied by music and other sound elements of many kinds, including mechanical instruments, live performers, and audience sing-alongs. The twelve chapters in this concise book explore the multitude of functions filled by music in the rapidly changing context of the silent film era, as the concept of cinema itself developed. Examples are drawn from around the globe and across the history of silent film, both during the classic era of silent film and later uses of the silent format.

Music and War in the United States

Edited by Sarah Kraaz, Ripon College, USA

Music and War in the United States introduces students to the long and varied history of music's role in war. Spanning the history of wars involving the United States from the American Revolution to the Iraq war, with contributions from both senior and emerging scholars, this edited volume brings together key themes in this vital area of study. The intersection of music and war has been of growing interest to scholars in recent decades, but to date no book has brought together this scholarship in a way accessible to students.

Music Education in an Age of Virtuality and Post-Truth

Paul Woodford

This provocative book locates music education within the contexts of global politics and economics, exploring the tensions between neoliberal globalization and democratic deconsolidation in what has been called an age of post-truth. Children now live in a technologized virtual world in which their perceptions of truth and reality are shaped by populist and other leaders via music and art-saturated mass media. A liberal music education, such as that proposed here, can contribute to the revitalization of liberal democracy by challenging students to think critically about the ubiquitous music in their lives, and so better prepare them to function as politically informed and engaged citizens.

Gateways to Understanding Music

Timothy Rice and Dave Wilson, New Zealand School of Music

Gateways to Understanding Music explores music in all the categories that constitute contemporary musical experience: European classical music, popular music, jazz, and world music. Covering the oldest forms of human music making and the newest, the chronological narrative considers music from a global rather than a Eurocentric perspective. Each of sixty modular "gateways" covers a particular genre, style, or period of music. Students learn to listen to, explain, understand, and ultimately value all the music they may encounter in their world.

Teaching Strings in Today's Classroom

A Guide for Group Instruction

Rebecca B. MacLeod

Teaching Strings in Today's Classroom: A Guide for Group Instruction assists music education students, in-service teachers, and performers to realize their goals of becoming effective string educators. It introduces readers to the school orchestra environment, presents the foundational concepts needed to teach strings, and provides opportunities for the reader to apply this information. The author describes how becoming an effective string teacher requires three things of equal importance: content knowledge, performance skills, and opportunities to apply the content knowledge and performance skills in a teaching situation.

The Rock History Reader

Edited by Theo Cateforis, Syracuse University, USA

This eclectic compilation of readings tells the history of rock as it has been received and explained as a social and musical practice throughout its six decade history. This third edition includes new readings across the volume, with added material on the early origins of rock 'n' roll as well as coverage of recent developments, including the changing shape of the music industry in the twenty-first century. With numerous readings that delve into the often explosive issues surrounding censorship, copyright, race relations, feminism, youth subcultures, and the meaning of musical value, The Rock History Reader continues to appeal to scholars and students from a variety of disciplines.

Advancing Music Education in Northern Europe

Edited by David G. Hebert and Torunn Bakken Hauge
Advancing Music Education in Northern Europe chronicles how the Nordic Network for Music Education was founded and developed, documents its impact, and demonstrates how the eight nations involved in this network – Norway, Iceland, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania – are making unique contributions of global significance to the field of music education. In a time where international partnerships appear to be threatened by a recent resurgence in protectionism and nationalism, this book also more generally demonstrates the value of formalized international cooperation in the sphere of higher education.

Death and (Re) Birth of J.S. Bach: Reconsidering Authorship and the Musical Work

Roberto Alonso Trillo

The study and redefinition of the notion of authorship and its relationship to the idea of the literary work has played a central role in recent research, but its impact on contemporary musicology is still limited. Why? What implications would a reconsideration of the author- and work-concepts have on our understanding of creative musical processes? Why would a re-examination of these concepts be necessary? Could it emerge from a post-structuralist revision of the notion of musical textuality? In this book, Trillo uses the ...Bach... project to sketch some critical answers to these fundamental questions, raise new ones, and explore their musicological implications.

Noise, Affect and the Presidential Campaign

Discordant Magic

Justin Patch

Discordant Magic: Sound, Affect and the Presidential Campaign paints a portrait of the political experience at a pivotal time in American political and social history. Through a multi-modal comparative examination of the sonic and emotional cultures of the 2008 and 2016 campaigns, Justin Patch raises critical queries about our affective relationship to modern politics and the impact of emotional campaigning on democracy. Broadly stated, Discordant Magic asks: how do campaign sounds affect us; what role do we the electorate play in creating and sustaining these sounds and affects; and what actions do they generate?

The Cyclic Mass

Anglo-Continental Exchange in the Fifteenth Century

James Cook

Series: Royal Musical Association Monographs

To understand English music in the fifteenth century is to understand it within the two-way cultural exchange with the continent, and the genre of the Mass cycle is very much at the forefront of this. This book argues that a number of the works that have induced the most scholarly debate are best seen through the lens of intensive and long-term cultural exchange and that the great binary divide of provenance can, in many cases, productively be broken down. Many of these works, though often written on the continent, can, it seems, only be understood in relation to English practice – a practice which has had, and continues to have, major importance in the ongoing history of European Art Music.

Towards a Global Music History

Intercultural Convergence, Fusion, and Transformation in the Human Musical Story

Mark Hijleh

How do we explain the globalized musical world in which we find ourselves in the early 21st century and how did we arrive here? This extraordinary book outlines an understanding of the human musical story as an intercultural—and ultimately a transcultural—one, with travel and trade as the defining conditions and catalysts for the ongoing development of musical styles. Hijleh traces the story from the Silk Road, to the rise of al-Andalus, and the fusion of European, African and indigenous musics that emerged in the Americas between c1500-1920 as part of Atlantic culture, as well as the concurrent acceleration of globalism in music through European empires and exoticism.

Pedagogies for Diverse Contexts

Edited by Alan Pence, University of Victoria, Canada. and Janet Harvell, Department for Children and Families, University of Worcester, UK

Series: Thinking About Pedagogy in Early Childhood Education

Diversity can be a rich source of possibility and opportunity in early childhood education. Appreciating that learning and development are shaped by culture and context, history and values, the diversity of cases found in this volume provide a useful tension in considering one's own practices, policies and beliefs. Chapters draw on the knowledge and professional experiences of actors from a wide range of countries and cultures to provoke, to stimulate and to extend thinking, providing insights and examples relevant not only for front-line practice and programme development, but for training, assessment, research and policy development.

Teaching Essential Literacy Skills in the Early Years Classroom

A Guide for Students and Teachers

Tara Concannon-Gibney, Dublin City University, Ireland.

Teaching and learning literacy in the early years can be a joyful, explorative and meaningful experience. This accessible book will give teachers and practitioners the practical and theoretical skills and knowledge they require to successfully and confidently teach reading, writing and oral skills in the early years classroom. Chapters draw on latest research to identify and showcase best practice in writing instruction, illustrate how literacy can be developed through play, and outline how teachers can use the environment to enhance children's learning. Photocopiable resources, classroom activities, and vignettes can be quickly and easily adapted for use in any setting.

Edited by Christine Stephen, University of Stirling, UK, Liz Brooker, Institute of Education, University of London, UK, Pamela Oberhuemer and Rod Parker-Rees, University of Plymouth, UK

Despite much popular and policy interest in young children's interactions with digital technologies, our understanding of the influence of these technologies on playing and learning, and on the role of educators, is surprisingly limited. This book fills in the gaps of our existing understanding of the field, focusing on the how and why of encounters with digital technologies; the nature of digital play; and questions about practice and practitioners. The book raises critical questions and offers new understandings and theoretical insights around one of the 'hot topics' in early years research. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Early Years journal.

Contemporary and Critical Perspectives

Edited by Dinah Volk, Liz Brooker, Institute of Education, University of London, UK, Pamela Oberhuemer and Rod Parker-Rees, University of Plymouth, UK

This volume aims to generate conversations about developments in Early Childhood Education, situated within classist/racist/linguistic and neoliberal contexts, and to analyze critically where we are, where we might go and what we might do. It is also an opportunity to share counter-narratives to the dominant narratives promulgated by many, convinced that narrow, destructive norms of appropriate practice, standards and accountability, as well as the curtailed achievement of children of color, those from low income communities, and emergent bilinguals are 'common sense'. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Early Years journal.

The Routledge International Handbook of Learning with Technology in Early Childhood

Edited by Natalia Kucirkova, Jennifer Rowsell, Brock University, Canada and Garry Falloon

Series: Routledge International Handbooks of Education

This book brings together innovative work happening in childhood research across disciplinary boundaries and across the world. It focuses specifically on the most cutting-edge, innovative methodological approaches in the study of children's use and learning with digital technologies and children's experiences of key 21st century trends (e.g. immigration or multiculturalism). A true effort is made to have dialogues across diverse fields and contested fields of research (including educational psychology, post-humanist literacy, narrative approaches, developmental approaches). The volume is a substantive and strategic collection of international approaches to early childhood and technologies.

Theory and Methods for Sociocultural Research in Science and Engineering Education

Edited by Gregory J. Kelly, Pennsylvania State University, USA and Judith Green, UC-Santa Barbara, USA

Series: Teaching and Learning in Science Series

Introducing original methods for integrating sociocultural and discourse studies into science and engineering education, this book provides a much-needed framework for how to conduct qualitative research in this field. The three dimensions of learning identified in the Next Generation Science Standards create a need for research methods that examine the sociocultural components of science education. With cutting-edge studies and examples consistent with the NGSS standards, this book offers comprehensive research methods for integrating discourse and sociocultural practices in science and engineering education.

Culturally Specific Pedagogy in the Mathematics Classroom

Strategies for Teachers and Students

Jacqueline Leonard, University of Wyoming, USA

Advocating the use of culturally specific pedagogy to enhance the mathematics instruction of diverse students, this revised second edition links research with practice, offering lesson templates that teachers can use with ethnically and culturally diverse students and with females. With new chapters on current and cutting-edge topics, the text builds on sociocultural theory and research on culture and mathematics cognition to better understand minority students' goals and learning needs. Including new discussion questions and examples of culture in the mathematics classroom, this book employs pedagogical research to field-test instructional methods for culturally diverse and female students.

Art as Unlearning

Towards a Mannerist Pedagogy

John Baldacchino, University of Wisconsin-Madison, USA Series: Theorizing Education

Art as Unlearning makes an argument for art's unlearning as a mannerist pedagogy. Art's pedagogy facilitates a form of forgetfulness by extending what happens in the practice of the arts in their visual, auditory and performative forms. The concept of learning has become predominantly hijacked by foundational paradigms such as developmental narratives whose positivistic approach has limited the field of education to a narrow practice within the social sciences. This book moves away from these strictures by showing how the arts confirm that unlearning is not contingent on learning, but rather anticipates and avoids it.

Performative Approaches in Arts Education

Artful Teaching, Learning, and Research

Edited by Anna-Lena Østern, Norwegian University of Science and Technology and Kristian Nødtvedt Knudsen, Norwegian University of Science and Technology
Series: Routledge Research in Education

In Performative Approaches in Arts Education, researchers, artists and practitioners from philosophy and the arts elaborate on what performative approaches can contribute to 21st century arts education. Introducing new perspectives on learning, the contributors provide a central international perspective, developing a paradigm in which the artist, teacher and researcher's form of teaching is enmeshed with content, and human agency is entangled with non-human matter.

Religious Education in the Mirror of a Life Trajectory

Edited by Abdulkader Tayob, University of Cape Town, South Africa

The study of religious education is of great interest in analysing how schools and educational authorities address the demands of multi-cultural and multi-religious societies and states. Sitting between the new policies and school demographics, teachers and educators have been key in shaping how educational policy is enacted. This book focuses on the life trajectories of teachers, principals, managers and public intellectuals who shape and are shaped by the changing context of religion and religious education. This book was originally published as a special issue of Religion & Education.

Becoming a Research-Informed School

Why? What? How?

Tim Cain, Edge Hill University, UK

How do teachers respond to the policy imperative for research-informed practice? How do they find, select, read and understand relevant research? How do they engender evidence-based discussions in research groups? How does research improve their decision making and lead to better teaching? These questions are exciting world-wide attention, especially within the English-speaking world. Drawing on a wide range of school-based research projects, this book explains how teachers and school leaders select, understand and use research to question their thinking, challenge the status quo, change what they do and ultimately, improve the learning experience for all their students.

Ethical Leadership for a Better Education System

What Kind of People Are We?

Carolyn Roberts

How can head teachers live up to expectations? What makes them fail? What keeps the profession in good standing in the taxpayer's eye, and what undermines it? This book sets out a new vision for school leadership, moving beyond leadership styles and best practice to reflect on the intrinsic motivation in becoming a leader within a school setting, and proposing a way for the profession to develop and maintain ethical standards. Chapters explore the 2017-18 Commission on Ethical Leadership in Schools, considering the core principles and behaviours we should expect from our school leaders, and providing a clear, ethical code for thinking about and reinforcing ethical standards in schools.

Evidence-Based Science Activities in Grades 3–5

Meeting the NGSS

Patrick Brown and Jim Concannon

This book shows elementary teachers how evidence-based science activities help students achieve deeper conceptual understanding. Drawing on a wealth of research, authors Pat Brown and Jim Concannon demonstrate how direct, hands-on experience in the science classroom can enable your students to become more self-reliant learners. They also provide a plethora of model lessons aligned with the Next Generation Science Standards (NGSS) and offer advice on how to create your lesson plans and activities to satisfy the demands of your curriculum. You and your students will be able to ditch the textbook and embark upon an exciting and rewarding journey to scientific discovery.

Asian Education Miracles

In Search of Sociocultural and Psychological Explanations

Edited by Gregory Arief D. Liem, National Institute of Education, Singapore and Ser Hong Tan

Series: Routledge Series on Schools and Schooling in Asia

With a focus on Asian contexts, the book brings together knowledge on how values and practices, embedded and practiced in the classroom, school, family, and the society at large, can influence students' motivation, engagement and psychological well-being. The book synthesizes research on students and systems from culturally diverse Asian countries and economies, including Cambodia, Hong Kong-China, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Singapore, Chinese Taipei, Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, and beyond. The book takes special interest in applying the insights gained from understanding students' motivation, engagement, and well-being within their sociocultural contexts.

Critical Theory and Qualitative Data Analysis in Education

Edited by Rachelle Winkle-Wagner, University of Wisconsin – Madison, USA, Jamila Lee-Johnson, University of Wisconsin-Madison, USA and Ashley N. Gaskew, University of Wisconsin-Madison, USA

Critical Theory and Qualitative Data Analysis offers a path-breaking explanation of how critical theories can be used within the analysis of qualitative data to inform research process, such as data collection, analysis, and interpretation. This contributed volume offers examples of qualitative data analysis techniques and exemplars of empirical studies that employ critical theory concepts in data analysis. By creating a clear, accessible bridge between data analysis and critical social theories, this book helps scholars and researchers effectively translate their research designs and findings to multiple audiences for more equitable outcomes and disruption of inequality.

Leadership of Higher Education Assessment

A Guide to Theory for Practitioners

Matthew B. Fuller, Sam Houston State University, USA

Leadership of Higher Education Assessment provides a comprehensive treatment of leadership theories and helps practitioners integrate this knowledge into their assessment work. Synthesizing leadership theories into manageable concepts relevant to the college and university context, this useful guide helps assessment leaders address complex institutional situations and develop their own unique philosophy of assessment and leadership style. In the face of ongoing challenges such as data accessibility, data security, a shifting accreditation environment, complex politics, & lack of resources, this book is a critical guide for assessment leaders who want to take command of their practice.

Student Engagement and Quality Assurance in Higher Education

International Collaborations for the Enhancement of Learning

Edited by Masahiro Tanaka

Using a range of international examples to compare the reality, purpose and effect of student engagement in universities across the globe, this book argues that teachers and students need to collaborate to improve the quality of university education and student learning. With case studies from ten countries covering a variety of cultural and environmental settings, it focusses on ways of working with students to produce applicable, implementable strategies for universities the world over. This book is essential reading for educational researchers, institutional leaders and all concerned with the implementation and progression of student engagement and quality assurance in higher education.

Supporting Self-directed Learning in Science and Technology

Beyond the School Years

Edited by Léonie J. Rennie, Curtin University, Australia, Susan M. Stocklmayer, Australian National University, Australia and John K. Gilbert, University of Reading, UK

Series: Teaching and Learning in Science Series

While much has been written about science education from pre-K through to postgraduate study, interaction with science and technology does not stop when schooling ends. Moving beyond scholarship on conventional education, this book extends the research and provides an original in-depth look at adult and lifelong learning in science and technology. By identifying the knowledge and skills that individuals need to engage in self-directed learning, the book highlights how educators can best support adult learners beyond the years of formal schooling.

Contemporary Issues in Higher Education

Edited by Andrés Castro Samayoa, Boston College, USA and Marybeth Gasman, University of Pennsylvania, USA

Series: Core Concepts in Higher Education

The latest text in the Core Concepts in Higher Education series, this volume speaks to the complex dimensions that higher education scholars and educators need to understand about the shifting role of postsecondary education in the US. Chapter authors clarify current issues affecting the field, and offer fresh perspectives articulating how policy, demographic, and institutional changes influence the everyday practices of those who work in higher education. This is a valuable resource for graduate students, administrators, and researchers who seek to understand and improve the policies and contexts of higher education today.

A Primer on Minority Serving Institutions

Edited by Andrés Castro Samayoa, Boston College, USA and Marybeth Gasman, University of Pennsylvania, USA

Minority Serving Institutions (MSIs)—specifically Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), Tribal Colleges and Universities (TCUs), Hispanic Serving Institutions (HSIs) and Asian American, Native Alaskan, Pacific Islander Serving Institutions (AANAPISIs) — have carved out a unique niche in the nation, serving the needs of low-income, underrepresented students of color. Undergirded by national data and key literature, A Primer on Minority Serving Institutions provides graduate students, scholars, and researchers a full picture of the work and contributions of Minority Serving Institutions and urges them to think about MSIs as part of the larger higher education landscape.

Academic Life in the Measured University

Pleasures, Paradoxes and Politics

Edited by Tai Peseta, Western Sydney University, Australia, Simon Barrie, Western Sydney University, Australia and Jan McLean, University of Technology Sydney, Australia

This book explores the cracks and fragility in academic life, and addresses the need to rigorously research the field. Focusing on the measured university, it traces how academic life had ceded itself to the logics of perverse measures, and raises questions about whether the contemporary university may well have become too measured to adequately counter the political times now upon us. This book was originally published as a special issue of Higher Education Research & Development.

The Phenomenological Heart of Teaching and Learning

Theory, Research, and Practice in Higher Education

Katherine Greenberg, Brian Sohn, Neil Greenberg, Howard R Pollio, Sandra Thomas and John Smith

Series: Routledge Research in Education

This book presents a carefully constructed framework for teaching and learning informed by philosophical and empirical foundations of phenomenology. Based on an extensive, multi-dimensional case study focused around the 'lived experience' of college-level teaching preparation, classroom interaction, and students' reflections, this book presents evidence for the claim that the worldviews of both teachers and learners affect the way that they present and receive knowledge.

Black Women Theorizing Curriculum Studies in Colour and Curves

Edited by Kirsten T. Edwards Williams, Denise Taliaferro Baszile and Nichole A. Guillory

This book explores the curriculum theorising of Black women, and their contributions to the always evolving complicated conversation of Curriculum Studies. It visualizes the transformation of academia's relationship with black women as students, teachers and theorizers. Providing a clarion call for fellow educators to remain reflexive and committed to emancipatory aims, this book will be of interest to researchers seeking an exploration of critical voices from non-dominant identities, perspectives, and concerns. Rethinking Student Belonging in Higher Education

From Bourdieu to Borderlands

Kate Carruthers Thomas

Arguing for an understanding of belonging in higher education as relational, complex and negotiated, particularly in reference to 'non-traditional' students, this book counters prevailing normative assumptions as to what it means to belong and how institutional policy is shaped and implemented around traditional students. Bringing theoretical insights into institutional areas of policy and practice this book reframes belonging within a neo-liberal, marketised higher education sector, which continues to draw in students from diverse backgrounds, but is yes to account for their differences.

Qualitative Inquiry, Cartography and the Promise of Material Change

Aaron M. Kuntz, University of Alabama, USA

This book examines critical qualitative inquiry as social justice work through the productive intersections among New Materialism (also referred to as Critical Materialism), Postmodern Marxism (at times termed NeoMarxism) and affirmative ethics. More than a coincidental alignment of corresponding values, these three philosophical orientations entangle to make possible a series of resistive research practices aimed at intervening in the normative production of the status quo. From these intersections, critical inquiry becomes enactments of radical cartography, mapping past and present inquiry practices in order to activate a future that is both yet unknown, and in the process of becoming.

Applying Indigenous Research Methods

Storying with Peoples and Communities

Edited by Sweeney Windchief and Timothy San Pedro

In this collection, Indigenous scholars address the importance of IRM methodologies in their own scholarship, while focusing conversations on the application with others. Each chapter is co-authored to model methods rooted in the sharing of stories to strengthen relationships, such as yarnning, storywork and others. The chapters offer a wealth of specific examples, as told by researchers about their research methods in conversation with other scholars, teachers and community members. This book is an interdisciplinary showcase of the ways IRM can enhance scholarship in fields including education, Indigenous studies, settler colonial studies, social work, qualitative methodologies and beyond.

Professional Collaboration with Purpose

Teacher Learning Towards Equitable and Excellent Schools

Amanda Datnow and Vicki Park, San Diego State University, USA

Series: Routledge Leading Change Series

While team exercises for teachers are common, many lack the resources to achieve their intended goals. This volume aims to provide guidance for putting together positive collaborative exercises by showing how teachers are moved—rather than compelled—toward joint work. The authors explore how collaborative settings can provide a space for working through the inevitable challenges that accompany the changing nature of teaching in the age of accountability and show the motivation, inspiration, and energy that teachers gain from collaborating to improve student learning. Ultimately, they show how teacher empowerment towards working together builds equitable and excellent learning environments.

Understanding Critical Race Research Methods and Methodologies

Lessons from the Field

Edited by Jessica T. Decuir-Gunby, NC State University, Thandeka K Chapman, University of California San Diego and Paul A. Schutz, University of Texas at San Antonio

This exciting edited collection presents different methods and methodologies, which are used by education researchers, to investigate critical issues of racial justice in education from a CRT perspective. Featuring scholars from a range of disciplines, the chapters showcase how various researchers synthesize different methods—including qualitative, quantitative, mixed-methods, historical and archival research—with CRT to explore issues of equity and access in the field of education. Scholars discuss their current research approaches using CRT and present new models of conducting research within a CRT framework, offering a valuable contribution to ongoing methodological debates.

Young Children's Civic Mindedness

Democratic Living and Learning in an Unequal World

Jennifer Hauver, The University of Georgia

Young Children's Civic Mindedness provides a well-grounded understanding of children's civic thought and action by inviting readers to look and listen carefully to the voices of young children themselves. Grounded in research on children's evolving civic identities and drawn from extended case studies and rich narrative vignettes, this book shows the many ways even the youngest children can be civic-minded and political. Written for early childhood, elementary and civic educators, this book encourages readers to go beyond mere rhetoric on the importance of civic education, to develop improved ways of teaching for children's civic development.

Ideology and Curriculum

Michael Apple

Ideology and Curriculum was first published in 1979 and has been quickly established as a path breaking statement on the relationship between cultural and economic power in education. To celebrate the 40th anniversary of publication of this now classic text, Michael W. Apple has added a full new chapter on the book's lasting critical agenda outlined in context of the contemporary conservative climate. A new preface re-examines and reflects on earlier arguments and what has happened over the intervening years.

Narrative and Metaphor in Education

Look Both Ways

Edited by Michael Hanne, University of Auckland, New Zealand and Anna A. Kaal, VU University, Netherlands.

Human beings rely equally on narrative (or storytelling) and metaphor (or analogy) for making sense of the world. Narrative and Metaphor in Education integrates the two perspectives of narrative and metaphor in educational theory and practice at every level from pre-school to lifelong civic education. Bringing together outstanding educational researchers, the book interweaves for the first time the rich strand of current research about how narrative may be used productively in education with more fragmentary research on the role of metaphor in education and invites readers to 'look both ways.'

Reclaiming freedom in education

Theories and practices of radical free school education

Max Hope

Series: Routledge Focus on Education Studies

This book examines the notion of 'freedom' within educational settings. It outlines central features of some of the original Free Schools of the past, and then uses these as a lens through which to explore current examples of radical schooling. It argues that in educational contexts, negative freedom and positive freedom are apparent, though these may appear different across a variety of social and political contexts. The notion of 'responsible freedom' is shown to be more pertinent than that of 'absolute freedom' and can be seen to operate in a number of ways including 'freedom to learn', 'freedom to be', 'freedom to think', 'freedom to choose' and 'freedom to self-govern'.

Navigating Teacher Licensure Exams

Success and Self-Discovery on the High-Stakes Path to the Classroom

Emery Petchauer

Navigating Teacher Licensure Exams offers practical, empirically sourced insights into the high-stakes licensure exams required in most states for teacher certification. This unique resource foregrounds the experiences of diverse preservice teachers to understand how they organize their preparation efforts and navigate the high-pressure space of this important testing event. By situating these exams within their social and psychological contexts, presenting real-life cases of success and failure, and confronting innate perceptions of standardized tests, the book provides essential and highly practical support for preservice teachers, teacher educators, and departmental resource libraries.

Teaching and Learning about Difference through Social Media

Reflection, Engagement, and Self-assessment

Lillian Vega-Castaneda and Mario Castaneda

Drawing on critical literacy techniques, the authors examine the ways difference and diversity are represented in online conversation, including attention to bias, fact, and explicit and implied messages. Each chapter includes discussion questions, self-reflection and assessment activities, and suggestions for further reading, to encourage a more informed dialogue and critical conversation with students.

Ideal for courses in diversity and social justice education and beyond, this content and practice-based text integrates the identification of issues of difference and diversity with suggestions for distinct teaching strategies in the social media age.

Bearing with Strangers

Arendt, Education and the Politics of Inclusion

Morten T. Korsgaard, Malmö University, Sweden

Series: New Directions in the Philosophy of Education

Bearing with Strangers looks at inclusion in education in a new way, regarding education as a discipline with practical and theoretical concepts and criteria which emanate from education and schooling itself. By introducing the notion of the instrumental fallacy, it shows how this is not only an inherent feature of inclusive education policies, but also omnipresent in modern educational policy. It engages schooling through an Arendtian framework, constituted by and in a specific practice with the aim of mediating between generations. It outlines a didactic and pedagogical theory that presents inclusion not as an aim for education, but as a constitutive feature of the activity of schooling.

Rethinking Schools and Renewing Energy for Learning

Research, Principles and Practice

Kris Van den Branden, Catholic University of Leuven, Belgium

Series: Routledge Research in Education

Rethinking Schools and Renewing Energy for Learning presents a comprehensive view on the major challenges educators face in the 21st century, and the ways in which schools can make a difference. It describes key principles that can serve as guidelines for tackling those challenges in an effective and manageable way, looking both at what children should learn, and what they want to learn.

Rethinking Schools and Renewing Energy for Learning will be of great interest to academics, postgraduate students, teacher educators, and scholars in the field of education, specifically interested in primary education, secondary education, teacher education and education policy.

Feminist Theory in Diverse Productive Practices

An Educational Philosophy and Theory Gender and Sexualities Reader, Volume VI

Edited by Liz Jackson, The University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong and Michael A. Peters, University of Waikato, New Zealand

Series: Educational Philosophy and Theory: Editor's Choice

Feminist Theory in Diverse Productive Practices is the second of two volumes examining gender and feminist theory in Educational Philosophy and Theory. This collection explores the difference that gender and sexual identities make both to theorizing and working in education and other fields. As the articles contained in this text span nearly 40 years of scholarship related to these issues, this volume sheds light on how feminist, gender, and sexuality theory has evolved within and beyond the field of philosophy of education over time.

History and Social Studies Education in a Context of Intolerance

Imagined Communities and Collective Memory

Edited by Magdalena H. Gross and Luke Terra

Building upon the theoretical foundations for the teaching and learning of difficult histories in social studies classrooms, this edited collection offers diverse perspectives on school practices, curriculum development, and experiences of teaching about traumatic events. Case studies cover a range of topics and are unified by themes of collective memory, imagined communities and suppressed narratives. Considering the relationship between memory, history, and education, this volume advances the discussion of classroom-based practices for teaching and learning difficult histories and investigates the role that history education plays in creating and sustaining these imagined communities.

Pedagogical Equilibrium

The Development of Teachers' Professional Knowledge

Jennifer Mansfield, Monash University

Pedagogical Equilibrium offers a timely reconceptualization of teacher knowledge development, arguing that the opportunity for valuable learning occurs every time a teacher experiences unsettling feelings of uncertainty, perplexity or surprise. Through detailed examples, the complexity of teaching landscapes is demonstrated and readers are offered a new framework for scaffolding their thinking through the lens of moments that challenge to their sense of equilibrium. This book will be a highly valuable resource for educational researchers, teacher educators, in-service teachers, school leadership and other educational stakeholders.

Literature and Philosophical Play in Early Childhood Education

A Humanities Based Approach to Research and Practice

Viktor Johansson, Södertörn University, Sweden

Series: New Directions in the Philosophy of Education

Literature and Philosophical Play in Early Childhood Education explores the role of philosophy and the humanities as pedagogy in early childhood educational research and practice, arguing that research should attend to questions about education and growth that concern social structures, individual development and existential aspects of learning. It demonstrates how we can think of pedagogy and educational practices in early childhood as artistic, poetic and philosophical, and exemplifies a humanities-based approach by giving literature and artful play a place in shaping the ground of practice and research.

Teacher Education in the Trump Era and Beyond

Preparing New Teachers in a Contentious Political Climate

Edited by Laura Baecher, Megan Blumenreich, Shira Eve Epstein and Julie Horwitz

Series: Routledge Research in Teacher Education

This book aims to start the conversation about how the consequences of the historic 2016 election can be addressed in the teacher education classroom. Taking as its starting point the Trump administration's dramatic influence on education, educational policy, the culture in schools, and the safety of children, contributors demonstrate how teacher educators across the United States are adapting their curriculum. The chapters represent a variety of aspects of teacher support and preparation, and address practices such as rejecting xenophobia, developing critical thinking, and responding to children's emotional lives.

Teachers, Gender and the Feminisation Debate

Edited by Marie-Pierre Moreau, University of Roehampton, UK

Teachers, Gender and the Feminisation Debate critically engages with the claim that teaching is a feminised profession and offers a comprehensive and authoritative analysis of the way gender and power play out in the lives of male and female teachers. Informed by social constructivist, feminist theories of work and education, the book adopts a relational and intersectional approach to gender.

The Norwegian Mission's Literacy Work in Colonial and Independent Madagascar

Ellen Veve Rosnes

Series: Routledge Research in Literacy

Offering an original historical perspective on literacy work in Africa, this book examines the role of the Norwegian Lutheran mission in Madagascar and sheds light on the motivations that drove colonizing powers' literacy work. Focusing on both colonial and independent Madagascar, Rosnes examines how literacy practices were facilitated through mission schools and the impact on the reading and writing skills to Malagasy children and youth. Analysing how literacy work influenced identity formation and power relations in the Malagasy society, the author offers new insights into the field of language and education in Africa.

Values and Professional Knowledge in Teacher Education

Nick Mead, Oxford Brookes University, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Teacher Education

Values and Professional Knowledge in Teacher Education provides distinctive insights into potential strengths to develop trainee teachers' values within school-based training. Looking at the personal moral and political values of trainees as fundamental to strategic and critical professional knowledge, the book considers a key question about training contexts: to what extent is teacher education embedded in the purpose and rationale of the school so that trainees' values, and consequently their autonomy and identity, can flourish? The book is research-focused and offers case-studies that offer vicarious experiences which resonate with the professional needs and concerns of teacher educators.

Virtues in the Public Sphere

Citizenship, Civic Friendship and Duty

Edited by James Arthur

Virtues in the Public Sphere features seventeen essays by experts from a variety of different perspectives on the broad theme of virtue in the public sphere. Spanning issues such as the notion of civic friendship and civic virtue, it sheds light on the role that these virtues play in the public sphere and their importance in safeguarding communities from the threats of a lack of concern for truth, poor leadership, charlatanism, and bigotry. This book highlights the theoretical complexity of putting virtue ethics into practice in the public domain at a time when it has been shaken by unpredictable political, social, technological, and cultural developments.

Implicit Bias in Schools

A Practitioner's Guide

Gina Laura Gullo, Lehigh University, USA, Kelly Capatosto, Ohio State University, USA and Cheryl Staats

Implicit Bias in Schools provides practitioners with an understanding of implicit bias and how to address it from start to finish: what is it, how is it a problem, and how can we fix it. Grounded in an accessible summary of research on bias and inequity in schools, this book bridges the research-to-practice gap by exploring how implicit bias affect students and what school leaders can do to mitigate the effects of bias in their schools. Covering issues of discipline, instruction, academic achievement, mindfulness, data collection, and culturally relevant practices and full of rich examples and strategies, Implicit Bias in Schools is a must-have resource for educators today.

Whiteucation

Privilege, Power, and Prejudice in School and Society

Edited by Jeffrey S. Brooks, RMIT University, Australia and George Theoharis

This important volume explores how racism operates at various levels of school and society, while also unpacking larger patterns of racist ideology and white privilege as it manifests across various levels of schooling. A diverse set of contributors analyze a particular context of white privilege, providing key research findings, connections to policy, and exemplars of schools and universities that are overcoming these challenges. Whiteucation provides a holistic perspective on how inequitable power dynamics and prejudice exist in schools, ultimately encouraging reflection, dialogue, and inquiry in spaces where white privilege needs to be questioned, interrogated, and dismantled.

Leading Schools to Learn, Grow, and Thrive

Using Theory to Strengthen Practice

S. David Brazer, Stanford University, USA, Scott Bauer and Bob L. Johnson Jr

Grounded in organizational and leadership theory, this book helps leaders understand their schools and districts from multiple perspectives and develop their own leadership aspirations, approaches, and missions. Authors Brazer, Bauer, and Johnson present authentic practical problems, illuminate them with appropriate theory and research, and give readers opportunities to solve common puzzles as a means to grow wisdom about how to lead, especially when confronted with complex challenges. This book is an invaluable resource for aspiring leaders, one that readers will reference as they proceed through their leadership coursework and keep close at hand throughout their leadership career.

Special Education Leadership

Building Effective Programming in Schools

David Bateman, Shippensburg University, USA and Jenifer Cline, Montana Department of Education, USA

Special Education Leadership provides leaders with tools to review programs, implement special education law, and build special education programs that effectively supervise and support teachers. Grounded in theory, this book also includes best practice for day-to-day operations, such as issues of teaching and learning, personnel selection and evaluation, basic financial management, working with parent relations, mental health issues, and legal matters related to special education. This book helps prepare special education administrators and supervisors to survive the pressures of working with students with disabilities while supporting appropriate services and preventing litigation.

Advancing the Development of Urban School Superintendents through Adaptive Leadership

Sarah Chace

Series: Routledge Research in Educational Leadership

Based on a case study of urban school superintendents in a leadership development program, this book offers a concrete demonstration of how adaptive leadership is applied and learned. Blending the theory of adaptive leadership with the practice of urban school superintendents, this book also utilizes the analytic lens of transformative learning as developed by Jack Mezirow.

Grounding Education in Environmental Humanities

Exploring Place-Based Pedagogies in the South

Edited by Lucas F. Johnston and Dave Aftandilian

Series: Routledge Research in Higher Education

This edited volume draws together educators and scholars to engage with the difficulties and benefits of teaching place-based education in a distinctive culture-laden area in North America: the United States South. Through site-specific narratives, this volume offers a blueprint for new approaches to place-based pedagogy, with an emphasis on the intersection between religion and the environment. By offering broadly applicable examples of pedagogical methods and practices, this book confronts the need to develop more sustainable local communities to address globally significant challenges.

Assessment in Open, Distance, and e-Learning

Lessons from Practice

Edited by Jessica Evans, Open University, UK, Sally Jordan, Open University, UK and Freda Wolfenden, Open University, UK

This book showcases how scholarship as part of academics' practice can be part of an academic toolkit for change that expands awareness and knowledge of the purposes and effects of the pedagogy of assessment. It argues that academics' professional expertise is best deepened through participation in authentic activities of teaching and scholarship. The discussion identifies what is involved in such an approach including the role of an enabling principles-based framework, the constraints on implementation, and the implications for leaders of teaching and learning. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Open Learning journal.

Decolonizing Foreign Language Education

The Mismatching of English and Other Imperial Languages

Edited by Donaldo Macedo, University of Massachusetts Boston

Series: Series in Critical Narrative

Edited by acclaimed critical theorist and linguist Donaldo Macedo, this volume includes cutting-edge work by a select group of scholars working to rigorously challenge the marginalization of foreign language education and the displacement of indigenous languages through the teaching of colonial languages. Each chapter confronts the hold of colonialism and imperialism that inform and shape the relationship between foreign language education and literary studies by asserting that applied linguistics is just as important a tool for ESL/EFL teachers as literature or linguistic theory.

Reading for Life

High Quality Literacy Instruction for All

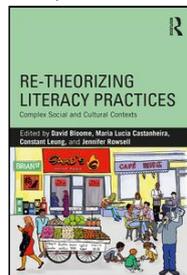

Lyn Stone, Director of Linguist Learning, Victoria, Australia.

Nonsensical ideas about teaching reading and writing are alive and well and in schools all over the world. Yet we have known for many years what the most effective, low-cost methods are. It's time for you as a teacher, a parent, as a human to take the reins and demand quality literacy teaching for all. This book contains the tools you will need to get that job done. This book aims to bridge the research-practice divide, making the findings of reading science available to all and provide a common platform on which teachers and parents can exchange ideas about doing the best possible job of teaching people to read and write.

Re-theorizing Literacy Practices

Complex Social and Cultural Contexts

Edited by David Bloome, The Ohio State University, USA, Maria Lucia Castanheira, Universidade Federal de Minas Gerais, Brazil, Constant Leung, King's College London, UK and Jennifer Rowell, Brock University, Canada

Building on Brian V. Street's scholarship, contributors in this edited collection discuss literacy as intrinsically social and ideological, and examine how the theorizing of literacy practices has evolved in recognition of the diverse contexts in which written language is used. Breaking new intellectual and theoretical ground, this book brings together leading literacy scholars to re-examine how educational and sociocultural contexts frame and define literacy events and practices. Drawing from the richness of Brian V. Street's work, this volume offers insights into fractures, tensions, and developments in literacy for scholars, students, and researchers.

Creating Literacy Communities as Pathways to Student Success

Equity and Access for Latina Students in STEM

Jessica Singer Early and Christina Saidy

Creating Literacy Communities as Pathways to Student Success offers a model for using literacy as a pathway for secondary students to explore fields from which they are often systematically excluded. In particular, this volume demonstrates how access for young Latina students to STEM related fields can be bolstered through engagement with mentors in writing and reading programs. Written for pre- and in-service teachers, as well as scholars across disciplines, this book aims to re-conceptualize the ways in which writing can best serve ethnically and linguistically diverse students, especially girls.

Bob Dylan and the British Sixties

A Cultural History

Tudor Jones, Coventry University, UK

Britain played a key role in Bob Dylan's career in the 1960s, yet this period in Dylan's artistic development is still under-represented in the vast library of books on Dylan. Tudor Jones rectifies that with this deeply researched, yet highly readable account of Dylan and the British 1960s. He explores the impact of Dylan on British rock stars as well as his intense relationship with his UK fan base. He also provides much interesting social and political context to give the reader a far greater understanding of a core part of Dylan's hugely varied career. This is essential reading for all Dylan fans, as well as for readers interested in the tumultuous social and cultural history of the 1960s.

Contemporary Left Wing Activism Vol 1

Democracy, Participation and Dissent in a Global Context

Joseph Ibrahim and John Michael Roberts, Brunel University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Radical History and Politics

This collection, along with its accompanying volume (Ibrahim and Roberts 2019), examines the emergence of, and the connections between, new types of left-wing democracy and participation. Through an array of examples from different countries, it explains why left-wing activism arises in new and innovative spaces in society and how this joins up with conventional left-wing politics, including parliamentary politics. It demonstrates how these new forms of politics can resonate with the real life experiences of ordinary people and thereby win support for left-wing agendas.

Never Again

Rock Against Racism and the Anti-Nazi League 1976-1982

David Renton

Series: Routledge Studies in Fascism and the Far Right

By 1976, the National Front had become the fourth largest party in Britain. In a context of national decline, racism, and social unrest, the Front won 19% of the vote in elections in Leicester and 100,000 votes in London.

An anti-fascist campaign was born, which combined mass action to deprive the NF of public platforms with a mass cultural movement. Rock Against Racism used punk and reggae music as a weapon. Hundreds of thousands of people painted out racist graffiti, distributed leaflets, persuaded those around them to vote against the right. It was one of the biggest mass movements Britain has ever seen.

This book tells the story of the NF and the campaign which stopped it.

Rethinking the Environment for the Anthropocene

Political Theory and Socionatural Relations in the New Geological Epoch

Edited by Manuel Arias-Maldonado, University Malaga, Spain and Zev Trachtenberg

This book brings together the most current thinking about the Anthropocene in the field of Environmental Political Theory ("EPT"). It displays the distinctive contribution EPT makes to the task of thinking through what "the environment" means in this time of pervasive human influence over natural systems. It will be of interest to scholars already engaged in EPT, but it will also serve as an introduction to the field for students of Political Theory, Philosophy, Environmental Studies, and related disciplines. The text will help readers interested in the Anthropocene from any disciplinary perspective develop a critical understanding of its political meanings.

Political Development and Institutional Change

Cal Jillson

How politics in America works today, how it got that way, and how it's likely to change through reform—these are the themes that pervade every chapter of Cal Jillson's highly lauded American Government: Political Development and Institutional Change. Even in the midst of current challenges, America's past is present in all aspects of the contemporary political system. Jillson uses political development and the dynamics of change as a thematic tool to help students understand how politics works now—and how institutions, participation, and policies have evolved over time. In addition, Jillson helps students think critically about how American democracy might evolve further.

Analyzing American Democracy

Politics and Political Science

Edited by Jon R. Bond and Kevin B. Smith, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, USA

This is an introductory American politics text covering the constitutional framework of American government, political behavior and informal institutions, the formal institutions of American government, and a concluding chapter on public policy. Every chapter highlights the most current thinking in political science research and discusses related public policy.

This text teaches students to think analytically by presenting current political science theories and research in answering the engaging, big questions facing American politics today. It serves as an introduction to the discipline by reflecting the theoretical developments and types of empirical inquiry conducted by researchers.

International Political Economy

Thomas Oatley, University of North Carolina

Broadly viewing the global economy as a political competition that produces winners and losers, International Political Economy holistically and accessibly introduces the field of IPE to students with limited background in political theory, history, and economics. This text surveys major interests and institutions and examines how state and non-state actors pursue wealth and power. Emphasizing fundamental economic concepts as well as the interplay between domestic and international politics, International Political Economy not only explains how the global economy works; it also encourages students to think critically about how economic policy is made in the context of globalization.

Policy Analysis as Problem Solving

A Flexible and Evidence-Based Framework

Rachel Meltzer and Alex Schwartz

Drawing extensively from real-life cases, Policy Analysis as Problem Solving helps students develop the analytic skills necessary to advise government officials and non-profit executives on a wide range of policy issues. The book provides succinct but thorough discussions of the key elements of the policy-analytic process, including problem definition, objectives and criteria, development of alternative policy options, and analysis of these alternatives. Integrating policy implementation into policy analysis, the text draws on insights from behavioral economics to discuss key aspects of policy analysis.

Anti-Islamic Protest in the UK

Policy Responses to the Far Right

William Allchoron

Series: Extremism and Democracy

Demonstrations by far-right groups such as the English Defence League, Britain First and PEGIDA have caused considerable social and civic unrest in UK cities for nearly a decade. But how should policymakers respond to far-right and anti-Muslim activism? Drawing on extensive primary research with stakeholders, authorities and policymakers, this book investigates the political, socio-economic and historic trends that fuel this form of political extremism and maps the types of policy responses available to local politicians, police forces and behind-the-scenes policy officials involved in the day-to-day management of anti-Islamic street protest.

Contesting Global Environmental Knowledge, Norms and Governance

Edited by M J Peterson, University of Massachusetts, USA

Series: Transforming Environmental Politics and Policy

Through theoretical discussions and case studies, this volume explores how processes of contestation about knowledge, norms, and governance processes shape efforts to promote sustainability through international environmental governance. The contributors examine how attempts to incorporate more than one stream of expert knowledge and to include lay knowledge alongside it have played out in efforts to create and maintain multilateral agreements relating to environmental concerns. It will interest scholars and graduate students of political science, global governance, international environmental politics and global policy making. Policy analysts should also find it useful.

Emotions, Protest, Democracy

Collective Identities in Contemporary Spain

Emmy Eklundh, Kings College London, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Democratic Theory

Using radical theories of democracy, Emmy Eklundh masterfully constructs an analytical framework based on concept of visceral ties, which sees emotions and affect as constitutive of any collective identity. She later demonstrates empirically, using both ethnographic method and social media analysis, how the movement Indignados has stronger visceral ties than Podemos. This shows the importance of emotions and affect for collective identities, and how representation and signification are reliant upon affective investment, which has vast implications for any creation of political subjectivity.

Free Movement and Non-discrimination in an Unequal Union

Edited by Susanne K. Schmidt, University of Bremen, Germany, Michael Blauberger, University of Salzburg, Austria and Dorte Sindbjerg Martinsen, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

Series: Journal of European Public Policy Series

The EU's fundamental principles on free movement and non-discrimination have long challenged the traditional closure of the welfare state. Whereas EU-wide free movement and national welfare appeared largely unproblematic before Eastern enlargement, the increased differences among EU member states in economic development and welfare provision have resulted in fears about potential welfare migration. This book shows the normative limits of a strict non-discriminatory approach to EU citizens' access to national welfare, and analyses how the European Court of Justice developed its jurisprudence. It was first published as a special issue of the Journal of European Public Policy

German-American Relations in the 21st Century

A Fragile Friendship

Edited by Klaus Larres, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA and Ruth Wittlinger, Durham University, UK

The relationship between Germany and the USA has recently resumed its rightful place as a significant field of scholarship within international politics. President Trump's difficult personal relationship with German Chancellor Angela Merkel, and his denigration of everything the western world – including the US itself – has stood for since 1949, have given a new significance to German-American relations in practice and theory. This book offers an empirical and conceptual analysis of German-American relations in the 21st century, highlighting the serious and perhaps unprecedented challenges the two countries face at present. National indifference and the History of Nationalism in Modern Europe

Edited by Maarten van Ginderachter, University of Antwerp, Belgium and Jon Fox, University of Bristol, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern European History

National indifference is one of the most innovative notions historians have brought to the study of nationalism in recent years. The concept questions the mass character of nationalism in East Central Europe at the turn of the nineteenth and twentieth century.

As with all ground-breaking research, the literature on national indifference has not only revolutionized how we understand nationalism, over time, it has also revealed a new set of challenges. This volume brings together experienced scholars with the next generation, in a collaborative effort to push the geographic, historical, and conceptual boundaries of national indifference 2.0.

Iran's Foreign Policy in the South Caucasus

Relations with Azerbaijan and Armenia

Marzieh Kouhi-Esfahani

Series: Durham Modern Middle East and Islamic World Series

Iran has an important role as a regional power, lying between Central Asia/the Caucasus and the Gulf region on one hand, and on the other between the Mediterranean/Levant region and South Asia. This book explores Iran's role as a regional power, focusing on relations with the countries of the South Caucasus - Azerbaijan and Armenia. It outlines the historical context including the Persian Empire's rule of these countries, discusses Iran's approach to regional foreign policy and how internal factors shape policy, and assesses Iran-Azerbaijan and Iran-Armenia bilateral relations. The book concludes by considering how relations in the region are likely to develop in

Liberal World Order and Its Critics

Civilisational States and Cultural Commonwealths

Adrian Pabst, University of Kent, UK

Series: World Politics and Dialogues of Civilizations

This provocative book contends that the liberal world order is illiberal and undemocratic – intolerant about the cultural values of ordinary people in the West and elsewhere while concentrating power in the hands of unaccountable Western elites and Western-dominated institutions. To avoid a descent into a violent culture clash, this book proposes radical ideas for international order that take the form of cultural commonwealths – social bonds and cross-border cultural ties on which international trust and cooperation depend.

Norm Dilemmas in Humanitarian Intervention

How Bosnia Changed NATO

Yuki Abe, Kumamoto University, Japan

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

A detailed case study of NATO during the Bosnian war, this book explores how the differing views and preferences among the Western states on the intervention in Bosnia were reconciled as they agreed on the outline of NATO's reform. It examines detailed decision-making processes in Britain, France, Germany and the USA. In particular Abe analyses why conflicting norms led to an emphasis on conflict prevention capacity, rather than simply on armed intervention capacity.

Multinational Rapid Response Mechanisms

From Institutional Proliferation to Institutional Exploitation

Edited by John Karlsrud, Norwegian Institute of International Affairs, Norway and Yf Reykers, KU Leuven, Belgium

Series: Global Institutions

The track record of military rapid response mechanisms, troops on standby, ready to be deployed to a crisis within a short time frame by intergovernmental organizations, remains disappointing. Yet, many of the obstacles to multinational actors launching a rapid and effective military response in times of crisis are largely similar. This book is the first comprehensive and comparative contribution to explore and identify the key factors that hamper and enable the development and deployment of multinational rapid response mechanisms.

This work will be of interest to scholars and students of peacebuilding, peacekeeping, legitimacy and international relations.

The Agency of the Governed in the Global South

Normative and Institutional Change

Edited by Anke Draude, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany

Series: ThirdWorlds

Research on global norm diffusion and institutional transfer has often neglected the agency of the governed. This collection argues that areas of limited statehood – the lack of state capacities in most parts of the global South – provides opportunities for the governed to raise their voices and be listened to. Thus, local people in the global South on the receiving end of development cooperation, state building, or security interventions can significantly shape global dynamics of normative and institutional change. Perceptions of the European Union's Identity in International Relations

Edited by Anna Skolimowska, Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński University (UKSW), Poland.

Series: Critical European Studies

This book examines the perception of European Union's identity by the main actors in international relations. Analysing issues related to public discourse in third countries as demonstrated by, amongst others, their political elites, civil society, and think-tanks, the book highlights a 'normative gap' with regards to the European Union's self-definition/perception and its perception in the international environment.

Refugee Governance, State and Politics in the Middle East

Edited by Zeynep Şahin Mencütek

Series: Routledge Global Cooperation Series

This book examines the patterns of legal, political and institutional responses to large-scale Syrian forced migration. It analyses the motivations behind neighbouring countries' policy responses, how their responses change over time and how they have an impact on regional and global cooperation. Looking in particular at Turkey, Lebanon and Jordan, three of the world's top refugee-hosting countries, this book explores how refugee governance differs across countries and why they diverge. Scholars and students of Comparative Politics, International Relations, Refugee Studies, Global Governance and Middle Eastern Studies will find this book a useful contribution to their

Rethinking Silence, Voice and Agency in Contested Gendered Terrains

Edited by Jane L. Parpart and Swati Parashar

Series: Gender in a Global/Local World

Drawing on a wide range of feminist approaches, this volume examines the various ways that silence and voice have been contested in feminist research, and their impact on how agency is understood and performed, particularly in situations of conflict and insecurity. The collection makes an important and timely contribution to interdisciplinary feminist theorizing of silence, voice and agency in global politics.

Secrecy in European Politics

Edited by Berthold Rittberger, University of Munich, Germany and Klaus H. Goetz, University of Munich, Germany
Series: West European Politics

This book examines secrecy in European politics across a range of EU and national settings and policy domains, exploring the technological, social and political developments which appear to signal the end of privacy and the rapid expansion of political secrecy in European multi-level settings. The tensions between democratic accountability, with its transparency requirements, and political secrecy, typically justified on grounds of effectiveness of state action, have become more marked and more politicised. The Data Economy

Implications from Singapore

Edited by Sree Kumar, Sree Kumar Siddique & Co., Warren B. Chik, Singapore Management University, See-Kiong Ng, National University of Singapore and Sin Gee Teo, Infocomm Research, Singapore

Series: Routledge Research in Public Administration and Public Policy

This book outlines the findings and conclusions of a multi-disciplinary team of data scientists, lawyers and economists tasked with studying both the possibilities of exploiting the rich datasets made available from many human-technology interactions, and the practical and legal limitations in trying to do so. It revolves around a core case study of Singapore's public transport system, using data both from the private company operating the contactless payment system (EZ-Link) and the government agency responsible for public transport infrastructure (LTA).

The Politics and Economics of Brexit

Edited by Simon Bulmer and Lucia Quaglia, University of Bologna, Italy

Series: Journal of European Public Policy Series

This book investigates the implications of Brexit for the EU and the UK, in the context of the long-term evolution of UK-EU relations. The authors relate these findings to debates within the literature on EU policy-making, comparative politics, and political economy. The book explores key policy areas, namely the single market, finance, and migration; as well as thematic issues including lessons from Brexit for theories of integration, the balance of power in the EU post-Brexit, the evolution of domestic political contestation, and the impact of Brexit on domestic politics in the UK. The Radical Left and Social Transformation

Strategies of Augmentation and Reorganization

Edited by Robert Latham, York University, Toronto, Canada, Karen Bridget Murray, York University, Toronto, Canada, Julian von Bargen, York University, Toronto, Canada and A.T. Kingsmith, York University, Toronto, Canada

This book draws upon and re-engages with a long history of Marxian-anchored thought to analyse the potential for social transformation through a reinvigorated radical Left, all within the context of the ascendance of an increasingly ethno-nationalist, patriarchal and authoritarian far Right worldwide. The authors identify and reflect on strategies, tactics and possibilities for analysing and intervening in advanced capitalist societies by increasing and deepening popular participation and support on the far Left. Developing Intelligence Theory

New Challenges and Competing Perspectives

Edited by Peter Gill, University of Leicester, UK, Stephen Marrin, James Madison University, USA and Mark Phythian, University of Leicester, UK

Developing Intelligence Theory analyses the current state of intelligence theorisation, provides a guide to a range of approaches and perspectives, and points towards future research agendas in this field. Key questions discussed include: the role of intelligence theory in organising the study of intelligence; how (and how far) explanations of intelligence have progressed in the last decade; and how intelligence theory should develop from here.

The book shows the current parameters of debates in intelligence theory and also points to ways in which the study of intelligence continues to develop. This book was originally published as a special issue of Intelligence and National Security

Reshaping the Chinese Military

The PLA's Roles and Missions in the Xi Jinping Era

Edited by Richard A. Bitzinger and James Char, S.Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Asian Security Studies

This edited volume examines the recalibration of the People's Liberation Army's roles and missions in China's domestic and foreign policymaking since Xi Jinping's ascension to power in late 2012. This book explores how China's growing military prowess, along with Beijing's ongoing shift away from "keeping a low profile," owes much to the policies of the China's Communist Party under Xi Jinping's leadership. The chapters in the book share a central theme: the recalibration of the People's Liberation Army's (PLA) roles and missions since Xi Jinping assumed the trifecta of Party-state-military power.

Literary and Non-literary Responses Towards 9/11

South Asia and Beyond

Edited by Nukhbah Taj Langah, Associate Professor of English and Dean of Humanities, Forman Christian College University, Lahore, Pakistan

This book presents a range of analytical responses towards 9/11 through a critical review of literary, non-literary and cultural representations. It examines the ways in which this event has shaped and complicated the relationship between various national and religious identities in contemporary world history. The work reconciles both eclectic and pragmatic approaches by analyzing the stereotypes of nationhood and identities as also by questioning theoretical concepts in the context of latest political developments. The essays focus on discourses, themes, imagery and symbolism from across fiction and non-fiction, films, art, music, political, literary and artistic movements.

2nd Edition • NEW EDITION

The Structure of Indian Society

Then and Now

A. M. Shah

This book examines how it has evolved and proliferated through an amalgamation of institutions and practices which has divided and united people across communities through the centuries. It highlights the changing structural features of Indian society including shifts in the structures of social groups, institutions and processes, such as caste, tribe, sect, and rural-urban relations. Based on a wealth of field research as well as archival material, this second edition, with four new chapters, will be a key text for students and scholars of sociology and social anthropology, political science, modern history, development studies, and South Asian studies.

Federation of Himalayan Kingdoms

Looking for Greater Nepal

Awadhesh C. Sinha

Series: Nepal and Himalayan Studies

This book traces the history and politics of the Greater Nepal movement. It looks at major events in modern South Asia, in and around the eastern Himalaya region in particular — colonialism, Independence and Partition, the Chinese aggression in Tibet, formation of Bangladesh and the merger of Sikkim with India, among others — which deeply affected the nature of democratic movements in Nepal. The volume will of great interest to scholars and researchers of international relations, modern history, sociology and social anthropology, politics, South Asian studies, area studies, especially Nepal and Himalayan studies, as well as policy makers and government think tanks.

Adivasis, Migrants and the State in India

Jagannath Ambagudia, Associate Prof, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies, School of Social Sciences & Humanities; Chairperson, Unit for Research & Development, Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Guwahati Campus, Assam, India

This book looks at the contested relationship between Adivasis or the indigenous peoples, migrants and the state in India. It delves into the nature and dynamics of competition and resource conflicts between the Adivasis and the migrants. Drawing on the ground experiences of the Dandakaranya Project — when Bengali migrants from erstwhile East Pakistan (now Bangladesh) were rehabilitated in eastern and central India — the author traces the connection between resource scarcity and the emergence of Naxalite politics in the region in tandem with the key role played by the state.

From Popular Movements to Rebellion

The Naxalite Decade

Edited by Ranabir Samadar

This book argues that without an understanding of the popular sources of the rebellion of that time, the age of the Naxalite revolt will remain beyond our understanding. It brings out for the first time unknown peasant heroes and heroines of that era, analyses the nature of the urban revolt, and shows how the urban revolt of that time anticipated street protests and occupy movements that were to shake the world forty-fifty years later.

Dawn of Democracy in the Eastern Himalayan Kingdoms

The 20th Century

Awadhesh C. Sinha

Series: Nepal and Himalayan Studies

This book traces the beginnings of democracy in the three Himalayan kingdoms of Sikkim, Nepal and Bhutan. Charting the political experimentations that took place in the former buffer states under monarchies to establish democratic regimes, this book investigates their varying degrees of success, and offers a critical commentary on the consequent socio-political histories. A comprehensive analysis of an unexplored chapter in South Asian history, it will be of an immense interest to scholars and researchers of international relations, modern history, sociology and social anthropology, politics, South Asian studies, area studies, especially Nepal and Himalayan studies.

Gender Dynamics, Feminist Activism and Social Transformation in China

Edited by Guoguang Wu, Yuan Feng and Helen Lansdowne

Series: China Policy Series

This book explores the extent to which women have been initiators, mobilizers, and driving forces of social transformation in China. The book considers how conceptions of women's roles have changed as China has moved from state socialism to engagement with capitalist globalisation, examines the growth of women's gender and sexual consciousness and campaigns for women's rights, including for marginalised social and gender groups, and discusses women's roles in society-state interactions, including many forms of social activism, cultural events, educational innovations, and more.

Gender, Nationalism, and Genocide in Bangladesh

Naristhan/Ladyland

Azra Rashid, McGill University, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian History

This book engages with the existing feminist scholarship on gender, nationalism and genocide to investigate the dominant representations of gender in the 1971 genocide in Bangladesh and juxtaposes the testimonies of survivors and national memory of that war to create a shift of perspective that demands a breaking of silence. The author explores and challenges how gender has operated in service of Bangladeshi nationalist ideology, in particular as it is represented at the Liberation War Museum. The archive of this museum in Bangladesh is viewed as a site of institutionalized dialogue between the 1971 genocide and the national memory of that event.

Hereditary Physicians of Kerala

Traditional Medicine and Ayurveda in Modern India

Indudharan Menon, National Centre for Biological Sciences, Bangalore, India

This book examines the history and evolution of Ayurveda and other indigenous medical traditions in juxtaposition with their encounter with colonial modernity. Through the lens of hereditary folk and Ayurvedic practitioners, it focuses on Kerala's heterogeneous medical traditions and presents them against the backdrop of the geographical, historical, socio-cultural, ethnographic and regional contexts in which they developed and transformed. The author explores the world of Kerala's last traditionally trained hereditary practitioners (folk healers, poison therapists, Sanskrit-speaking Muslim Ayurvedic practitioners and the legendary Brahman Ashtavaidyan physicians).

Identity and Marginality in India

Settlement Experience of Afghan Migrants

Anwesha Ghosh, Centre for Studies in International Relations and Development (CSIRD), Kolkata, India

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book is a study of the displaced Afghan migrant population in India, in particular the persecuted Sikhs and Hindus who are religious minorities in Afghanistan and make up a majority of Afghan migrants in India. It explores the relationship between acculturation and identity development. By focusing on the interactions between the Afghan immigrant population and the Indian society, the author analyses how the community negotiates identity and marginality in a country that does not recognize them as refugees.

Interrogating Communalism

Violence, Citizenship and Minorities in South India

Salah Punathil, Assistant Prof, Centre for Regional Studies, University of Hyderabad, India; Post-Doctoral Research Fellow, Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious & Ethnic Diversity, Göttingen, Germany

Series: Religion and Citizenship

This book examines conflict and violence among religious minorities and the implication on the idea of citizenship in contemporary India. Going beyond the usual Hindu-Muslim question, it situates communalism in the context of conflicts between Muslims and Christians. By tracing the long history of conflict between the Marakkayar Muslims and Mukkuvar Christians in South India, it explores the notion of 'mobilization of religious identity' within the discourse on communal violence in South Asia as also discusses the spatial dynamics in violent conflicts.

Japan's "New Deal" for China

Propaganda Aimed at Americans before Pearl Harbor

June Grasso, Boston University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

In the decade leading up to the attack on Pearl Harbour, several Japanese institutions set about trying to convince Americans to support Tokyo's plans and ambitions for China. This book analyzes the original publications produced by these organizations and explores the methods used by the Japanese to influence American attitudes and policy. Examining original Japanese English-language propaganda sources from the 1920s and 1930s, this book will be of huge interest to historians of Japan, China, the US and World War II more broadly.

Leadership and Nationalism in Azerbaijan

Ali Mardan bey Topchibashov, Founder and Creator

Jamil Hasanli, Formerly Baku State University and Khazar University, Azerbaijan

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

This book analyses and presents the life of the first independent Azerbaijani political leaders. Based on extensive research from archives in Azerbaijan, France, Georgia, Russia (Moscow and Kazan) and the UK, some of which are newly accessible, it traces the political personality of Topchibashov as one of the largest Muslim leaders and founder of the Azerbaijan Republic. At the same time, it offers insights into the history of the formation and creation of the national consciousness of the Russian Muslims and tracks the challenges in the national and religious policy of the Imperial administration of the Soviet Union.

Megacity Seoul

Urbanization and the Development of Modern South Korea

Yu-Min Joo, Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in Korean Studies

In Asia, there are a growing number of gigantic megacities, accompanied by a series of speculative and extravagant megaprojects. Amid the fast-paced urban and development challenges, many Asian governments have started to search for replicable and inspirational cases in Asia. South Korea and its capital city Seoul are among frequently referenced models. However, South Korea's "economic miracle" of the late twentieth century has been mostly studied through an economic policy lens. This book revisits the development of South Korea by looking at its urban dimension and exploring the city of Seoul as a developmental megaproject.

Of Colonial Bungalows and Piano Lessons

Memoirs of an Indian Woman

Edited by Malavika Karlekar

Of Colonial Bungalows and Piano Lessons can be read as a metaphor — as an icon — of the encounter between cultures. The memoir is based on Monica Chanda's recollections between about 1913 and 1927, of life in Calcutta, districts of undivided Bengal, holidays in Kashmir and in Europe. She presents facts and situations as she saw them — though there are a few times when emotions of love, fear and excitement ripple through the pages of this tightly-woven memoir.

Orthodox Religion and Politics in Contemporary Eastern Europe

On Multiple Secularisms and Entanglements

Edited by Tobias Koellner

Series: Routledge Religion, Society and Government in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet States

This book explores the relationship between Orthodox religion and politics in Eastern Europe, Russia and Georgia. It demonstrates how as these societies undergo substantial transformation Orthodox religion can be both a limiting and an enabling factor, how the relationship between religion and politics is complex, and how the spheres of religion and politics complement, reinforce, influence, and sometimes contradict each other. Considering a range of issues, with examples from a wide range of countries with significant Orthodox religious groups, and setting the present situation in its historical context the book provides a rich picture of a subject which has been too often oversimplified.

Putin's Third Term as Russia's President, 2012-18

Larry Black

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book provides a comprehensive and systematic overview of Putin's third term as Russia's president. It covers political, international relations, economic and social issues, and provides a balanced assessment of Putin's successes and failures. These include the conflict in Ukraine, the annexation of Crimea, scandals associated with the Olympics, Russia's increasing involvement with Asia and shifts in the economy away from huge reliance on energy resources. The book sets Putin's activities as president in their wider context, discussing his overall popularity, the weakness of potential opposition and the development of the Russian Federation as a relatively new state.

Security, Society and the State in the Caucasus

Edited by Kevoork Oskanian and Derek Averre

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

The Caucasus continues to be an area of instability and conflict. This book explores in detail at both the local and regional level the interaction between state and society and the impact of external actors' engagement in the region within a conceptual framework linking security and democracy. Unlike other books on the subject, which tend to examine the issues from a Western political science perspective, this book incorporates insights from sociology, geography and anthropology as well as politics and contains contributions from scholars who have carried out extensive research in the region within a European Commission-funded Seventh Framework Programme project.

Re-engineering Affordable Care Policy in China

Is Marketization a Solution?

Peter Nan-shong Lee

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Presenting a comprehensive examination of China's medical care system, this book tackles issues of policymaking, organization, management and financing in the context of the provision of affordable care in China. Making use of extensive field investigations, interviews and a thorough analysis of documents, this book examines the re-structuring of the medical care system, spanning more than three and half decades from 1979 to the present day. Assessing the difficulties of regulatory control in the health care sector, it also explores theoretical alternatives, including post-Weberian constructs of uncertainty and control, as well as franchise and asymmetric information in market transactions.

South Asian Folklore in Transition

Crafting New Horizons

Edited by Frank J. Korom, Boston University, USA and Leah K. Lowthorp, University of Oregon, USA

Series: Routledge South Asian History and Culture Series

This book reinvigorates South Asian folklore studies by providing fresh studies and new models for studying the "lore" and the "life" of people in the region, as well as their engagement with the world at large. By bringing Muslims, material culture, diasporic horizons, global interventions and politics to bear on South Asian folklore studies, the authors hope to stimulate more dialogue across theoretical and geographical borders to infuse the study of the Indian Subcontinent's cultural traditions with a new sense of relevance that will be of interest to areal specialists and folklorists in general. Russian Culture in the Age of Globalization

Edited by Vlad Strukov and Sarah Hudspeth

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book brings together scholars from a variety of disciplines who use different methodologies to interrogate the changing nature of Russian culture in the twenty-first century. The book considers a range of cultural forms that have been instrumental in globalising Russia. These include literature, art, music, film, media, the internet, sport, urban spaces, and the Russian language. It pays special attention to the processes by which cultural producers negotiate between Russian government and global cultural capital. Overall, the book provides a conceptual framework for analyzing Russia as a transnational entity and its contemporary culture in the globalized world.

Translingual Words

An East Asian Lexical Encounter with English

Jieun Kiaer

Series: Routledge Studies in East Asian Translation

Translingual Words is a detailed case study on lexical integration, or mediation, occurring between East Asian languages and English(es). In Part I, specific examples from global linguistic corpora are used to discuss the issues involved in lexical interaction between East Asia and the English-speaking world. Part II explores the spread of East Asian words in English, while Part III discusses English words which can be found in East Asian languages. This book presents a novel approach on hybrid words by challenging the orthodox ideas on lexical borrowing and explaining the dynamic growth of new words based on translingualism and transculturalism.

Women's and Gender Studies in India

Crossings

Edited by Anu Aneja, Professor, School of Gender & Development Studies, Indira Gandhi National Open University, New Delhi, India

This book frames the major debates and contemporary issues in women's and gender studies in India. It locates them in the context of key theories, their interlinkages, and significant crossings and overlaps within the field while juxtaposing feminist and queer perspectives.

The essays in the volume foreground emerging challenges as well as offer clues to future trajectories for women's and gender studies in the country through a comprehensive and interdisciplinary survey of intersectionality in gender, activism and theory; caste and class; feminist, queer and transgender studies; femininity and masculinity; disability; feminist pedagogy; and Indian and western feminisms.

The Middle East in Modern World History

Ernest Tucker, United States Naval Academy, USA

The Middle East in Modern World History examines how global trends over the last 200 years have shaped the Middle East and how these trends were affected by the region's development. This edition extends coverage to the present day and includes more thematic and interpretive discussion on the impact of global migration and the evolution of the roles of women. It also provides more theoretical insights into current historical research and recent developments in the region. Clearly written and supported by maps, images, discussion questions, further reading, a chronology and glossary, it is the ideal textbook for all students of the history of the modern Middle East within a global context.

Religious Zionism and the Six Day War

From Realism to Messianism

Avi Sagi and Dov Schwartz

Series: Routledge Jewish Studies Series

Before the Six-Day War, religious-Zionism had limited its concern to the protection of specific religious interests, with its representatives having little share in the determination of Israel's national agenda. Fifty years after it, religious-Zionism has turned into one of Israeli society's dominant elements. Delving into this dramatic transformation, the book depicts the Six-Day War as a constitutive event that indelibly changed the political and religious consciousness of religious-Zionists. The book will be of interest to readers and scholars concerned with changing dynamic societies and with the study of religion and particularly with the relationship between religion and politics.

Rival Conceptions of Freedom in Modern Iran

An Intellectual History of the Constitutional Revolution

Ahmad Hashemi

Series: Iranian Studies

Rival Conceptions of Freedom in Modern Iran is an original historiographic examination of the idea of freedom in early modern Iran within a larger context of the formation of modern Muslim thought. The study develops an appropriate method for the historiography of ideas by taking into consideration cultural, linguistic, and socio-political limitations and obstacles to free thinking in closed societies.

The Russians in Israel

A New Ethnic Group in a Tribal Society

Majid Ibrahim Al-Haj

Series: Routledge Studies on the Arab-Israeli Conflict

This comprehensive study covers the thirty-year period since the beginning of the immigrant influx from the former Soviet Union in the 1990s and incorporates data based quantitative and qualitative research methods. It provides an important opportunity to examine identity and patterns of adaptation among immigrants, with the added perspective afforded by the passage of time. Moreover, it sheds light on the Russians' cumulative influence on Israeli society and on the Israel-Palestinian conflict. Considering all groups within Israeli society, it covers Palestinian-Arab citizens in Israel who have almost never been included in analyses addressing questions of Jewish immigration to Israel.

Debating African Philosophy

Perspectives on Identity, Decolonial Ethics and Comparative Philosophy
 Edited by George Hull, University of Cape Town, South Africa

In African countries there has been a surge of intellectual interest in foregrounding ideas and thinkers of African origin that have been unjustly ignored or marginalized. This book demonstrates the potential for constructive interchange between currents of thought from African philosophy and other intellectual currents within philosophy. Showing how foregrounding Africa can help with the project of renewing and improving the discipline of philosophy worldwide, this book will stimulate and challenge everyone with an interest in philosophy, and is essential reading for upper level undergraduate students, postgraduate students and scholars of African and Africana philosophy.

Contested Criminalities in Zimbabwean Fiction

Tendai Mangena, Great Zimbabwe University

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book addresses the ways in which writers deploy the trope of contested criminality to expose Zimbabwe's socially and politically oppressive cultures in a wide range of novels and short stories published in English. Some of the most influential authors that are examined in this book are Yvonne Vera, Petina Gappah, NoViolet Bulawayo, Brian Chikwava, Christopher Mlalazi, Tendai Huchu and Virginia Phiri. The author uses the Zimbabwean experience to engage with critical issues facing the African continent and the world, providing a thoughtful reading of contemporary debates on illegal migration, homophobia, state criminality and gender inequalities.

Contesting Inequalities, Identities and Rights in Ethiopia

Data D Barata

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

This book examines the relationship between inequalities and identities in relation to an unprecedented state advocacy of "ethnic rights" in post-civil war Ethiopia. Data D. Barata contributes to this debate through a nuanced ethnographic analysis of why identities with distinct notions of inequality persist, even after being attacked and ideologically repudiated. The contestations and struggles over political representation, local governance, land and religion that the book examines are shaped by the global human rights discourse that has inspired millions of Africans to confront entrenched structures of power.

Displaced Mozambicans in Postcolonial Tanzania

Refugee Power, Mobility, Education, and Rural Development

Joanna T. Tague, Denison University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Africa

This book follows the lives of a broad swath of Mozambican men, women, and children—refugees, asylum seekers, liberation leaders, students, migrant workers—all displaced during the war for independence from Portugal (1964-1974). In this book, Joanna Tague juxtaposes the exilic experiences of the educated minority with the majority of refugees settled in official camps. Read together, their lives constitute a mosaic through which to explore myriad ways in which the displaced acted as their own agents during the wars for liberation attendant to African decolonization in the mid-twentieth century.

Miscegenation, Identity and Status in Colonial Africa

Intimate Colonial Encounters

Lawrence Mbogoni, William Paterson University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Africa

Throughout the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries the colonial administrations in British East-Central African colonies considered inter-racial sexual liaisons to be a serious and recurrent "problem". Using archival sources and secondary literature, the author highlights how colonial inter-racial intimate encounters became intertwined with conceptions of 'race' and what it meant to be European, African ("native") and racially mixed. Intended for students and scholars interested in the study of 'race' and sexuality in colonial Africa, the book will provide an understanding of why inter-racial liaisons despite of rigid racial barriers were not easy to legislate against.

Violence and Candidate Nomination in Africa

Edited by Merete Bech Seeberg, Aarhus University, Denmark, Michael Wahman, Michigan State University, USA and Svend-Erik Skaaning, Aarhus University, Denmark

Series: Democratization Special Issues

This comprehensive volume brings together a diverse set of scholars to analyse candidate nomination, intra-party democracy, and election violence in Africa. Through a combination of comparative studies and country-specific case studies spanning much of Sub-Saharan Africa, including Kenya, Zambia, and South Africa, the authors shed light on violence during candidate nomination processes within political parties. They investigate whether the drivers of nomination violence are identical to those of general election violence, and which subnational locations are most likely to experience nomination violence. This book was originally published as a special issue of the journal Democratization.

Reimagining Science and Statecraft in Postcolonial Kenya

Stories from an African Scientist

Denielle Elliott, York University, Canada

Series: Routledge Contemporary Africa

Focusing on the Kenya Medical Research Institute, this book challenges the euro-dominant fields of science in both the contemporary and historical and offers an alternative retelling which aims to destabilize colonial and neo-colonial narratives about African science. The book asks: In which ways do the colonial ghosts of early medical research infuse the struggles of postcolonial scientists to build national scientific projects? How were postcolonial nation building projects tied up with the dreams and visions of African scientists? How do imperial effects today shape contemporary medical research and national sovereignty? Lastly, how might we reimagine African medicine and biosciences?

The Law and Autonomous Vehicles

Matthew Channon, Lucy McCormick and Kyriaki Nousseia, LEXARB, Greece

Series: Contemporary Commercial Law

When will we see autonomous vehicles on our roads? The answer is that to some degree, they are already here. Numerous organisations are testing fully autonomous prototypes on public roads in the UK, and even commercially available vehicles already have several 'quasi-autonomous' features. Notably, the UK Parliament has passed the Automated and Electric Vehicles Act 2018.

This book analyses the key legal issues facing autonomous vehicles, including testing on public roads, insurance, product liability, and cyber security and data protection. It also examines the approach being taken in other jurisdictions, including Austria, Germany, Greece, Italy, the USA, and South Africa.

Police Administration

Gary W. Corder, Professor Emeritus, Kutztown

Police Administration examines police administration from multiple perspectives. Coverage of management functions and organizational principles is streamlined while providing a stronger emphasis on diversity principles and on developing police agencies as learning organizations. Case studies based on real-life events invite students to practice managing the conflicting circumstances, and Modern Policing blog posts offer up-to-date news and breaking developments in the policing world.

Suitable for undergraduates studying police management and supervision in the US, and for practitioners seeking promotion to senior management roles.

Arabs at Home and in the World

Human Rights, Gender Politics, and Identity

Edited by Karla McKanders, Vanderbilt University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Human Rights Law

This volume brings together an interdisciplinary group of scholars from the United States, Middle East, and North Africa, to discuss and critically analyze the intersection of gender and human rights laws as applied to individuals of Arab descent. It seeks to raise consciousness at the intersection of gender, identity and human rights as it relates to Arabs at home and throughout the diaspora. The context of revolution and the destabilizing impact of armed conflicts in the region are used to critique and examine the utility of human rights law to address contemporary human rights issues through extra-legal strategies.

Brexit and Aviation Law

Jan Walulik, University of Warsaw, Poland

Series: Legal Perspectives on Brexit

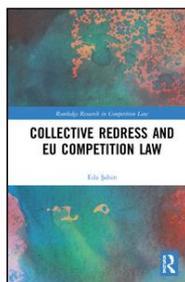

Focusing on the consequences of Brexit for Aviation Law, this book presents key legal issues for aviation business and administration, as well as all major stakeholders potentially affected by Brexit. This includes airlines, airports, aerospace manufactures, regulatory and judicial institutions, passengers and employees. The book will indicate groups of legal acts disturbed by Brexit and those few that will remain untouched. It will develop on this basis a digest of regulatory and institutional problems that will arise in various areas of the sector. Finally, the short title will deliberate on the directions of possible actions which may be undertaken to avoid post-Brexit legal incoherence

Collective Redress and EU Competition Law

Eda Şahin

Series: Routledge Research in Competition Law

Exploring obstacles to effective compensation of victims of competition infringements, this book categorises the types of victims harmed and the types of losses arisen from these infringements to identify to what extent there is a need for enhanced private competition law enforcement in the European Union (EU) and the best way to address this need. It shows that there is a genuine need for facilitating consumer damages actions and that consumer claims are the only claims that can be pursued in a collective redress action.

Constitutional Law, Democracy and Development: Decentralization and Governance in Uganda

Douglas Karekoma Singiza

This book considers whether decentralisation can foster democracy, facilitate development and improve tolerance between ethnic communities. Drawing on events in Uganda, it analyses the institutional architecture within the context of normative and international discourse on decentralisation. It explores whether the existing legal framework ensures the smooth devolution process necessary for decentralised governance to succeed. In so doing, the work offers lessons that are critically important not only for Uganda but any other developing nation that has adopted decentralisation as a state-restructuring strategy.

Culture and the Judiciary

The Anthropologist Judge

Ilenia Ruggiu

Series: Cultural Diversity and Law

This book reconstructs the constitutional and anthropological narratives and the legal techniques used by Western judges to face the challenges posed by multiculturalism. After identifying the recurrent themes or topoi used by judges and lawyers, this book critically analyzes them, evaluates their persuasive power and suggests a "cultural test" that gathers together the crucial questions to be answered when solving a multicultural dispute. The "cultural test" is a matrix that guides the judge, lawyers and legislatures across the intricate paths of multiculturalism, to assure a relational dialogue between the law and anthropology.

Environmental Change, Forced Displacement and International Law from legal protection gaps to protection solutions

Isabel M. Borges

Series: Law and Migration

This book explores the extent to which those suffering from forced cross-border displacement as a result of environmental change are protected under international law. It addresses two basic questions: whether and to what extent existing international law protects environmental displacement? Whether and how existing formalized regional complementary protection standards can interpretively solidify and conceptualize protection for environmental displacement? The analysis also suggests that the European Union is regionally orientated protection regime can help states to consolidate an evolving protection paradigm of proactive and reactive measures being erected at the international level.

Ethical, Legal and Social Aspects of Healthcare for Migrants

Perspectives from the UK and Germany

Edited by Katja Kuehlmeyer, Corinna Klingler and Richard Huxtable, University of Bristol, UK

Series: Law and Migration

Presenting a comparative study of the UK and Germany, this volume increases our knowledge of a broad spectrum of challenges in healthcare provision for migrants. Each country has confronted similar challenges, albeit offering different responses. Migrants are considered not only as patients but also as healthcare professionals. The focus is predominantly on ethics, with insights from healthcare law, and clinical and sociological perspectives. By informing researchers, politicians and healthcare practitioners about approaches to challenges in healthcare provision for migrants, the work aims to inform the development of adequate and ethically legitimate strategies.

EU Law, Fundamental Rights and National Democracy

Eduardo Gill-Pedro

Series: Routledge Research in Constitutional Law

The orthodox view is that rights complement democracy. This book critically examines this view in the context of EU fundamental rights, specifically in situations where EU law requires member states to respect EU fundamental rights. It sets out a legal theoretical account of how human rights can complement democracy, arguing that they can do only if they are understood as both the conditions for the democratic process, and the outcome of such a democratic process. It examines the demands which the Court of Justice of the EU imposes on the national orders in respect of EU fundamental rights.

Feminism, Postfeminism and Legal Theory

Beyond the Gendered Subject?

Edited by Dorothea Gozdecka and Anne Macduff

While there is much debate about Post-Feminism, what it is and its role in politics, it poses new and important questions for a range of contexts. But whilst Post-Feminism has become increasingly influential in literature, popular culture, and philosophy, it has so far received comparatively little attention in law and legal studies. This book aims to remedy this situation. Gathering a range of international scholars, and addressing a range of legal issues, it examines the idea of Post-Feminism and assesses its contemporary relevance for law and for legal theory.

Free Will and the Law

New Perspectives

Edited by Allan McCay and Michael Sevel

This volume brings together leading theorists to discuss the ground-breaking contribution of philosopher and appellate judge, David Hodgson, to the free will debate, and the significance of his contribution to the philosophy of law. The work first discusses Hodgson's libertarian view of agency in the context of the free will debate; and, second, examines his libertarianism in relation to central issues in legal philosophy. It examines Hodgson's distinctive libertarian theory of free will, and new directions in applying that theory to enduring questions about mitigation of punishment, the responsibility of judges, the nature of legal reasoning, and the criminal law process more generally.

Global Legal History

A Comparative Law Perspective

Edited by Joshua C. Tate, José Reinaldo de Lima Lopes and Andrés Botero Bernal

This collection brings together a group of international legal historians to further scholarship in different areas of comparative and regional legal history. Authors are drawn from Europe, Asia, and the Americas to produce new insights into the relationship between law and society across time and space. The book is divided into three parts: legal history and legal culture across borders; constitutional experiences in global perspective; and the history of judicial experiences. The three themes, and the chapters corresponding to each, provide a balance between public law and private law topics, and reflect a variety of methodologies, both empirical and theoretical.

Indigenous Peoples and the State

International Perspectives on the Treaty of Waitangi

Edited by Mark Hickford and Carwyn Jones
Series: Indigenous Peoples and the Law

This collection refreshes the scholarly and public discourse relating to the Treaty of Waitangi and makes a significant contribution to the international discussion of Indigenous-State relations and reconciliation. The essays in this collection explore the diversity of meanings that have been ascribed to Indigenous-State compacts, such as the Treaty, by different interpretive communities. As such, they enable and illuminate a more dynamic conversation about their meanings and applications, as well as their critical role in processes of reconciliation and transitional justice today.

Hostile Business and the Sovereign State

Privatized Governance, State Security and International Law

Edited by Michael J. Strauss, Centre d'Etudes Diplomatiques et Stratégiques, France Series: Globalization: Law and Policy

This book describes and assesses an emerging threat to states' territorial control and sovereignty: the hostile control of companies that carry out privatized aspects of sovereign authority. The threat arises from the massive worldwide shift of state activities to the private sector since the late 1970s in conjunction with two other modern trends – the globalization of business and the liberalization of international capital flows. The book assesses the adequacy of existing legal and regulatory regimes and how relevant norms may evolve.

Leading Works in Law and Religion

Edited by Russell Sandberg
Series: Leading Works in Law

This book brings together leading and emerging scholars in the field from the United Kingdom and Ireland. Each contributor has been invited to select and analyse a 'leading work', which has for them shed light on the way that Law and Religion are intertwined. The chapters are both auto-biographical, reflecting upon the works that have proved significant to contributors, and also critical analyses of the current state of the field. The book includes a specially written introduction and conclusion, which critically reflect upon the development of Law and Religion over the last 25 years and likely future developments in light of the reflections by contributors on their chosen leading works.

Human Rights, Religion and International Law

Edited by Kerry O'Halloran, Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane, Australia

Series: Human Rights and International Law

In this book Kerry O'Halloran analyses a subject of international interest – religion – and examines related contemporary issues from a human rights perspective. The book takes the view that while the impact of Islamic State violence has dramatically demonstrated the destructive power of religious extremism, there are also good grounds for the latter to examine the extent to which their laws and policies – nationally and internationally – are contributing to religion's currently destabilizing social role. It makes the case for a fuller understanding of the role of religion or belief and argues for a rebalancing of the functional relationship between Church and State.

Maritime Cabotage Law

Edited by Aniekan Akpan

This is the most comprehensive review of maritime cabotage law. It introduces the new theory of Developmental Sovereignty to jurisprudence. The maritime cabotage law provisions and approaches as adopted in many states and jurisdictions have been extensively scrutinised. This book challenges the established and accepted wisdom surrounding maritime cabotage by presenting new reasoning on the underpinning principles of the concept. The book offers a vibrant discussion on the adjustment in the regulatory approaches of maritime cabotage, from one that was intrinsically premised on the idea of national sovereignty, to one that now embraces the broader ideology of development.

Online Misogyny as Hate Crime

A Challenge for Legal Regulation?

Kim Barker, Stirling University and Olga Jurasz, The Open University

The ideal of an inclusive and participatory Internet has been undermined by the rise of misogynistic abuse on social media platforms. However, limited progress has been made at supranational and national levels in addressing this issue. In England and Scotland, the tackling of underlying causes of online abuse has been overlooked because the law focuses on punishment rather than measures to prevent such abuses. Further, online abuse has a significant impact on its victims that is underestimated by policymakers.

Photography and the Law

Rights and Restrictions

Michael O'Flanagan

Series: Routledge Research in Media Law

Photography and the Law investigates the legal limitations faced by professional and amateur photographers and photograph publishers. Through an in-depth discussion of the personal rights of the public, the book gives a clear analysis of the current legal standpoint. Comparative legal standing in the EU is used as a springboard to further analyse Irish and UK statutes, including recent reforms and current proposals for future change. The book ends with pertinent suggestions of the necessary reforms and enactments required to rebalance the relationship between the personal rights of individuals, the state's duties and the protection of photographers' rights.

Religion, Medicine and the Law

Clayton Ó Néill

Series: Biomedical Law and Ethics Library

Is the legal protection that is given to the expression of Abrahamic religious belief adequate or appropriate in the context of English medical law? This is the central question that is explored in this book, which develops a framework to support judges in the resolution of contentious cases that involve dissension between religious belief and medical law, developed from Alan Gewirth's Principle of Generic Consistency (PGC). This framework is applied to a number of medical law case studies: the principle of double effect, ritual male circumcision, female genital mutilation and Jehovah's Witnesses (adults and children) who refuse blood transfusions.

Security, Rights and Law

The Israeli High Court of Justice and Israeli Settlements in the Occupied West Bank

Rouba Al-Salem

This book examines how the Israeli High Court of Justice has applied international law principles in dealing with Palestinian challenges to the legality of enhanced security measures for Israeli settlements in the occupied West Bank. It analyses the judgements of the Court, discussing its apparent preference for invoking principles of Israeli administrative and constitutional law thereby promoting domestic rather than international Rule of Law. Through an analysis of petitions adjudicated by the HCJ, the work illustrates why its approach is ill-suited to a situation of occupation.

Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by UN Peacekeepers

Towards a Hybrid Solution

Cassandra Mudgway, Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand

Series: Routledge Research in Human Rights Law

Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by UN Peacekeepers directly challenges the status-quo of relying on troop-contributing countries (TCCs) to hold their peacekeepers to account. It proposes the establishment of a series of hybrid courts, and second, a mechanism for dealing with victim rehabilitation and reparation. It addresses the topics with regard to international and human rights law and will be of interest to researchers, academics, policymakers, and students with an interest in international criminal law, United Nations peacekeeping, and peace studies.

Sir Alexander Onslow

Third Chief Justice of Western Australia 1883-1901

J.M. Bennett

One of the most prominent, yet least understood, of Western Australia's leading citizens of the latter 19th century was Sir Alexander Campbell Onslow (1842-1908), the Colony's third Chief Justice. This biography offers a new and measured assessment of his character, work and legacies. Descended from an ancient Shropshire family his career as lawyer commenced on his call to the English Bar in 1868.

The Legal Power to Launch War

Who Decides?

Michael Head, Western Sydney University, Australia and Kristian Boehringer

The issue of who has the power in a democracy to declare war or authorise military action has become a major and critical political and legal issue internationally. This book comparatively examines the extraordinary executive and prerogative powers to declare war or launch military action. The book focuses on the US, UK and Australia, with reference to Canada and New Zealand. The book explores key legal and constitutional questions including: who currently has the authority to declare war or the power to launch military action without formally declaring war?; and how could those powers be controlled, legally or politically?

Transnational Advocacy Networks and Human Rights Law

Emergence and Framing of Gender Identity and Sexual Orientation

Giulia Dondoli

This book seeks to more clearly position the relationship between transnational advocacy networks, social movements, and international organizations. To do so it develops a comprehensive approach to understanding the role of variation and information transfer within transnational advocacy networks as they operate in practice. It takes the case of Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity to explore the issues.

Condemned to Die

Life Under Sentence of Death

Robert Johnson, American University

Condemned to Die is a book about life under sentence of death in American prisons. The great majority of condemned prisoners are warehoused on death rows before they are put to death. Whatever the real or imagined merits of capital punishment, there is neither a mandate nor a justification for inhumane confinement prior to imposition of sentence. Yet warehousing for death, sometimes leavened with brutality, is the universal fate of condemned prisoners in the United States, a group that comprises almost 3,000 individuals today. The enormous suffering caused by this human warehousing is the subject of this book.

Criminal Violence, Punishment, and Relational Justice

Samuel H. Pillsbury

Acknowledging that public fear and anger about criminal violence drive the punitive impulse that created the mass incarceration of today, this book challenges many deep-rooted assumptions about wrongdoing, as well as ideas about freedom and individuality and the obligations owed to strangers.

Imagining a Greater Justice offers a well-informed look at violence, race, and restorative justice, including often-ignored moral and ethical issues. It posits important policy implications that are essential reading for students of law and criminal justice, as well as all persons affected by violent crime and the administration of justice.

Soft Target Hardening

Protecting People from Attack

Jennifer Hesterman, Colonel, US Air Force (Retired)

The US government spends billions of dollars to secure strategic and tactical assets at home and abroad against enemy attack. However, as "hard targets" such as military installations and government buildings are further strengthened, vulnerable soft targets are increasingly in the crosshairs of terrorists. Battlefield lines have been redrawn to include churches, schools, hospitals, malls, and other gathering places. Soft Target Hardening: Protecting People from Attack, Second Edition, provides case studies, best practices, and methodologies for identifying soft target vulnerabilities and reducing risk in the United States and beyond.

Criminology

Explaining Crime and Its Context

Stephen E. Brown, Western Carolina University, USA, Finn-Aage Esbensen and Gilbert Geis, University of Missouri, USA

How do societies define crime, and how should it be punished or prevented? Which is a more criminal act, causing a death by dumping toxic material or by shooting a victim with a gun? Are criminals born or made? Criminology offers a broad perspective on criminological theory. It provides students of criminology and sociology with a thorough exposure to a range of theories about crime, contrasting their logic and assumptions, but also highlighting efforts to integrate and blend these frameworks.

Brown and Esbensen improve on this engaging and challenging introduction to the theory of crime and punishment, which is already perhaps the best criminology text available for undergraduates today.

Introduction to Criminal JusticeLawrence F. Travis III, University of Cincinnati, USA and Bradley D. Edwards, East Tennessee State University, USA

Introduction to Criminal Justice offers a student-friendly description of the criminal justice process—outlining the decisions, practices, people, and issues involved. It provides a solid introduction to the mechanisms of the criminal justice system, with balanced coverage of the issues presented by each facet of the process, including a thorough review of practices and controversies in law enforcement, the criminal courts, and corrections. In this revision, Edwards gives fresh sources of data, with over 600 citations of new research results. Each chapter now includes a text box on a policy dilemma like cash bail or stop-and-frisk policies.

Pursuing Justice

Traditional and Contemporary Issues in Our Communities and the World

Ralph A. Weisheit, Frank Morn, Illinois State University, USA and Frank Morn, Illinois State University, USA

Pursuing Justice, Third Edition, examines the issue of justice by considering the origins of the idea, formal systems of justice, current global issues of justice, and ways in which justice might be achieved by individuals, organizations, and the global community. This updated timely book helps students understand the complexities and nuances of a society's pursuit of justice. It provides students with the foundations of global justice systems, integrating Greek philosophies and major religious perspectives into a justice perspective, and contributes to undergraduate understanding of international justice bodies, NGOs, and institutions.

Inmate Radicalisation and Recruitment in Prisons

Clarke Jones, Australian National University and Raymond E Nang, Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Southern Illinois University

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Criminal Justice

It is traditionally viewed that vulnerable inmates form captive audiences for violent terrorist offenders who, in turn, are destined to turn prisons into training grounds for militant activities; all the while forming alliances with more hardened criminals to produce an even greater threat. Drawing on original research in the Philippines and case studies from Australia, the US, Canada, Indonesia, the UK, France, the Netherlands, and Belgium, the authors of this volume posit an alternative view that suggests that the imprisonment of a terrorist may mark the beginning of physical disengagement and psychological de-radicalisation.

The Routledge International Handbook of Islamophobia

Edited by Irene Zempi, Nottingham Trent University, UK and Imran Awan, Birmingham City University, UK

Series: Routledge International Handbooks

Islamophobic hate crimes have increased significantly following the terrorist attacks of 9/11 and 7/7. More recently, the rhetoric surrounding Trump's election and presidency, Brexit, the rise of far-right groups and ISIS-inspired terrorist attacks worldwide have promoted a climate where Islamophobia and anti-Muslim sentiments have become 'legitimised'. Consisting of 32 chapters accessibly written by scholars, policy makers and practitioners, this handbook seeks to examine the nature, extent, implications of, and responses to Islamophobic hate crime both nationally and internationally.

The Veterans Treatment Court Movement

Striving to Serve Those Who Served

Anne S. Douds, Gettysburg College and Eileen M. Ahlin, Penn State Harrisburg

Series: Directions and Developments in Criminal Justice and Law

Veterans Treatment Courts provides a comprehensive, empirical analysis of the burgeoning veteran's court movement from genesis through to operation. Beginning with the unlikely convergence of therapeutic jurisprudence with the oft-misunderstood warrior ethos that undergirds the entire movement, the text examines every component of veterans courts, weighing the cultural, legal, and practical strengths and limitations of these programs. The volume provides essential background for scholars studying law and the criminal courts, as well as policymakers, judges, academics, students, and practitioners concerned with effective jurisprudence.

Vulnerability in Police Custody

Police decision-making and the appropriate adult safeguard

Roxanna Dehaghani

This book examines adult vulnerability in police custody by addressing the implementation of the appropriate adult safeguard and exploring police decision-making in this context. Drawing on empirical research carried out in England, the work takes a socio-legal approach. Part 1 examines how vulnerability is constructed philosophically and practically; Part 2 discusses how vulnerability is identified and how decisions are made. Part 3 critically assesses the theoretical understandings of police decision-making and criminal justice. The book presents new theoretical insights and asserts that the current regime of regulation must be reconsidered and vulnerability radically reconceptualised.

Business Transformation Planning for Leaders

A Tactical Roadmap for Achieving Profitable Growth with the Highest Return on Capital

Kiran Gurumurthy

This book provides an analytical and a systematic roadmap to achieve profitable growth with the highest return on capital. The book lays out a simple roadmap that aligns all functions and departments. Most business leaders have "experience bias," which refers to focusing on actions around their own respective strengths and background. The problem with this approach is that a business is a labyrinth of cross-functional activities and sometimes forces all the efforts in an area of comfort for the business leader. This hides the real challenges of the business and the problem only continues to escalate. This book provides a holistic approach to transform your business.

Creating a Lean Culture in the Office

Timothy Schipper, Internal Lean Consultant, Steelcase, Inc.

This book describes the wastes in the office and administrative areas of organizations, and it outlines why lean works just as well in the office as it does in manufacturing. Wastes typically reach 50% of the process effort, and these processes are ripe for improvement. Waste removal and working to restore flow in office processes are illustrated with descriptions of applying lean tools to achieve flow. Case studies from the corporate world, non-profits, and higher education institutions demonstrate how various types of organizations have demonstrated success by applying lean principles to their processes.

Improving Patient Safety

Tools and Strategies for Quality Improvement

Raghav Govindarajan, University of Missouri, Columbia, USA, Harleen Kaur and Anudeep Yelam

Based on the IOM's estimate of 44,000 deaths annually, medical errors rank as the eighth leading cause of death in the U.S. Clearly medical errors are an epidemic that needs to be contained. Despite these numbers, patient safety and medical errors remain an issue for physicians and other clinicians. This book bridges the issues related to patient safety by providing clinically relevant, vignette-based description of the areas where most problems occur. Each vignette highlights a particular issue such as communication, human factors, E.H.R., etc. and provides tools and strategies for improving quality in these areas and creating a safer environment for patients.

Internalizing a Culture of Business Excellence

Perspectives from Quality Professionals

Fley Lasrado and Norhayati Zakaria, Universiti Utara Malaysia, Sintok, Kedah

This edited book compiles best practice cases of leaders who have initiated and facilitated quality practices in their organizations. The cases highlight how these best practices manifested in their work cultures, values, and beliefs. Not only do they address organizational efforts towards implementation of quality practices but they also discuss the challenges the leaders faced to instill a sense of quality in practices across the hierarchical structures of their organizations. At the end of each case, the authors provide questions to facilitate interesting and thought-provoking discussions, to teach key quality concepts, and to apply relevant theoretical frameworks.

Islamic Economics

Theory and Practice

Abul Hassan, King Fahd University of Petroleum and Minerals, Research Institute, Saudi Arabia and M. A. Choudhury

This book places the study of Islamic Economics within the theme of its scientific nature and within the philosophical universality of Tawhid, and the generality and specifics of the issues of economics studied as a morally and socially embedded world-system. By way of its Tawhidi epistemological explanation (philosophical premise) in the form of logical formalism and the use of simple real-world examples, it alerts the reader that the scientific nature of economics in general and Islamic Economics in particular rests on the conception of the scientific worldview. It transcends its scope for students and informed readers to become a landmark contribution to socio-scientific scholarship.

Island Compliance Risk and the Protocol of Global Finance

Governing Evil Money

Kirk Harrison Taitt

Kirk Harrison Taitt examines the threat money laundering and terrorist financing pose to Caribbean island nations involved in international financial services, the role of compliance regimes in averting sanctions and the future of these nations at the table of global capital. He addresses and indeed positions island nations in a strategic space outside of the global clamour, unceasing debate and severe criticism over their bona-fides/qualifications to engage in the trillion-dollar industry of offshore finance, alongside certain of their G20 counterparts. He asserts a high ground (ethical) approach as essential to counteracting potential reputational harm.

Leading the Project Revolution

Reframing the Human Dynamics of Successful Projects

Edited by Darren Dalcher, National Centre for Project Management

Series: Advances in Project Management

People play a vital part in the success of projects, initiatives and organisations, yet traditional project management sources offer limited guidance and insights that extend beyond technical roles and prescriptions. Leading the Project Revolution delves into the dynamics of people, teams and organisations exploring their impact on leadership, strategy, success and achievement. The book offers a progressive agenda for improving project practice, enabling the dialogue to advance from the typical coverage of static toolsets towards an understanding of flexible mindsets.

Midnight's Grandchildren

How Young Indians are Disrupting the World's Largest Democracy

Mark Hannant, Teammagenta, India

While the west has experienced multiple post-war economic, social and political revolutions, India by contrast has had two distinct moments of transformation in the past century: Independence in 1947 and the economic liberalisation that began in 1991. Midnight's grandchildren are the offspring of India's second social and economic revolution. Midnight's Grandchildren explains for a business audience the significance of the arrival in the workforce of a generation of millennials as both disruptors of the old order and engine of India's future economic potential. It is of use for professionals and educators wanting to engage this vitally important group of young people.

Perspectives on Purpose

Building Brands and Businesses for the Twenty-First Century

Edited by Nina Montgomery

This book collects stories, best practices, case studies, and thought leadership from a diverse group of leaders on practicing 'purpose'. We'll hear from C-suite executives and agency leaders, from academic powerhouses and young entrepreneurs, from 'corporate clients' and their 'purpose partners'. We'll hear about how purpose is being practiced inside the walls of Airbnb, Sephora, Hyatt, Thorn, VF Corporation, Diageo, Ben & Jerry's, amongst others. This diversity helps us learn from each other and grow together.

Preventing and Managing Violence in Organizations

Workplace Violence, Targeted Violence, and Active Shooters

Marc H. Siegel, President and CEO of M Siegel Associates LLC, Encinitas, California, USA

Preventing and Managing Violence in Organizations provides a comprehensive approach to addressing workplace violence, active shooter and assailant events, and other forms of targeted violence. The book takes a unique perspective that the prevention and management of violence in an organization is a risk and business management issue, rather than a siloed security issue. Therefore, the main objective of the book is to help organizations develop a program for preventing and managing violence that can be integrated into their day-to-day business management approach.

Re-platforming the Airline Business

To Meet Travelers' Total Mobility Needs

Nawal K. Taneja, Faculty Emeritus, Aviation, Ohio State University

Airline business models continue to be shaped by powerful forces relating to customers, complexities and regulators. There are emerging technologies that can help airlines cater to the needs of their changing customer bases and manage the complexities of the business. This book proposes that different sectors of the aviation industry, particularly airlines and airports, should consider using a wide array of technologies, including specifically-designed customer-centric platforms to make informed decisions and to develop and implement transformative strategies to meet travelers' total mobility needs.

Strategy Execution and Complexity

Thriving in the Era of Disruption

Richard Busulwa, University of South Australia, Bruce Gurd, University of South Australia and Matthew Tice, Insurgency Party Ltd, Australia

This book examines the different types of complexity faced by organisations and the 12 different strategy execution processes organisations are using to realise both deliberate and emergent strategies in their different environments. It then outlines how strategic leaders can draw on the different processes to adapt their strategy execution practices and thrive in increasingly complex and volatile environments; as opposed to turning a blind eye to strategic drift. It provides business managers with a diverse toolkit of processes and activities to choose from and a framework for choosing the right tools for their particular situation, be it a startup, SME or large complex organisation.

The Four Pillars of Portfolio Management

Organizational Agility, Strategy, Risk, and Resources

Olivier Lazar

Series: Best Practices in Portfolio, Program, and Project Management

The book explains how to manage a project portfolio by finding a balance between exposure to risk, alignment with strategy, and optimization of the resources. It presents models for defining organizational priorities, which are central to effect project portfolio management. It also presents a framework for developing corporate agility. The organizational agility framework counters inertia and entropy, by promoting principles of simplicity and parsimony, defining a proper strategic horizon, and inducing a collaborative and positive mindset.

Global Leadership

A Transnational Perspective

Gama Perruci, Marietta College, USA

Global leaders have to contend with a variety of transnational contexts that call for different leadership styles. This book assesses four of these – transactional, participatory, transformational, and autocratic – but it is not simply a theoretical examination of leadership styles. It also introduces the reader to practical skills that global leaders must master in order to be more effective at the transnational level – a global mindset, embracing diversity, conflict resolution, team building, intercultural communication, and adapting to change.

Linear Optimization for Business

Theory and practical application

Marcos Singer

This book takes a unique approach to linear optimization by focusing on the underlying principles and business applications of a topic more often taught from a mathematical and computational perspective. By shifting the perspective away from heavy math, students learn how optimization can be used to drive decision making in real world business settings.

The book does not shy away from the theory underlying linear optimization, but rather focuses on ensuring students understand the logic without getting caught up in proving theorems. It will prove a useful, math-free resource for all students of management science and operations research.

Heidegger and Entrepreneurship

A Phenomenological Approach

Håvard Åsvoll, Nord University, Norway

Series: Routledge Focus on Business and Management

With reference to Heidegger's existence oriented philosophy, this book indicates how nothing can be a condition for an entrepreneurial applicable paradigm. It is suggested that the 'theory of Nothing' bears the possibility of further development and can re-create the entrepreneurial paradigm of applying and decision making. This may also indicate a structure for understanding the new possibilities in entrepreneurship practice, such as entrepreneurial education and research. The book will be of value to students, researchers, and academics with an interest in entrepreneurship, management, and innovation.

Making Sense of Innovation in the Built Environment

Natalya Sergeeva, The Bartlett School of Construction and Project Management, University College London, UK Series: Spon Research

The book provides a detailed examination of the drivers for innovation in construction, engineering and infrastructure organisations. In particular, the questions of how and why innovation becomes recognised and sustained over time are explored. Applying a sensemaking framework to explain innovation in both practical and accessible ways, and combining the theory and practice, this book presents an insightful view on the implications of innovation in the business world today.

Managing Creativity

A Systems Thinking Journey

José-Rodrigo Córdoba-Pachón

Series: Systems Thinking

For centuries, creativity has unfolded as a valuable field of knowledge. Emerging from disciplines like psychology, management and education, the field of creativity is making strides in others including the arts and engineering.

This book aims to recover the importance of creativity as a systemic phenomenon, meaning that creative efforts could be directed to improve quality of life for individuals as well as their environments. The insights of the book will act as a vital tool for management researchers, career-driven students and practitioners to define and pursue creative ideas and thrive through their journeys to benefit themselves, other people and organisations.

Mechanics of Project Management

Nuts and Bolts of Project Execution

Adedeji B. Badiru, Air Force Institute of Technology, Dayton, Ohio, USA, S. Abidemi Badiru and I. Adetokunboh Badiru

Every organizational endeavor is based on project management. Projects range from simple to complex, with a definite beginning and a definite end. In manufacturing operations, the production of each unit of a product is defined as a project. The lifecycle goes from raw material to the product delivery stage, with steps in between managed as a rigorous project. This book covers the mechanics of project management and offers the requirements for executing a project using a systems-engineering framework and the project management body of knowledge, as advocated by the Project Management Institute. It includes the nuts and bolts for untangling the knots that often exist in project execution.

Multinational Enterprise, Political Risk and Organisational Change

From Total War to Cold War

Ben Wubs, Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands, Neil Forbes, Coventry University Business School and Takafumi Kurosawa, Kyoto University, Japan

Series: Routledge International Studies in Business History

This edited volume offers an historical approach to analysing how multinational enterprise has developed over time around the world, through a series of well-crafted chapters, on important topics in international economic and business history, written by authorities in their respective fields of study and research. The study is based on the devastating and long-term consequences of the two World Wars, and the ideological challenge of the Cold War acted as a pivot points in shaping the nature and character of multinational firms. This study offers insights to anyone who has an interest in business, economic or political history, management and business studies, or international relations.

Power Engineering

Advances and Challenges Part B Electrical Power

Edited by Viorel Badescu, George Cristian Lazaroiu and Linda Barelli, University of Perugia - Department of Engineering, Perugia, Italy

With the advent of climate change on the horizon, humanity faces numerous adjustments in their way of life, including the attitude towards environmental protection and the depletion of traditional energy resources. These changes have significant impacts in the power production sector. Future energy systems must be considerate of the changes and developments found in technology, such as, the improvements of natural gas combined cycles. This emerging research will enhance the security of energy systems, protection of environment, improve energy efficiency and sustainability. Power Engineering evaluates these methods and also presents alternate solutions for power generation.

Work, Working and Work Relationships in a Changing World

Edited by Clare Kelliher, Cranfield University, UK and Julia Richardson, Curtin University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Human Resource Development

This book is concerned with the rapid and varied changes in the nature of work and work relationships which have taken place in recent years. While technological innovation has been a key contributor to the nature and pace of change, other social and market trends have also played a part such as increasing workforce diversity, enhanced competition and greater global integration. Responding to these trends alongside cost pressures and the need for continued responsiveness to the environment, organizations have changed the way in which work is organized.

The Political Economy of Fracking

Private Property, Polycentricity, and the Shale Revolution

Iliia Murtazashvili, University of Pittsburgh, USA and Ennio Piano, George Mason University, USA

Series: Economics in the Real World

"Fracking" has led to a boom in shale gas in some countries, but has generated negative headlines and been banned in other parts of the world. This book uses insights from different strands of political economy to analyze fracking and questions around why the boom occurred when it did, the divergence in political responses to fracking, and the effectiveness of the regulatory response. It highlights the role of private property rights and robust market institutions in the emergence of fracking technology and the rapid contracting between gas companies and owners of mineral rights, demonstrating the importance of the institutional context in the development of fracking.

Trusting Nudges

Toward A Bill of Rights for Nudging

Cass R. Sunstein, Harvard University, USA and Lucia A. Reisch, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark

Series: Routledge Advances in Behavioural Economics and Finance

In recent years, many governments have implemented behaviorally informed policies, focusing on "nudges" – interventions that steer people in certain directions. These policies have created both academic and political controversy, above all from those who believe that they do not treat people with respect, or that they can amount to forms of manipulation. Using a data from a wide range of countries, this book addresses these concerns by exploring what citizens actually think about these behaviorally informed policies, looking at differences between countries, types of "nudge", and the role of political differences.

Foundations of Real World Economics

What Every Economics Student Needs to Know

John Komlos, University of Munich, Germany

This book provides an antidote to the usual principles text. In a series of short essays, it covers all of the key topics, theories and models found on a principles course – from employment to equilibrium, marginal theory to monetary policy – and demonstrates their usefulness, or otherwise, in the real world. It also explores important issues and approaches often omitted from principles texts including neuroeconomics, fairness, happiness and financial instability. This accessible and engaging book is the ideal text for any economics class looking to go beyond the limitations of standard economics.

Political Economy and Policy Analysis

Antonio Merlo, Rice University, USA

The study of political economy integrates the political process with the economic process of exchange and production to provide a more complete picture of the role of government. In doing so, political economy raises important issues of income redistribution, taxation and conflict and asks key questions about whether government should pay for primary school, swimming pools, university education, health care and other services. This text opens with a refresher on microeconomics and an introduction to the toolkit of political economy to ensure that the necessary building blocks are in place. It also looks at key aspects of the political process including voting, lobbying, and federalism.

Regression Analysis

A Practical Introduction

Jeremy Arkes

With the rise of "big data", there is an increasing demand to learn the skills needed to undertake sound quantitative analysis without requiring students to spend too much time on high-level math and proofs. This book provides an alternate approach with more time devoted to introducing the practice of regression analysis and the most common pitfalls to avoid when undertaking your own analysis. By doing so, the book will better prepare readers for conducting, interpreting, and assessing regression analyses, while simultaneously making the material simpler and more enjoyable to learn. It is an ideal introduction to regression analysis for any class which uses statistical methods.

The Evolution of Economic Ideas and Systems

A Pluralist Introduction

Geoffrey Schneider, Bucknell University, USA

Series: Routledge Pluralist Introductions to Economics

This text presents a ground-breaking, pluralistic introduction to economic history and the history of economic thought. Tracing the development of economic systems and economic thought, the text introduces students to the story from ancient times to contemporary capitalism, as well as its critics. Focusing in particular on Smith, Marx, Veblen and Keynes, the text encourages students to consider which ideas and systems are still relevant in the modern world. This book can be used as a standalone text for relevant classes or as a supplement on any principles course.

A Structuralist Theory of Economics

Adolfo García de la Sienra, Universidad Veracruzana, Mexico

Series: Routledge INEM Advances in Economic Methodology

Economists have long grappled with the problem of how economic theories relate to empirical evidence. This book introduces, explains, and develops a structural philosophy of economics which addresses this issue. The book begins by introducing a rigorous view of the logical foundations and structure of scientific theories based on the work of Alfred Tarski, Patrick Suppes, Karl Marx and others. It then reconstructs some important economic theories using the structuralist approach - including utility theory, game theory, Marxian economics, Sraffian economic theory, and econometrics - to demonstrate that this provides a unifying basis for a general methodology of economics.

Anarchism and Ecological Economics

A Transformative Approach to a Sustainable Future

Ove Daniel Jakobsen, University of Nordland, Norway

Series: Routledge Studies in Ecological Economics

This book explores the idea that anarchism - aimed at creating a society where there is as much freedom as possible - may provide an ideal political basis for the goals of ecological economics. It seems clear that it is going to be impossible to solve the problems connected to environmental degradation, climate change, economic crashes and increasing inequality, within the existing paradigm. The anarchist aims of reducing the disparities of rank and income in society and obtaining a high standard of living within an environmentally sound environment chimes well with the ecological economists' goal of living within our environmental limits for the betterment of the planet and society.

China in the Local and Global Economy

History, Geography, Politics and Sustainability

Edited by Steven Brakman, Rijksuniversiteit Groningen, the Netherlands, Charles van Marrewijk, Erasmus School of Economics, the Netherlands, Peter Morgan, Asian Development Bank Institute, Japan and Nimesh Salike, Xi'an Jiaotong – Liverpool University, China

Series: Regions and Cities

The history of China dates back thousands of years, with periods of decline followed by periods of growth. This book puts China's most recent period of growth into perspective. It explores China's changing national and international connections, and their importance for understanding the past, current, and future developments of the Chinese economy.

The book brings together leading contributors from China, Japan and Europe to consider the historical developments of these connections, the importance of natural and man-made connections for the Chinese economy, the role of institutions and policies in understanding the connections and their sustainability.

Commodity

The Global Commodity System in the 21st Century

Photis Lysandrou, City University, UK

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

At the start of the 21st Century, the commodity system has expanded, thanks to globalization and the commodification of finance, to become the dominant economic reality around the world. Through this prism, it is shown that the 2007-8 financial crisis was unique in that its root causes were global in content. It was the first crisis of the global commodity system and due to the ongoing scandal of income and wealth inequality it will not be the last. This book persuasively argues that the global commodity system needs to be brought under effective coordinated control if future financial crises are to be avoided, and the case is made for the establishment of a global tax authority.

Mega Free Trade Agreements and Implications for ASEAN

Edited by Lurong Chen, Shujiro Urata, Waseda University, Japan, Junji Nakagawa, University of Tokyo, Japan and Masahito Ambashi, Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia, ERIA, Indonesia

Series: Routledge-ERIA Studies in Development Economics

Mega free trade agreements (FTAs) are being formed to fill the gap created by these new developments in global governance and reshape the world economic order. The Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) agreement is one of such 21st century FTAs.

This book highlights three trade-related issues covered by the TPP that greatly concern emerging countries – investment, intellectual property rights (IPR), and state-owned enterprises (SOEs). The book also outlines the requirements for emerging Asian countries to better formulate trade policies in the new era of international trade and promote regional integration in ASEAN and East Asia.

Financialisation in Latin America

Challenges of the Export-Led Growth Model

Edited by Noemi Levy, Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico, Mexico and Jorge Bustamante, Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico, Mexico

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Finance and Stability

The model of export-led growth has been the dominant feature of Latin American economies for many years now but is this sustainable in the face of the global crises of globalisation and financialisation? This book analyses the evolution of financialisation in Latin America and seeks to determine the causes of the economic crises that have been triggered throughout the region in recent years. The discussion includes both regional and by-country analyses to determine shared trends and particularities of the various crises in different countries. This book offers a unique regional analysis of financialisation across Latin America.

Market-Based Interest Rate Reform in China

China, Finance, 40, Forum, Research, Group

Series: China Perspectives

This book reviews the process and logic of China's interest rate reform. It is structured along three lines. As for "loosening rate controls", it summarizes international practices and analyzes the characteristics of China's interest rate reform. In terms of "establishing market-based interest rates", it elucidates the "double-track" system and transmission of interest rates. Regarding "building an effective adjustment mechanism", strengthening the central bank's adjustment mechanism is studied. Also, it examines the effects of economic development on interest rate liberalization, as well as the relations between market-based interest rate reform and the construction of related systems.

Private Lending in China

Practice, Law, and Regulation of Shadow Banking and Alternative Finance

Lerong Lu, Lecturer in Law at the University of Bristol, UK
Series: Routledge Research in Finance and Banking Law

This book is a timely work to demystify China's private lending market by investigating its historical development, operating mechanism, and special characteristics. It evaluates the causes and effects of the latest financial crisis by considering a number of real cases relating to helpless investors and runaway bosses. It conducts an in-depth doctrinal analysis of Chinese laws and regulations regarding private lending transactions. It also examines China's ongoing financial reform to bring underground lending activities under official supervision. Finally, the book points out future development paths for the private lending market.

Regulating Effect of Tax on Chinese National Income Distribution

Qingwang Guo, Bingyang Lv, Professor, the School of Finance, Renmin University of China, China and Ximing Yue, Professor, the School of Finance, Renmin University of China, China

Series: China Perspectives

This book measures in details the department income distribution pattern among the governments, enterprises, and families in China during the years of 1978 to 2008, measures and analyzes the distribution of Chinese factor income and residents' income. In combination with Chinese taxation system and policy, it makes a deep research on the effect of factor income distribution on residents' income distribution, the effect of taxation on factor income distribution, and the effect of taxation on residents' income distribution. This book is favorable for answering why taxation's regulation effect on income distribution in China is low, and why taxation reform is necessary.

Strategic Approaches to Regional Development

Smart Experimentation in Less-Favoured Regions

Edited by Iryna Kristensen, Alexandre Dubois and Jukka Teräs

Series: Regions and Cities

This book explores the congruence between place-based development and regional competitiveness in the EU context.

; Drawing on a range of social science disciplines, this book unpicks the complexity of regional transformation processes, aiming to enhance the applicability and transferability of theoretical approaches to innovation and place-based regional development in diverse European territorial settings. The contributors have a focus on less-favoured regions, and on the application of Smart Specialisation.

; The book comes at a critical moment, amid the growing demand of academics, practitioners and policy-makers with an interest in promoting regional economic growth and well-being.

The Dynamics of Growth in Emerging Economies

The Case of Turkey

Edited by Arzu Akkoyunlu Wigley, Hacettepe University, Turkey and Selim Çağatay, Akdeniz University, Turkey

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern World Economy

This book closes the gap in the existing literature, as well as analyzing the other significant determinants of long run growth in Turkey such as import dependency and saving-investment decision. It focuses on the "neglected" issues, namely the micro, macro, regional and gender aspects of growth, as well as the microeconomic dynamics of growth. The authors provide a macro overview of all of the precluded subjects in order to evaluate them in relation to one other, as well as to derive lessons from them. This book is a must read for researchers and policy makers not only in Turkey but in developing economies, which are experiencing the same problems, as well.

The Question of Limits

A Historical Perspective on the Environmental Crisis

Christian Marouby

Series: Routledge Studies in Sustainability

This book argues that we can only resolve the present global challenges by confronting the question of limits and making it central to our reflection. This entails discussing the long history of negative thinking about limits in which Malthus is of course the most infamous figure. Ultimately, The Question of Limits contends that the value of embracing limits extends beyond the environment and offers the potential to become a transformative social good. The book will be of great interest to students and scholars working at the intersection of environmental studies, economics, intellectual history and philosophy.

Uncertainty and Economics

A Paradigmatic Perspective

Christian Müller-Kademann, Jacobs University Bremen, Germany

Series: Routledge Frontiers of Political Economy

Uncertainty is inherent in humanity and society and must therefore be considered a major factor in the economy. Yet, it is entirely missing from mainstream economics. This book carefully defines a taxonomy of uncertainty and argues that radical uncertainty can be a powerful concept for economic analysis. That analysis is applied to standard economic topics such as institutions, money, the Lucas critique, fiscal policy and asset pricing to reveal new insights. The book offers policy conclusions and recommendations for further theoretical and applied research. A separate econometric section offers a statistical method for uncovering uncertainty.

Geopolitics and Development

Marcus Power

This textbook examines the historical emergence of development as a form of governmentality, from the end of empire to the Cold War and the War on Terror. It illustrates the various ways in which the meanings and relations of development as a discourse, an apparatus and an aspiration, have been geopolitically imagined and enframed. Primarily intended for scholars and post-graduate students in the areas of development studies, development geography, political geography/geopolitics and international relations/politics, this book provides an engaging, invaluable and up-to-date resource for making sense of the complex entanglement between geopolitics and development, past and present.

Barrie Needham, Nijmegen School of Management, the Netherlands, Edwin Buitelaar and Thomas Hartmann, Utrecht University, Netherlands

Series: RTPI Library Series

Planning, Law, and Economics sets out a new framework for applying a legal approach to spatial planning, showing how to improve the practice and help achieve its aims. The book covers planning laws, planning rights, and property rights, asking 'What rules do we want to make and, where necessary, enforce? And how do we want to apply them in planning practice?' This book sets out, in general and illustrated with concrete examples, how the three types of law mentioned above are unavoidably involved in all types of spatial planning. The book also makes clear that these laws can be combined in different ways, each way a particular approach to the practice of spatial planning.

Postcolonialism

Tariq Jazeel, University College London, UK

Series: Key Ideas in Geography

Postcolonialism is a book that examines the influence of postcolonial theory in critical geographical thought and scholarship. Aimed at advanced level students and researchers, the book is a lively, stimulating and relevant introduction to 'postcolonial geography' that elaborates on the critical interventions in social, cultural and political life this important subfield is poised to make. Structured around three intersecting blocks – 'Space', 'Identity', 'Knowledge' – the book will familiarize students and researchers with key critical intellectual trajectories and developments in postcolonial theory since its late 1970s emergence.

British Migration

Privilege, Diversity and Vulnerability

Edited by Pauline Leonard and Katie Walsh, University of Sussex, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Human Geography

This edited collection brings together leading scholars to explore cutting edge research on British migrants in an international range of settings. This book explores the diversities which exist within and between British migrants, and the importance of spatial context. This book provides an important counterbalance, drawing on the latest empirical research and theoretical developments to offer a fascinating account of the lives, experiences and identities of British migrants living in a wide range of geographic locations across Europe, Asia, Africa and Australasia. This collection asks what is the shape and significance of contemporary British migration?

Disassembled Cities

Social and Spatial Strategies to Reassemble Communities

Edited by Elizabeth L. Sweet, Temple University, USA

Series: Global Urban Studies

The processes of contemporary globalization have resulted in the commodification of various dimensions of what was previously the domain of state action. This has arguably resulted in negative impacts in cities across the globe. This book evaluates the varying international responses from communities, as they cope and confront the negative impacts of neoliberalism. This book will have a broad appeal to academic researchers and urban planning professionals. It is recommended core reading for students in Urban Planning, Geography, Sociology, Anthropology, and Urban Studies.

GIS-Based Simulation and Analysis of Intra-Urban Commuting

Yujie Hu, University of South Florida, Tampa and Fahui Wang, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, USA

This book presents GIS-based simulation, optimization and statistical approaches to measure, map, analyze, and explain commuting patterns including commuting length and efficiency. It uses Monte Carlo simulation-based methods to measure commuting by simulating individual resident workers, jobs, and trips between them. It examines several longstanding issues that have been central to commuting studies such as the impact of aggregation error on measurement of commuting length and the impact of scale effect on wasteful commuting estimation. Several GIS-automated easy-to-use tools will be available, along with sample data, for readers to download and apply to their own studies.

Resilient Destinations and Tourism

Governance Strategies in the Transition towards Sustainability in Tourism

Edited by Jarkko Saarinen, Geography Research Unit University of Oulu and Alison M. Gill

Series: Contemporary Geographies of Leisure, Tourism and Mobility

Sustainability is one of the most important issues currently facing the tourism sector. Recently the role of resilience thinking has been highlighted in sustainable development discussions as an alternative perspective. This book approaches these concepts as interwoven processes and looks at change through a socio-ecological lens. It will appeal to a wide range of research disciplines and students whose modules focus on the relationship between tourism with respect to sustainability planning, governance, environment, and hazards and disasters.

Politics in Developing Countries

Damien Kingsbury

Politics in Developing Countries provides a clear and user-friendly introduction to the key factors and themes that shape political processes in developing countries. Whilst all developing countries have experienced momentous political change over the last century, this book examines the variations in how states have or have not worked to the advancement of their citizens' interests. Wide-ranging and engagingly written, this authoritative introductory textbook is perfect for students of politics and international development, as well as for those with a general interest in the challenges faced by countries in the Global South.

Edited by Ben Cousins, University of the Western Cape, South Africa, Saturnino M. Borras Jr., International Institute of Social Studies, The Hague, Sergio Sauer, University of Brasilia, Brazil and Jingzhong Ye, China Agricultural College

Series: Rethinking Globalizations

The economic and political rise of the BRICS countries (Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa) and powerful middle-income countries (MICs) such as Argentina, Indonesia, and Turkey, has far-reaching implications for global agrarian transformation. This comprehensive collection explores these issues through the lens of critical agrarian studies, which examines fundamental social change in, and in relation to, rural worlds. This book will be of interest to students and researchers of critical agrarian studies, with a focus on BRICS and MICs. South-South Development

Peter Kragelund, Roskilde University, Denmark

Series: Routledge Perspectives on Development

The book examines the historical background for the current situation: why it suddenly took off again approximately a decade ago; the various vectors of engagement and their interrelatedness; the actors involved; the affect of revitalisation of South-South development to cooperation 'as it was'; and how it affects the rest of the Global South. It offers a unique combination of in-depth insights and secondary data on South-South development, presenting a 'state-of-the-art' account aimed at students as well as practitioners in disciplines such as International Development Studies, International Relations, Geography, Anthropology, Global Studies and International Political Economy.

Lijun Chen, Dali L. Yang, Di Zhou and Qiang Ren

Series: Routledge Research on Asian Development

This book provides a comprehensive analysis of the current state of China's children and youth, tracking the changes in their well-being in the context of the country's recent political and social dynamics. The findings show a significant improvement in Chinese children's well-being in recent years, but they also highlight a clear disparity between rural and urban children. At a time when president Xi Jinping has prioritized the elimination of poverty and building a "moderately prosperous society in all respects", this study provides valuable empirical evidence for researchers of contemporary Chinese society to understand the state of China's youth and to formulate relevant policies.

Anne Flaspöler

Series: Routledge Studies in African Development

The book examines training content and methods in detail, exploring the potential of peacekeeping training centres as sites for socialisation and diffusing international norms in an effort to change and shape peacekeepers' behaviour. The analysis is based on two contrasting case studies, selected to show the spectrum of training centres operating in Africa, namely the Kofi Annan International Peacekeeping Training Centre in Accra, Ghana and the African Centre for the Constructive Resolution of Disputes in Durban, South Africa. Edited by Palash Kamruzzaman

Series: Routledge Studies in Development and Society

The concept of civil society is deeply rooted in European traditions and values. In pursuing civil society reform in non-Western countries, many scholars along with well-meaning international agencies and donor organisations fail to account for non-Western values and historical experiences. Civil Society in the Global South seeks to redress this balance by offering diverse accounts of civil society from the Global South. With studies ranging from across Africa to Latin America, Asia and the Middle East, this book will be useful to students and scholars within development studies, sociology, anthropology, social policy and politics.

Hybridity in Peacebuilding and Development

A critical and reflexive approach

Edited by Lia Kent, The Australian National University, Australia, Miranda Forsyth, The Australian National University, Australia, Sinclair Dinnen, Australian National University, Canberra, Australia, Joanne Wallis, Australian National University, Australia and Srinjoy Bose, University of New South Wales, Australia

Series: ThirdWorlds

The concept of hybridity highlights complex processes of interaction and transformation between different institutional and social forms, and normative systems. This book examines whether the value of hybridity as a concept can continue to be harnessed, and how its shortcomings might be mitigated or overcome. It does so in an interdisciplinary way, as hybridity has been used as a benchmark across multiple disciplines and areas of practical engagement over the past decade – including peacebuilding, state-building, justice reform, security, development studies, anthropology, and economics. Innovations in 'Sport for Development and Peace' Research

Edited by Megan Chawansky, Otterbein University, USA, Lyndsay Hayhurst, York University, Toronto, Canada, Mary G. McDonald, Georgia Institute of Technology, USA and Cathy van Ingen, Brock University, Canada

Transnational organizations and practitioners who use sport for international development often position sport as a unique option for tackling development challenges. While sport can be a tool for social change, the authors in this collection bring a critical eye to this assumption and offer new perspectives on the use of sport for development and peace (SDP) in local and global contexts. The book seeks to generate new dialogues and explore linkages for development and SDP researchers through considerations of sport's potential to challenge and/or perpetuate key global issues and problems. Masculinity and Modern Slavery in Nepal

Transitions into Freedom

Matthew Maycock, University of Glasgow, UK

Series: Routledge ISS Gender, Sexuality and Development Studies

South Asia is the region with the highest number of slaves globally according to the Global Slavery Index. This book explores the role of gender and masculinity in shaping the structures and experience of slavery, and subsequent freedom. Taking Nepal as a case study, the book illustrates how men's gendered experiences of bondedness and freedom can inform our perspectives on the transition to freedom and modernity in South Asia more broadly. Masculinity and Modern Slavery in Nepal provides a fascinating account which will be of interest to scholars and upper level students of South Asia, modern slavery, gender studies and development.

Regional Cooperation for Peace and Development

Japan and South Korea in Southeast Asia

Edited by Brendan Howe, Updated bank account details SF 900094 17.8.16 DB

Series: Routledge Research on Asian Development

Faced with significant security challenges, in recent years Japan and South Korea have both sought to raise their international profile through peacebuilding, development, humanitarian assistance, and human security. This book assesses the past, present, and future potential of these niche diplomacy initiatives undertaken by Japan and South Korea, largely in Southeast Asia. At a time when the role of so-called 'middle powers' is receiving increasing levels of attention both domestically and internationally, this book will be of considerable interest to scholars of Japan and the ROK, as well as development, security, and foreign policy researchers more broadly.

Indigenous Perspectives on Sacred Natural Sites

Culture, Governance and Conservation

Edited by Jonathan Liljebled, University of New England, Australia and Bas Verschuuren, Wageningen University, Netherlands

Much previous literature on sacred natural sites has been written from a non-indigenous perspective. In contrast, this book facilitates a greater self-expression of indigenous perspectives regarding treatment of the sacred and its protection and governance in the face of threats from various forms of natural resource exploitation and development. It is aimed at students of indigenous studies, anthropology, religion, heritage, human rights and law, nature conservation and environmental protection.

Violins

Local Meanings, Globalized Sounds

Pamela A. Moro

Series: Routledge Series for Creative Teaching and Learning in Anthropology

Violins: Local Meanings, Globalized Sounds examines the violin as an object of meaning in a variety of cultural and historical contexts, and as a vehicle for introducing anthropological issues. Each chapter highlights concepts as taught in lower-level anthropology courses, and includes teaching and learning tools. Chapters range from a memoir-like social biography of a single instrument to explorations of violins in relation to technology, labor, the environment, migration, globalization, childhood, cultural understandings of talent and virtuosity, and prestige.

Ethnographic Inquiry and Lived Experience

An Epistemological Critique

Wing-Chung Ho, The City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Studies in Anthropology

Ho addresses two fundamental theoretical questions about how best to practice ethnographic inquiries to obtain qualitative, experience-near, and shareable accounts of human living. The first question is the epistemology of ethnography. The second question is: what is the putative object that the ethnographer writes about? By addressing these two questions, this book offers refreshed epistemological guidelines for conducting ethnographic research for scientific reasoning. More importantly, it also provides a crucial knowledge base for comprehending the current epistemological debates inherent in the production of ethnographic knowledge and furthering discussions.

Medical Materialities

Toward a Material Culture of Medical Anthropology

Edited by Aaron Parkhurst and Timothy Carroll

Series: Routledge Studies in Health and Medical Anthropology

Medical Materialities investigates possible points of cross-fertilisation between medical anthropology and material culture studies, and considers the successes and limitations of both sub-disciplines as they attempt to understand places, practices, methods, and cultures of healing. The editors present and expand upon a definition of 'medical materiality', namely the social impact of the agency of often mundane, at times non-clinical, materials within contexts of health and illness, as caused by the properties and affordances of this material.

Security Blurs

The Politics of Plural Security Provision

Edited by Tessa Diphoorn and Erella Grassiani

Series: Routledge Studies in Anthropology

Security Blurs focuses on the notion of 'blurring' as a process whereby actors engaged in the provision of security interact and thereby reconfigure security ideas, logics, and practices. The chapters address the entanglements and overlaps between a variety of state and non-state providers, from the police and the military to gangs, community organizations, and private security companies. The contributors offer rich ethnographic studies of everyday security practices across a range of cultural contexts and consider the impact on the lives of ordinary citizens.

Coffee, the Café & the 21st Century City

Emma Felton, Queensland University of Technology, Australia

Café culture is flourishing in cities across the world. From London to Seoul, Melbourne to Shanghai and many cities in between, people are flocking to cafés. The unparalleled growth of café culture in 21st century cities is synonymous with profound social, cultural and technological change. In its global sweep, this book examines the development of café culture in China, Japan and Australia, as significant and interesting departures from traditional European café culture. Interviews with café patrons and staff illuminate why the café has become a meaningful place for many people in the 21st century city.

The Culture of AI

Everyday Life and the Digital Revolution

Anthony Elliott, University of South Australia, Australia

In The Culture of AI, Elliott explores how intelligent machines, advanced robotics, accelerating automation, big data and the Internet of Everything impact upon day-to-day life and contemporary societies. With remarkable clarity and insight, Elliott's examination of the reordering of everyday life highlights the centrality of AI to everything we do – from receiving Amazon recommendations to requesting Uber, and from getting information from virtual personal assistants to talking with chatbots. Written by one of the world's foremost social theorists, this book is a major contribution to the field and a provocative reflection on one of the most urgent issues of our time.

Aging in the Family

George E. Dickinson, College of Charleston, USA and Brenda S. Sanders, College of Charleston, USA

Aging in the Family identifies intergenerational perspectives to understanding the nature of marital satisfaction, singlehood, adult, child-older parent, siblings and grandparents-grandchild relations in later life. The volume will focus on gender, cultural and socioeconomic factors, review societal expectations and highlight the roles of older adults and their functions within family settings. It uses a research into practice focus and is rich in case studies. The book is essential reading for anyone looking for an introduction to the contemporary realities of older adults and family relationships.

Biotech Juggernaut

Hope, Hype, and Hidden Agendas of Entrepreneurial BioScience

Tina Stevens and Stuart Newman

Biotech Juggernaut corrects the informational imbalance between producers of biotechnologies and the intended consumers of these technologies and general society by tracing the rise and cultural politics of biotechnology from a critical perspective. The authors offer an account of what they call the "biotech juggernaut": the converging vectors of economic, political, social, and cultural elements driving biotechnology's swift advance. They tell this story by focusing on the intensifying effort of bioentrepreneurs to apply human genetic engineering technologies and to extend the commercial reach of synthetic biology (often called, "extreme genetic engineering.")

Moving Beyond Fear

Upending the Security Tales in Capitalism, Fascism, and Democracy

Charles Derber and Yale R. Magrass, University of Massachusetts, Dartmouth

Series: Universalizing Resistance

While national security stories often report real threats, leaders' narratives are much about legitimating the power of rulers and the political/economic system that brought them to power. The authors offer a penetrating examination across history and societies, revealing a great irony about security stories: historically they increase insecurity, imperiling citizens and nation. In the U.S., the contradiction is especially acute, as security stories told by Trump divide U.S. citizens against one another. The book builds from an analysis of the dangers of reigning security stories to a new paradigm of true security that is less threatening to citizens and to humans across the planet.

Our Bodies Not Ourselves

WOMEN AGING FROM MENOPAUSE TO ONE HUNDRED

Kathryn A. Kirigin, Kathryn A. Kirigin is Professor Emerita at the University of Kansas, USA, and Carol A.B. Warren

The 1970s best-seller Our Bodies Ourselves encouraged young women to discuss intimate aspects of female bodies and sexuality. Our Bodies Not Ourselves does too—but for women aging from menopause to old age. The authors discuss sexuality, genitalia, intimacy, and relationships. Yet the aging body has many other issues. This ethnography and Western cultural history of aging and gender covers the body from head to toe—from hair and skin to hips and knees. Based on interviews with 200 women, the book considers the aging body in private and public contexts. Although, in old age, women's bodies are no longer ourselves, they are reclaimed through everyday experiences and relationships.

Power, Politics, and Society

An Introduction to Political Sociology

Betty A Dobratz, Iowa State University, USA, Timothy Buzzell, Baker University, USA and Lisa K Waldner

Power, Politics & Society: An Introduction to Political Sociology discusses how sociologists have organized the study of politics into conceptual frameworks, and how each of these frameworks foster a sociological perspective on power and politics in society. This includes discussing how these frameworks can be applied to understanding current issues and other "real life" aspects of politics. The authors connect with students by engaging them in activities where they complete their own applications of theory, hypothesis testing, and forms of inquiry.

Sociology

A Biosocial Introduction

Rosemary L. Hopcroft

In an era of human genome research, environmental challenges, new reproductive technologies, and more, students can benefit from an introductory sociology text that is a biologically informed. This freshly updated second edition integrates mainstream sociological research in all areas of sociology with a scientifically-informed model of an evolved, biological human actor. This text allows students to better understand their emotional, social, and institutional worlds. It also illustrates how biological understanding naturally enhances the sociological approach. Tables, Figures, Photos, and the author's concise and remarkably lively style make this a truly enjoyable book to read and teach.

The Lonely Quest

Constructing the Self in the Twenty-First Century United States

Robert C. Hahart

The U.S. is a country divided along lines of gender, economic inequality, educational level, and political affiliation. Many Americans describe difficulty in coming to terms with the demands placed on them in their work, communities, and personal lives and achieving satisfaction. The institutional crises that pervade our politics, economy, educational systems, and communities have inspired a contemporary crisis: a widespread inability for many to live as integrated, effective selves in the twenty-first century United States. Drawing on a wide range of historical and contemporary research, The Lonely Quest explores the dilemma of constructing the self in the U.S. today.

When Race Meets Class

African Americans Coming of Age in a Small City

Rhonda F Levine

A rare, fifteen-year ethnography, this book follows the lives of individual, low-income African American youth from the beginning of high school into their early adult years. It is about how their interaction and experience with multiple social institutions and individuals, and the volatility and constraints they faced and continue to face, shape their lives. The book reveals the critical junctures and turning points shaping life trajectories, challenging many long-held assumptions about the persistence of racial inequality by offering new insights on the educational and occupational barriers facing young African Americans.

Bicycle Utopias

Imagining Fast and Slow Cycling Futures

Cosmin Popan

Series: Changing Mobilities

Bicycle Utopias investigates the future of urban mobilities and post-car societies, arguing that the bicycle can become the nexus around which most human movement will revolve. Drawing on literature on post-car futures (Urry 2007; Dennis and Urry 2009), transition theory (Geels et al. 2012) and utopian studies (Levitas 2010, 2013), this book imagines a slow bicycle system as a necessary means to achieve more sustainable mobility futures.

Disruptive Transport

Driverless Cars, Transport Innovation and the Sustainable City of Tomorrow

Edited by William Riggs

Series: Routledge Equity, Justice and the Sustainable City series

With the rise of shared and networked vehicles, autonomous vehicles, and other transportation technologies, technological change is outpacing urban planning and policy. This is one of the first books to explore the impact that emerging transport technology is having on cities and their residents, and how policy is needed to shape the cities that we want to have in the future. The book contains a selection of contributions based on the most advanced empirical research, and case studies for how future transport can be harnessed to improve urban sustainability and justice.

Education in East Jerusalem

Occupation, Political Power and Struggle

Samira Alayan

This book gives a voice to the residents of East Jerusalem, addressing educational issues and revealing implicit layers in Israeli policy and attitude affecting the education system. In this close examination of school life under occupation, the book presents criticism of the system from within, and calls for teachers to prioritise pupils' needs. Uncovering a complex daily reality experienced in schools by principals, teachers and pupils, it presents new findings, focusing on system-internal properties which manifest the macro effects inside the micro-system. The author draws on field studies and content analysis to show a need for educational action and suggest ample room for improvement.

GIS in Sustainable Urban Planning and Management

A Global Perspective

Edited by Martin van Maarseveen, ITC, University of Twente, The Netherlands, Javier Martinez, ITC, University of Twente, The Netherlands and Johannes Flacke, ITC, University of Twente, The Netherlands

GIS is used today to better understand and solve urban problems. This book explores and illustrates the use of geo-information in the planning and management of urban regions. The first part of the book addresses the concept of sustainable urban development, its different frameworks, and the many ways of measuring sustainability and its value in the urban policy arena. The second part discusses how urban planning is related to the shape of our cities, examines various spatial configurations of cities, the spread of activities, and the demands placed on different functions to achieve strategic objectives. This understanding, in a dynamic urban growth context, relates to the compact city view.

Instrumental Lives

An Intimate Biography of an Indian Laboratory

Pankaj Kumar Ramawtar Sekhsaria

Series: Routledge Focus on Modern Subjects

The book is an account of instrument making in a modern Indian scientific laboratory. It uses qualitative research methods such as interviews, historical analysis and laboratory ethnography, to present the micro-details of this enterprise, the counter-intuitive methods employed, and the un-expected material, human and intellectual resources that were mobilised in the process. It locates scientific research and innovation within the social, political and cultural context of a laboratory's physical location and asks important questions of the dominant narratives of innovation that remain fixated on quantitative metrics of publishing, patenting and generating commerce.

Urban Studies: Border and Mobility

Proceedings of the 4th International Conference on Urban Studies (ICUS 2017), December 8-9, 2017, Universitas Airlangga, Surabaya, Indonesia

Edited by Amin Alamsjah

4th International Conference on Urban Studies: Border and Mobility focuses on the impacts of urban mobility on issues surrounding borders. It delves into and challenge our preconceptions of order and borders, and about the ways borders create place, space, identity and discourse – in areas as diverse as the academia, advocacy, politics, socio-economic and security in local, national or international levels. This conference aims to assess how the notions of boundaries continue to shape our attitudes to gender, sexuality, race, ethnicity, identity and security.

Young Men's Experiences of Long Term Imprisonment

Living Life

Rachel Rose Tynan, Goldsmiths University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Ethnography

Drawing on ethnographic research with a group of young men serving long and indeterminate sentences in an English Young Offenders' Institution, this book provides a detailed analysis of their experiences in and out of prison. In employing ethnographic methods, this book attempts to move away from established debates about why young people commit crime or how they should be treated in custody, and instead focus on how young men themselves understand their sentence and imagine their futures.

Youth in the Digital Age

Paradox, Promise, Precipitament

Edited by Kate C Tilleczek, University of Prince Edward Island, Canada and Valerie M Campbell, University of Prince Edward Island, Canada

Series: Youth, Young Adulthood and Society

Digital and social media are ubiquitous in the lives of young people, to the point where they are an accepted part of the social and cultural landscape. But how do youth make meaning of their technologically mediated lives? This book proposes answers from an interdisciplinary view of youth and the digital age. It provides a clearer understanding of the opportunities, tensions, and contradictions that young people must negotiate in the digital age.

Zainichi Korean Women in Japan

Voices

Jackie J. Kim-Wachutka, Ritsumeikan University, Japan

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

Featuring in-depth interviews from 1994 to the present, three generations of Zainichi Korean women—those born in Japan, whose parents migrated from colonial Korea before or during WWII and the Asia-Pacific War—share their version of history, revealing their lives as members of an ethnic minority. No longer silenced by constricting patriarchal traditions, the women in this book are now able to tell their history. Ethnography, interviews, and the women's personal and creative writings offer an in-depth look into their intergenerational dynamics and provide a new way of exploring the hidden inner world of migrant women and the different ways displacement affects subsequent generations.

Shaping Children's Services

Chris Hanvey

This text is an authoritative analysis of current services for children and young people in the UK. Drawing on European-wide data, it critiques the policies that have shaped today's services, argues that the current system is insufficiently joined-up and outlines a radical new model for the integrated delivery of children's care. It examines key indicators of children's development, provides a breakdown of the economics of caring for children and presents both good and failing examples of children's services. This book is an essential read for those involved in working with children from fields including health, education, social care, juvenile justice and voluntary sector services.

Integrating Health Humanities, Social Science, and Clinical Care

A Guide to Self-Discovery, Compassion, and Well-being

Anna-leila Williams, Quinnipiac University, USA

The health humanities are widely understood as a way to cultivate perspective, compassion, empathy and reflection among health professions students. This text links humanities themes to clinical practice using patients' and health professionals' stories. Presenting a comprehensive medical humanities curriculum, it highlights critical topics, such as cultivating resilience, witnessing suffering, understanding professional and personal roles, and recognizing interdependence. The chapters encourage active engagement with a range of literary and artistic artefacts and guide the reader to explore the skills necessary to navigate a relevant clinical scenario.

Managing the global health response to epidemics

Social science perspectives

Edited by Mathilde Bourrier, University of Geneva, Switzerland, Nathalie Brender, HEG - University of Applied Sciences Western Switzerland and Claudine Burton-Jeangros, University of Geneva, Switzerland

Series: Routledge Studies in Public Health

Recent epidemics have prompted large-scale international interventions. During a crisis, however, global health actions – including planning and organizing, communicating about risk, and cost-benefit evaluations – aren't usually part of single, integrated global response. Arguing that an uncoordinated approach can be challenged by local conditions, expectations and resistance, this volume provides insights for future outbreak management and global health governance. Drawing on experiences with A(H1N1), Ebola Virus Disease and SARS, the book takes a social science perspective to outline the current state of global health emergency responses and explore ways in which they can be improved.

Routledge Handbook on the Politics of Global Health

Edited by Richard Parker, Columbia University, USA; Associação Brasileira Interdisciplinar de AIDS (ABIA), Brazil and Jonathan Garcia, Oregon State University, USA

Significant debate exists about the possible solutions for nearly all of the most important global health challenges and competing visions of the values that should underlie global health policies have emerged, ranging from an emphasis on cost effectiveness and resource constraints, to new calls for health and human rights, and social justice. This volume critically evaluates how the global health industry has evolved and how the interests of diverse political and economic stakeholders are shaping the context of a rapidly changing landscape. It provides an authoritative overview for all those working in or concerned with the politics of public health around the globe.

The Anthropology of Epidemics

Edited by Ann Kelly, Frédéric Keck and Christos Lynteris

Series: Routledge Studies in Health and Medical Anthropology

Over the past decades, infectious disease epidemics have come to increasingly pose major global health challenges to humanity. The Anthropology of Epidemics approaches epidemics as total social phenomena: processes and events which encompass and exercise a transformational impact on social life whilst at the same time functioning as catalysts of shifts and ruptures as regards human-non/human relations. Bearing a particular mark on subject areas and questions which have recently come to shape developments in anthropological thinking, the volume brings epidemics to the forefront of anthropological debate, as an exemplary arena for social scientific study and analysis.

The Anthropology of Tobacco [Open Access]

Ethnographic Adventures in Non-Human Worlds

Andrew Russell, Durham University Dpt. of Anthropology, Canada Durham University, UK Durham University, UK Durham University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Public Health

Tobacco has become one of the most widely used and traded commodities on the planet. Reflecting contemporary anthropological interest in material culture studies, Anthropology of Tobacco makes the plant the centre of its own, contentious, global story in which, instead of a passive commodity, tobacco becomes a powerful player in a global adventure involving people, corporations and public health.

This book presents students, scholars and practitioners in anthropology, public health and social policy with unique and multiple perspectives on tobacco-human relations.

Improving Your NCAA® Bracket with Statistics

William Thomas Adams

Series: ASA-CRC Series on Statistical Reasoning in Science and Society

The NCAA(R) Men's Division I Basketball Championship takes place each spring in the United States. Bracket pools based on this tournament have become a popular pastime. A bracket involves the participant predicting the outcome of each game in the tournament, and those predictions are compared against others in the pool to determine a winner. In recent years, statistical methods have been used to develop strategies for optimizing predictions in a bracket pool. This book looks at the history of the pool, and runs through various techniques, based on quite sophisticated statistical methodology, for choosing a strategy to win your bracket pool.

Sex, Gender, and Sexuality in Sport

Queer Inquiries

Edited by Vikki Krane, Bowling Green State University, US

Gender and sexual identities have historically been pushed to the margins in sport. While there is more visibility and inclusion for LGBTIQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex, queer) people in sport today than in the past, there still exists bigotry and marginalization. This book critically assesses what we know about sex, gender and sexuality in sport, and explores the range of sport climates for LGBTIQ people, from fully inclusive to overtly hostile. Drawing on a cultural studies perspective, and with social justice at the heart of every chapter, the book discusses theory, policy, practice and the experiences of LGBTIQ sportspeople around the world.

Instant Notes in Sport and Exercise Biomechanics

Second Edition

Paul Grimshaw, University of Adelaide, Australia, Michael Cole, Australian Catholic University, Australia, Adrian Burden, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK and Neil Fowler, Manchester Metropolitan University, UK

This textbook encompasses rapidly developing areas, such as sports equipment design and modern optoelectronic motion analysis systems, and includes new sections that further develop the application of biomechanics in sports performance and injury prevention. It contains useful features, such as clear definitions of key terms, applied examples, guides to further reading, and revision questions with worked solutions. A new companion website includes a test bank, downloadable illustrations and suggestions for learning outcomes and/or lab-based sessions for lecturers. Engaging, direct, and now fully refreshed, this is the only biomechanics textbook you'll ever need.

Athlete Learning in Elite Sport

A Cultural Framework

Edited by Natalie Barker-Ruchti, University of Gothenburg, Sweden

Series: Routledge Research in Sports Coaching

This is the first sociological-pedagogical text to conceptualise athlete learning in elite sport and across athletic careers. It outlines theories of learning and argues for a cultural perspective capturing contextual influence, temporal changes, individual dispositions and subjectivity. The book features nine international, multi-contextual and multi-experience case studies of athlete careers, experiences, and learning across individual and team sports such as, boxing, rugby, basketball, hockey and gymnastics. This is fascinating reading for students, researchers and practitioners in sport organisations, sports coaching, coach education and sport sociology and pedagogy.

Sustainable Engineering

Principles and Implementation

Catherine Mulligan, Concordia University, Montreal, Quebec, Canada

Due to the constraints on resources and the environment, engineers are faced with new challenges. While it is generally believed that the concepts of sustainable development must be adhered to protect future generations, in practice it is very difficult. Therefore, the focus of this book is to provide both conceptual understanding and practical skills to apply sustainable engineering principles to engineering design. This book provides a comprehensive overview of the interdisciplinary field of sustainability as it applies to engineering. It will describe the tools, protocols and guidelines that are currently available through case studies and examples from around the world.

The Shifting Sands of the North Sea Lowlands

Literary and Historical Imaginaries

Katie Ritson

Series: Routledge Environmental Humanities

This book shows how the fragile landscapes around the North Sea have served as bellwethers for environmental concern both now and in the recent past. It looks at literary sources drawn from the countries around the North Sea (Denmark, Germany, the Netherlands, and England) from the mid-nineteenth century onwards, taking them out of their established national and cultural contexts and reframing them in the light of human concern with fast-changing and hazardous environments. This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of the Environmental Humanities, including Eco-criticism and Environmental History, as well as anyone studying literature from the Germanic philologies.

Theory of Sampling and Sampling Practice

Francis R. Pitard, Francis Pitard Sampling Consultants, Broomfield, CO

The third edition is a concise, step-by-step guide for process variability management and methods. Updated and expanded, this new edition provides a comprehensive study of heterogeneity, covering the basic principles of sampling theory and its various applications. It presents many practical examples to allow readers to select appropriate sampling protocols and assess the validity of sampling protocols from others. The variability of dynamic process streams using variography is discussed to help bridge sampling theory with statistical process control.

Alternative Food Politics

From the Margins to the Mainstream

Edited by Michelle Phillipov, University of Tasmania, Australia and Katherine Kirkwood, Queensland University of Technology, Australia

Series: Critical Food Studies

This book explores the multifaceted relationship between food and food-practices, media and representations, and the politics of production and consumption. The collection takes as its starting point the increasingly articulated connections between food, media and politics, and explores these connections through a variety of case studies and theoretical resources. This is a pivotal time for media and food industries, and this book is essential reading for scholars and students seeking to better understand the futures, possibilities and limits of food politics today.

Business Battles in the US Energy Sector

Lessons for a Clean Energy Transition

Christian Downie, Australian National University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Energy Policy

This book examines how and why business actors are shaping energy policy in the US. In doing so, this work provides the first detailed analysis of business actors in the US energy sector and presents new theoretical insights about the strategies business actors use to exert influence over the policy process. It concludes by identifying strategies that policymakers can employ to overcome resistance from the fossil fuel industries, and reflects on the implications for future research, particularly considering the impact of the Trump Presidency.

Climate Adaptation Finance and Investment in California

Jesse M. Keenan

Series: Routledge Focus on Environment and Sustainability

This book serves as a guide for local governments and private enterprises as they navigate the uncharted waters of investing in climate change adaptation and resilience. This book serves not only as a resource guide for identifying potential funding sources but also as a roadmap for asset management and public finance processes. While the main focus of this work is on the State of California, this book offers broader insights for how states, local governments and private enterprises can take those critical first steps in investing in society's collective adaptation to climate change.

Climate Change, Politics and the Press in Ireland

David Robbins

Series: Routledge Focus on Environment and Sustainability

With a view to advancing our understanding of the "frame competition" around climate change, and to presenting the perspectives of journalists regarding climate change as a journalistic topic, this book presents an in-depth case history of media coverage of climate change in Ireland. The main objective of this book is to advance our understanding of the contest to establish the dominant framing of climate change in the media discourse.

Culture, Space and Climate Change

Vulnerability and Resilience in European Coastal Areas

Thorsten Heimann

Series: Routledge Advances in Climate Change Research

This book examines how cultural differences in the handling of climate change along European coasts can be described and explained. The work develops the concept of culture-as-relational space, elaborates explanatory approaches for environmental sociology and investigates them by surveying more than 800 actors responsible for spatial development of European coastal regions in the Netherlands, Germany, Denmark and Poland.

EMF Effects from Power Sources and Electromog

William J. Rea, Environmental Health Center, Dallas, Texas, USA

Series: Electromagnetic Frequency Sensitivities

The field of electromagnetic sensitivity is the new epidemic of the 21st century, and can cause disease of the automatic nerve system in any part of the body. This is as a result of chemical sensitivity, in which over 80,000 chemicals are involved, resulting in innumerable combinations. A cursory understanding of the combinations can help clinicians partially understand the associated problems and thus help in the diagnosis and treatment of electromagnetic sensitivities. But a basic understanding of environmentally induced illness and healing must first be understood by the clinicians before diseases occur such as cardiac arrhythmia, muscle spasms, and nerve pain.

Environmental Literacy and New Digital Audiences

Patrick Brereton

Series: Routledge Studies in Environmental Communication and Media

Exploring the growing power and influence of media formats and outlets like YouTube and gaming, alongside fictional and documentary film, this book considers new modes of environmental literacy to ascertain the effectiveness of digital and filmic stimuli on an audience's perception of environmental issues, and its specific impact on environmental action. Drawing on rich empirical data from research carried out in the US and Europe, Brereton establishes how environmental narratives and meanings are created and being received by contemporary audiences.

Routledge Handbook of Food as a Commons

Edited by Jose Luis Vivero-Pol, Tomaso Ferrando, Olivier de Schutter and Ugo Mattei

From the industrial revolution to the present day, food has been progressively transformed into a private, transnational, mono-dimensional commodity of mass consumption in a global market. But over the last decade there has been an increased recognition that this can be challenged and reconceptualized if food is regarded and enacted as a commons. It provides the first comprehensive review and synthesis of knowledge and new thinking on how key contemporary themes such as the right to adequate food, food and nutrition security and food sovereignty can be reinterpreted and create a paradigm shift through the lens of common property.

Routledge Handbook of the Study of the Commons

Edited by Blake Hudson, Jonathan Rosenbloom and Dan Cole

The study of the commons has expanded dramatically since the late 1960s and the subsequent work of Ostrom popularized the dilemma faced by users of common pool resources. This comprehensive Handbook serves as a unique synthesis and resource for understanding how analytical frameworks developed within the literature assist in understanding the nature and management of commons resources. It is inter-disciplinary and will appeal to a wide range of advanced students in environmental studies, natural resources, law, economics, politics, geography and sociology.

The Morphology of Tourism

Planning for Impact in Tourist Destinations

Philip Feifan Xie and Kai Gu

Series: New Directions in Tourism Analysis

Applying the methods and models of morphology to tourism, this book illustrates the form, use and effects of the development and transformation of the tourist destination. International in scope, this book pays close attention to key sectors and locations such as coastal tourism, urban tourism and waterfront redevelopment. It advocates that awareness of the critical link between temporospatial impacts and morphological progress is necessary to accommodate changes within a pattern of evolutionary growth. As such, this book makes a significant contribution to the literature on tourism planning, urban design, geography and landscape architecture.

Handbook of Parenting

Volume 2: Biology and Ecology of Parenting, Third Edition

Edited by Marc H. Bornstein, Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, USA

This third edition of the Handbook of Parenting brings together an array of field-leading experts to understand many diverse aspects of parenting. Volume 2 relates parenting to its biological roots and sets it in its ecological framework. Part I, on the Biology of Parenting, examines the evolution of parenting and non-human parenting, as well as the biological bases of human parenting. A deep understanding of parenting also depends on the ecologies in which it takes place. Part II, on the Ecology of Parenting, examines ancient and modern histories of parenting as well as various social factors to provide an overarching relational developmental contextual systems perspective.

3-System Theory of the Cognitive Brain

A Post-Piagetian Approach to Cognitive Development

Olivier Houdé, Sorbonne

Series: Essays in Developmental Psychology

This ground-breaking book presents a new post-Piagetian theory in child development, focusing on the importance of the pre-frontal cortex and inhibition. Houdé's '3-System Theory' simultaneously explains the early cognitive abilities discovered in babies, the dynamic, strategic, and non-linear process of cognitive development in children, and the fast heuristics and biases observed in adults. Anchored in the history of psychology and current experimental psychology, this theory fuels debates on thinking, reasoning, and cognitive development, and has exciting implications for neuro-education. It is essential reading for students and researchers in cognitive development and education.

Cases of Amnesia

Contributions to Understanding Memory and the Brain

Edited by Sarah E. MacPherson, University of Edinburgh and Sergio Della Sala, University of Edinburgh Series: Frontiers of Cognitive Psychology

This volume presents new case studies of amnesic patients, and re-examines classic cases in the light of recent findings, to show the major contribution they make to our understanding of human memory and neuropsychology. Each case provides a description of the patient's history, how their memory was assessed, and what conclusions can be made in relation to cognitive models of memory. The cases also include examples of unilateral representational neglect, visual imagery deficits, semantic memory deficits, source memory deficits, and confabulation. The volume will interest researchers in cognitive psychology and cognitive neuroscience, and professionals in neuropsychological rehabilitation.

Developmental Tasks in Adolescence

Klaus Hurrelmann, Hertie School of Governance, Germany and Gudrun Quenzel

Hurrelmann and Quenzel introduce the concept of developmental tasks to analyse the typical physical, psychological and social requirements of adolescence. They apply socialisation theory to four major developmental tasks of life: Qualifying, Bonding, Consumption and Participation, arguing that if the tasks in these areas are mastered, then personal individuation and social integration can take place, which is a prerequisite for the formation of self-identity. This sociological approach to adolescent development is valuable reading for students and academics in psychology, sociology, education, social work and youth studies, and for those on professional training courses in these fields.

Domestic Violence and Psychology

Critical Perspectives on Intimate Partner Violence and Abuse

Paula Nicolson, University of London, UK

Series: Women and Psychology

This book offers a psychological perspective on domestic violence and develops a theoretical framework for examining the context, intentions and experiences in the lives of people who experience abuse and abuse themselves. Nicolson considers the importance a psychological analysis offers towards the ultimate reduction of domestic violence happening. The new edition has been updated to include the latest developments in Intimate Partner Violence and Abuse (IPVA), and in particular examines the impact of violent and abusive family life on all members, including children. This is essential reading for students, academics, and professionals interested in domestic abuse.

Global Leadership and Coaching

Flourishing under intense pressure at work

Rachel Ellison

This collection of essays on aspects of coaching and leadership across many different cultures and in international settings draws on the author's 15 years of coaching experience. Rachel Ellison brings psychoanalytic thinking into everyday life, connects across cultures and explores themes including resilience, change, ethical dilemmas and diversity. Drawing on real client case studies, each chapter includes fresh, practical material for leaders wanting to develop themselves and their systems more honestly and sustainably. Engaging and accessible, this book aims to make a positive contribution to how leaders lead, work, and shape organisations and the world.

Moving Beyond "Themes Emerged"

Edited by Aine Humble, Mount Saint Vincent University, Canada and Elise Radina, Miami University, Ohio, USA

This volume offers an in-depth look into how qualitative social science researchers approach their data analysis. It moves beyond the usual vague statement of "themes emerged from the data" to show readers how researchers actively and consciously arrive at their themes, revealing the complexity of making sense of thousands of pages of interview data, multiple data sources, and diverse types of data (observations, interviews, photos, diary entries). The book focuses on a diversity of topics in family research and on different methodologies, but its findings provide an invaluable resource for experienced and novice qualitative researchers throughout the social sciences.

Representations, Community and Culture

Sandra Jovchelovitch

Series: Psychology Press & Routledge Classic Editions

This is a classic edition of Sandra Jovchelovitch's influential book which aimed to demonstrate that knowledge is linked to representations and therefore cannot escape from the societal and cultural processes that shape the development of representational processes in humans. Recent developments in both psychology and related behavioural disciplines have confirmed the necessity and vitality of Jovchelovitch's approach and the new introduction sees the author reflect on the influence of her original research and the subsequent developments in the field 10 years since the book was first published. This is a valuable book for anyone interested in the psychology of social representation.

Self-Determination Theory

Basic Psychological Needs in Motivation, Development, and Wellness

Richard M. Ryan, PhD, Institute for Positive Psychology and Education, Australian Catholic University, Sydney; Department of Clinical and Social Sciences in Psychology, University of Rochester, NY and Edward L. Deci, PhD, Department of Clinical and Social Sciences in Psychology, University of Rochester, NY

Self-determination theory (SDT) provides a framework for understanding the factors that promote motivation and healthy psychological and behavioral functioning. In this authoritative work, the codevelopers of the theory comprehensively examine SDT's conceptual underpinnings (including its six mini-theories), empirical evidence base, and practical applications across the lifespan. The volume synthesizes a vast body of research on how supporting—or thwarting—people's basic needs for competence, relatedness, and autonomy affects their development and well-being. Chapters cover implications for practice and policy in education, health care, psychotherapy, sport, and the workplace.

Stress and Recovery in Sport

A Manual for Testing and Assessment

Michael Kellmann, Ruhr-Universität Bochum, Germany and Sarah Kölling, Ruhr University Bochum, Germany

The performance of professional athletes can be severely compromised by overtraining, prolonged periods of competition, or even life events outside their sporting lives. This manual includes two measurement instruments to gauge individual recovery, enabling both athletes and coaches to better understand the often unconscious processes that impinge upon peak performance, and potentially preventing psychological and emotional burnout. In addition to the instruments themselves, both of which are brief and easy to use, the book also discusses their development, the theoretical tenets on which they are based, and includes case studies of their usage.

Subjectivity and Critical Mental Health

Lessons from Brazil

Daniel Goulart

Series: Concepts for Critical Psychology

This book draws on empirical findings to offer a critical reading of challenges relating to mental health reform, with a focus on the new institutionalization phenomenon set within the context of Brazilian mental health services. Drawing on González Rey's theory, the author examines subjectivity as a key concept to challenge the individualized and reified perspective that psychology and mental health studies have traditionally sustained. The book ends by examining possible alternatives for critical mental health, that engage with culture and society. This is fascinating reading for students and academics interested in critical psychology, mental health, and education.

The End of Morality

Taking Moral Eliminativism Seriously

Richard Garner and Richard Joyce

This collection of twelve chapters offers a critical examination of the options available to the moral error theorist. After an introduction outlines the topic, explains terminology, and offers suggestions for further reading, the book address questions like: Is it true that the more that people are motivated by moral concerns, the more likely it is that society will be elitist, authoritarian, and dishonest?; Does an appeal to moral values exacerbate conflicts?; Would it even be possible to abolish morality? The End of Morality addresses these and related questions, investigating the harms and benefits of moral thought and considering what the world might be like without morality.

Multiple Regression and Beyond

An Introduction to Multiple Regression and Structural Equation Modeling

Timothy Z. Keith, University of Texas, Austin, USA

Multiple Regression and Beyond offers a conceptually oriented introduction to multiple regression (MR) analysis and structural equation modeling (SEM), along with analyses that flow naturally from those methods.

By focusing on the concepts and purposes of MR and related methods, rather than the derivation and calculation of formulae, this book introduces material to students more clearly, and in a less threatening way. In addition to illuminating content necessary for coursework, the accessibility of this approach means students are more likely to be able to conduct research using MR or SEM—and more likely to use the methods wisely.

Dyslexia and Gender Bias

A Critical Review

Diane Montgomery, Middlesex University, UK

Providing an overview of the various understandings and approaches taken to dyslexia over the last 100 years, this text considers why men have traditionally taken the lead in dyslexia theory and research, whilst women have often been confined to practice. Montgomery argues that gender bias has played a significant and often obstructive role in the development of our identification and understanding of dyslexia. Chapters trace the contributions made by dyslexia pioneers, analyse current problems within education and research systems, and document widespread patterns of misogyny and gender discrimination in the field.

Educational Dilemmas

A Cultural Psychological Perspective

Edited by Luca Tateo

Series: Cultural Dynamics of Social Representation

Educational Dilemmas uses cultural psychology to explore the challenges, contradictions and tensions that occur during the process of education, with consideration of the effect these have at both the individual and the collective level. It argues that the focus on issues in learning overlooks a fundamental characteristic of education: that the process of educating is simultaneously both constructive and disruptive.

Educational Planning of Court-Involved Youth

A Guide for Counties, Systems, and Individuals

Amy Bishop, private practice, Colorado, USA

Educational Planning of Court-Involved Youth provides a framework for alleviating chronic barriers for youth in the child welfare and juvenile justice systems. Included in this guide are the necessary components to implement a collaborative, community-centered intervention system that meets the needs of the county, family, and individual. With the understanding that each county carries its own strengths, barriers, and resources, these tools serve as a model for adapting the system to cater to the needs of each area in which it is implemented. This text helps facilitate the coordination and collaboration necessary to foster comprehensive systems and individualized planning for youth.

Experience Sampling in Mental Health Research

Edited by Jasper Palmier-Claus, Gillian Haddock and Filippo Varese

Experience Sampling in Mental Health Research provides comprehensive and user-friendly guidance on when and how to apply this methodology in the assessment of clinical populations.

Divided into three sections, the book offers step-by-step instruction on how to design, develop and implement an experience sampling study, as well as advice on how this approach might be adapted for common mental health difficulties. With an eye to the future of this type of research, the contributors also consider how experience sampling might be adapted for use as a form of clinical assessment and intervention.

Childhood Abuse, Body Shame, and Addictive Plastic Surgery

The Face of Trauma.

Mark B. Constantian, University of Wisconsin School of Medicine

Childhood Abuse, Body Shame, and Addictive Plastic Surgery explores the psychopathology that plastic surgeons can encounter when seemingly excellent surgical candidates develop body dysmorphic disorder postoperatively. By examining how developmental abuse and neglect influence body image, addictions, and adult health, this book uncovers the childhood sources of body dysmorphic disorder. Written from the perspective of a plastic surgeon with extensive experience in this area and featuring clinical vignettes and trauma research, this heavily-referenced text offers a new explanation for body dysmorphic disorder that provides help for therapists and surgeons and hope for patients.

Attachment Theory in Practice

Emotionally Focused Therapy (EFT) with Individuals, Couples, and Families

Susan M. Johnson, Professor Emeritus of Clinical Psychology, University of Ottawa, ON, Canada; Distinguished Research Professor, Marital and Family Therapy Program, Alliant International University, San Diego, CA

Drawing on cutting-edge research on adult attachment—and providing an innovative roadmap for clinical practice—Susan M. Johnson argues that psychotherapy is most effective when it focuses on the healing power of emotional connection. The primary developer of emotionally focused therapy (EFT) for couples, Johnson now extends her attachment-based approach to individuals and families. The volume shows how EFT aligns perfectly with attachment theory as it provides proven techniques for treating anxiety, depression, and relationship problems.

Intercultural Therapy

Challenges, Insights and Developments

Edited by Baffour Ababio and Roland Littlewood

Intercultural Therapy: Challenges, Insights and Developments examines the impact of the work of the NAFSIYAT Intercultural Therapy Centre in North London, which focused on providing free, psychodynamic therapy.

Set up by Jafar Kareem, the centre was the first psychotherapy service with the specific task of offering psychodynamic psychotherapy to Britain's Black and ethnic minority population. The editors of this book have invited a number of Nafsiyat therapists and colleagues to give their view on what has changed, or not changed, in regard to the integration of intercultural issues into mainstream therapy.

Interrupting Racism

Equity and Social Justice in Schools

Rebecca Atkins, Wake County Public Schools and Alicia Oglesby, Emerson Prep School

Interrupting Racism provides school counselors with a brief overview of racial equity in schools and practical ideas that a school-level practitioner can put into action. The book walks readers through the current state of achievement gap and racial equity in schools and looks at issues around intention, action, white privilege, and implicit bias. Later chapters include interrupting racism case studies and stories from school counselors about incorporating stakeholders into the work of racial equity. Lessons and action plans promote staff-reflection and student-reflection, and encourage school counselors to drive systemic change for students through advocacy, collaboration, and leadership.

Humanising Mental Health Care in Australia

A Guide to Trauma-informed Approaches

Edited by Richard Benjamin, Joan Haliburton and Serena King

For many people presenting with mental illness, trauma is the primary problem. Written for mental health professionals by academics and clinicians working at the forefront of the field, this book outlines the trauma-informed approaches in mental health care that help bring an increasingly humanistic attitude towards mental illness and those who suffer from it. First providing a thorough grounding in the history of and evidence base for trauma-informed approaches, the book goes on to provide guidance on a wide range of individual and organisational treatment approaches, and valuable insights for clinicians working with special populations including indigenous communities and abused children.

Mutual Growth in the Psychotherapeutic Relationship

Reciprocal Resilience

Patricia Harte Bratt

Mutual Growth in the Psychotherapeutic Relationship: Reciprocal Resilience is an essential, innovative guide for mental health professionals who listen repeatedly to stories of devastation and trauma. Moving beyond traditions that consider the clinician as existing only for the patient and not as an individual, this breakthrough model explores the possibility of mutual resilience-building and personal benefit developing between therapists and their patients. This book presents a framework for teaching and supervising psychotherapists that can enrich clinician well-being and offers a pioneering approach, finding inspiration in even the darkest moments for therapists and patients alike.

Sensorimotor-Focused EMDR

A New Paradigm for Psychotherapy and Peak Performance

Arthur G. O'Malley, Consultant in Child and Adolescent psychiatry and Eye Movement Desensitization and Reprocessing Therapy or EMDR

Therapists are traditionally trained in either physical approaches such as physiotherapy or talking therapies such as counselling or CBT. But this important new book is based on the idea that the mind and body are one, encouraging therapists towards holism rather than taking a symptom based approach. Exploring how the automatic nervous system impacts on their client when exposed to situations of safety and danger, the book explains how different parts of the brain react, and how this knowledge can be integrated within the therapeutic relationship, particularly around issues of trauma or anxiety. It will enable a new perspective on both recovery and performance.

The Art of Creating a Magical Session

Key Elements for Transformative Psychotherapy

Paul J. Leslie

The Art of Creating a Magical Session outlines the ways in which psychotherapists can find new methods of moving their therapy sessions toward dynamic, healing interactions by shifting away from an overreliance on techniques and theories. Using a conceptual approach to client transformation, the book draws from a diverse range of sources including indigenous traditions and rituals, as well as the latest research on the common factors that contribute to success in the therapy room. Each chapter focuses on educating and inspiring mental health professionals to easily adapt and apply creative and resourceful approaches to help their own clients begin inner transformations.

Therapy, Stand-Up, and the Gesture of Writing

Towards Creative-Relational Inquiry

Jonathan Wyatt

Series: Writing Lives: Ethnographic Narratives

Therapy, Stand Up and the Gesture of Writing weaves together (and each reflects the other) an autoethnographical treatment of stories of therapy and accounts of stand-up. These will be examined through a theoretical framework primarily drawn from Deleuze and Guattari, exploring the new materialisms and affect theory. The book will demonstrate how therapy and stand-up each attend to the here-and-now, flesh-to-flesh presence of bodies in rooms, the ebbs and flows of energy, how tension builds and is released: how affect – humour, sadness, anger, more – happens. The book will have a strong methodological focus, exemplifying, explicating, and extending writing as a method of inquiry.

Smart but Scattered--and Stalled

10 Steps to Help Young Adults Use Their Executive Skills to Successfully Leave the Nest

Richard Guare, PhD, Center for Learning and Attention Disorders, Seacoast Mental Health Center, Portsmouth, NH, Peg Dawson, EdD, Center for Learning and Attention Disorders, Seacoast Mental Health Center, Portsmouth, NH and Colin Guare

Living at home can be a lifesaver for 20-somethings struggling to make it on their own--but it can also feel like a dead end. Now the authors of the hugely popular Smart but Scattered books on kids and teens provide much-needed help for young adults struggling to build independent lives. This compassionate book presents a 10-step plan for parents and grown kids to work through together. It combines a focus on executive skills (like planning, organization, and time management) with powerful tools for clarifying strengths and goals, staying motivated, and figuring out what kind of parental support is productive--and how much is too much.

Family Dramas

Intimacy, Power and Systems in Shakespeare's Tragedies

Gwyn Daniel

Series: The Systemic Thinking and Practice Series

Most of Shakespeare's tragedies have a family drama at their heart. This book brings these relationships to life, offering a radical new perspective on the tragic heroes and their dilemmas. Family Dramas: Intimacy and Power in Shakespeare's Tragedies focusses on the interactions and dialogues between people on stage, linking their intimate emotional worlds to wider social and political contexts. For Shakespeare lovers and psychotherapists alike, this application of systemic theory opens a new perspective on familiar literary territory.

An Evidence-Based Critique of Contemporary Psychoanalysis

Research, Theory, and Clinical Practice

Joel Paris, McGill University, Montreal, Canada

Series: Psychological Issues

An Evidence-Based Critique of Contemporary Psychoanalysis assesses the state of psychoanalysis in the 21st century. Joel Paris examines areas where analysis needs to develop a stronger scientific and clinical base, and to integrate its ideas with modern clinical psychology and psychiatry. He concludes by examining the legacy of psychoanalysis and making recommendations for integration into broader psychological theory and psychotherapy. It will be of great interest to psychoanalysts, psychoanalytic psychotherapists and scholars and practitioners across the mental health professions interested in the future and influence of the field.

Anxiety Between Desire and the Body

What Lacan Says in Seminar X

Bogdan Wolf

This book on Lacan and anxiety provides a unique study of one Lacan's most fascinating seminars, Seminar X, where Lacan gives testimony to the decade of teaching which preceded his infamous excommunication from the IPA.

Lacan on Anxiety in Seminar X is written from the perspective of analytical experience, its logic, its surprising discoveries, its direction with mathemes and formulas emerging along the way.

It will be of great interest to students of Lacan and of psychoanalysis, addressing a broad range of clinical practitioners.

Changing Notions of the Feminine

Confronting Psychoanalysts' Prejudices

Edited by Margarita Cerejido

Series: Psychoanalysis and Women Series

In this book, prominent psychoanalysts discuss their prejudices about changing notions of the feminine and how it impacts their work. The topics include how they conceive the expression of power, the compatibility of assertiveness and ambition with the feminine, the significance of the denigrated place historically occupied by women, and the psychoanalytic impact of the spread of new reproductive techniques.

Comprehensive Dictionary of Psychoanalysis

Salman Akhtar

This book provides easy to read, concise, and clinically useful explanations of over 1800 terms and concepts from the field of psychoanalysis. A history of each term is included in its definition and so is the name of its originator. The attempt is made to demonstrate how the meanings of the term under consideration might have changed, with new connotations accruing with the passage of time and with growth of knowledge. Where indicated and possible, the glossary includes diverse perspectives on a given idea and highlights how different analysts have used the same term for different purposes and with different theoretical aims in mind.

From Tribal Division to Welcoming Inclusion

Psychoanalytic Perspectives

Maxine K. Anderson

From Tribal Division to Welcoming Inclusion: Psychoanalytic Perspectives provides a fascinating contribution to our understanding of the increasingly polarized and divisive nature of global politics. Describing the significant role of early mental mechanisms in interactions between the individual and society, it offers a unique understanding of how our early mental life explains the social, cultural and political positions we assume later.

This psychoanalytic study provides a balm for turbulent times. It will be of great interest to researchers and interested readers in the broad field of psychoanalysis, as well as those in the fields of political science, cultural studies and anthropology.

Intimacy

Clinical, Cultural, Digital and Developmental Perspectives

Edited by Gurmeet Kanwal and Salman Akhtar

Intimacy takes a comprehensive and contemporary look at the many different facets of intimacy between people from a psychoanalytic perspective. "Intimacy" refers not only to warmth and closeness between people, but also to the different ways in which people relate to each other and themselves.

Intimacy is unique in combining perspectives from different psychoanalytic schools, including Classical Freudian, Attachment Theory, and Interpersonal Theory. The book highlights commonalities and differences between these approaches, emphasizes clinical issues throughout, and features numerous case study vignettes. It will appeal to psychoanalysts and psychotherapists across different schools.

Introduction to Key Concepts and Evolutions in Psychoanalysis

From Freud to Neuroscience

Alexis A. Johnson

Introduction to Key Concepts and Evolutions in Psychoanalysis offers an accessible starting point to understanding psychoanalysis by focusing on seven key psychoanalytic models and their creators and how the field has evolved over time from Sigmund Freud's original ideas. The book is based on the premise that Freud started a conversation over 100 years ago that continues to this day: who are we, why do we suffer so, and how can others help?

Islamic Psychoanalysis and Psychoanalytic Islam

Cultural and Clinical Dialogues

Edited by Ian Parker and Sabah Siddiqui, Researcher, School of Environment, Education and Development, University of Manchester, UK.

This pioneering volume brings together scholars and clinicians working at the intersection of Islam and psychoanalysis to explore both the connections that link these two traditions, as well as the tensions that exist between them.

In an era of increasing Islamophobia in the West, this important book identifies areas where clinical practice can be informed by a deeper understanding of contemporary Islam, as well as what it means to be a Muslim today. It will appeal to trainees and practitioners of psychoanalysts and psychotherapy, as well as scholars interested in religion and Islamic studies.

Jealousy

Developmental, Cultural, and Clinical Realms

Edited by Mary Kay O'Neil and Salman Akhtar

This book begins with an extensive overview of the nature, developmental origins and poignant cultural (especially poetic) allusions to jealousy, emphasizing that it is through artistic expression that a true understanding of this frequently deeply disturbing feeling is achieved. It closes with a thoughtful summary, synthesis and critique of the chapters by 12 distinguished analysts. These contributors, addressing the developmental, cultural and clinical aspects, add to the understanding of both normal and pathological jealousy and to the clarification of its confusion with envy.

Mind, Culture, and Global Unrest

Psychoanalytic Reflections

Salman Akhtar

Salman Akhtar steps out of his consulting room to address certain matters of urgent global concern. These include migration across national borders, the current refugee crisis, ethno-racial prejudice, subjective distress of minorities, and, above all, the forever-present ominous shadow of terrorism. Akhtar evolves and advocates a uniquely 'anthropological psychoanalysis' which is a blend of depth psychology and humanities, including sociology, economics, political science, history, and, of course, anthropology.

Psychoanalysis as an Ethical Process

Robert P. Drozek

Series: Relational Perspectives Book Series

What role does ethics play in the practice of psychoanalysis and psychotherapy? For most of its history, psychoanalysis has viewed ethics as a "side issue" in clinical work—occasionally important, but not central to therapeutic action. In Psychoanalysis as an Ethical Process, Robert Drozek highlights the foundational importance of ethical experience in the therapeutic relationship, as well as the role that ethical commitments have played in inspiring what has been called the "relational turn" in psychoanalysis.

Psychoanalysis, the Body, and the Oedipal Plot

A Critical Re-Imaging of the Body in Psychoanalysis

Fernanda Magallanes, Department of Philosophy, Universidad Iberoamericana, Mexico City, Mexico

Psychoanalysis, the Body, and the Oedipal Plot is a new radical departure in psychoanalytic exposition. An attempt is made to convey in a language accessible for people from different disciplines, some of the most difficult processes that conform our subjectivity and our concept of difference and alterity. Containing both significant theoretical material and applications of the theory to clinical psychoanalytic practice, this book offers the latest thinking on the importance of the body in psychoanalytic theory. It will be of interest to psychoanalysts, philosophers and cultural theorists.

Psychoanalytic Perspectives on the Shadow of the Parent

Mythology, History, Politics and Art

Edited by Jonathan Burke, British Psychotherapy Foundation

Psychoanalytic Perspectives on the Shadow of the Parent explores the psychological challenges faced by the offspring of either famous or notorious parents. Beginning with parental legacies found in mythology and the Bible, the book presents a series of case studies drawn from a range of narrative contexts. This is a lively and varied collection from a fascinating range of contributors. It provides readers with a new understanding of family history, trauma, and reckoning screened through a psychoanalytic perspective, and will appeal to psychoanalysts, psychotherapists, counsellors and anyone interested in the dynamics of the family.

Psychoanalytic Reflections on The Freudian Death Drive

In Theory, the Clinic, and Art

Rossella Valdrè, Italian Psychoanalytical Society and private practice, Genoa

Psychoanalytic Reflections on The Freudian Death Drive is a highly accessible book that investigates the relevance, complexity and originality of a hugely controversial Freudian concept which, the author argues, continues to exert enormous influence on modernity and plays an often-imperceptible role in the violence and so-called "sad passions" of contemporary society.

Researching the Unconscious

Principles of Psychoanalytic Method

Michael Rustin, University of East London, UK

Series: Tavistock Clinic Series

Researching the Unconscious provides an exposition of key issues in the philosophy and methods of the social sciences which are relevant to psychoanalysis as both a clinical practice and a human science. The book is unusual in its being based both on a deep understanding of and respect for psychoanalytical clinical practice, and on its author's wider knowledge of the philosophy and sociology of science. It is unique in its comprehensive approach to the principles of psychoanalytic research.

Sabina Spielrein and the Poetry of Psychoanalysis

Writing and the End of Analysis

Michael Gerard Plastow

Sabina Spielrein, who has been mostly known for her relation with her analyst Carl Jung, came to the attention of the wider public following the discovery and publication of some of her diaries and personal letters some forty years ago. The focus on her relationship with Jung and her personal story has consequently led to a neglect of her writings. Sabina Spielrein and the Poetry of Psychoanalysis seeks to re-address this distortion of her legacy by examining her original contribution to the field, such as her early analytical work with children.

Studying Lacan's Seminars IV and V

From Lack to Desire

Edited by Carol Owens and Nadezhda Almqvist

This collection of essays offers a comprehensive analysis of and reflection on the major themes of two seminal works by Jacques Lacan: Seminar IV – the object relation, and Seminar V – formations of the unconscious (1956-1958). The chapters interpret and evaluate Lacan's early teaching and find in his early concepts a fresh utility and scope for clinical work and psychoanalytic research and enquiry.

The Analyst's Reveries

Explorations in Bion's Enigmatic Concept

Fred Busch, PINE Psychoanalytic Center, and Minnesota Psychoanalytic Institute.

While the use of the analyst's own reveries in work with patients has increased in recent times, there has been little critical inquiry into its value, and the problems it may lead to. The Analyst's Reveries finds increasing veneration for the analyst's use of their reveries, while revealing important differences amongst post-Bionians in how reverie is defined and used clinically. Fred Busch ponders if it has been fully recognized that some post-Bionians suggest a new, radical paradigm for what is curative in psychoanalysis. The Analyst's Reveries will be of great interest to psychoanalysts and psychoanalytic psychotherapists.

Communication in today's world is characterised by a condition of persistent, semi-permanent connectivity, which connects and alienates. Greg Singh draws from a range of approaches, intellectual traditions and scholarly disciplines to engage key questions underpinning our communications media ecosystem. Bringing together influences from communitarian ethics, recognition theory, and relational and depth psychology, Singh synthesises key approaches to produce a critical inquiry at the heart of connectivity, where judgments are made quickly and where impacts can be far-reaching, affecting our relationships, wellbeing, mental health, and the health of our communities.

C. G. Jung

The Basics

Ruth Williams

Series: The Basics

Ruth Williams provides an insight and overview of Jung's family life, childhood, and relationship with (and subsequent split from) Sigmund Freud. Williams then progresses thematically through the key concepts in his work, clearly explaining ideas including the unconscious, the psyche, archetypes, individuation, psychological types and alchemy. It also presents Jung's theories on dreams and the self, and explains how his ideas developed. The book also discusses some of the negative claims made about Jung, especially his ideas on politics, race, and gender, and includes detailed explanations and examples throughout, including a chronology of Jung's life and suggested further reading.

Adolescents at Risk

Home-Based Family Therapy and School-Based Intervention

Nancy Boyd-Franklin and Brenna Hafer-Bry

Rich with illustrative case material, this book guides mental health professionals to break the cycle of at-risk behavior by engaging adolescents and their families in home, school, and community contexts. The authors explore the multigenerational patterns that shape the lives of poor and ethnic minority adolescents and present innovative strategies for intervening beyond the walls of the agency or clinic. Grounded in research, the book shows how to implement both home-based family therapy and school-based achievement mentoring to provide a comprehensive web of support.

Diagnosing Learning Disorders, Third Edition

From Science to Practice

Bruce F. Pennington, Distinguished University Professor of Psychology, University of Denver, Lauren M. McGrath, Department of Psychology, University of Denver and Robin L. Peterson, Pediatric Neuropsychologist and Assistant Clinical Professor, Children's Hospital Colorado

A definitive reference--now extensively revised with 70% new material--this book presents cutting-edge knowledge on how learning disorders develop and how to diagnose and treat them effectively. In addition to dyslexia and mathematics disabilities, the book covers speech and language disorders, attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder, autism spectrum disorder, and intellectual disability. Accessibly written, it is grounded in genetics, neuroscience, and developmental neuropsychology. Clinicians and educators are guided to make sense of children's impairments and strengths and make sound diagnostic decisions. Best practices in intervention are reviewed.

Girls and Autism

Educational, Family and Personal Perspectives

Edited by Barry Carpenter, Oxford Brookes University, UK, Francesca Happe, King's College London, UK, and Jo Egerton

As current research reveals a much more balanced male:female ratio in autism, this book provides crucial insight into autistic girls' experiences, helping professionals to recognise, understand, support and teach them effectively. Drawing on the latest research findings, chapters consider why girls have been historically overlooked by diagnostic approaches, explore potential identifying behaviours, and emphasize the challenges and advantages of the condition. Including contributions from autistic girls and women, their family members, from teachers, professionals and psychologists this is an invaluable source of first-hand insights, knowledge and strategies.

Working With Fathers in Psychoanalytic Parent-Infant Psychotherapy

Edited by Tessa Baradon, Anna Freud Centre, UK

This book interfaces theoretical ideas about fatherhood – until now relatively neglected in the literature – and their incorporation into the clinical practice of psychoanalytic parent infant psychotherapy. Often, when a family attends parent infant psychotherapy, issues of the father are eclipsed by attention to the mother, who is usually the identified patient. The book attends to both the barriers to psychological work with the father, and to ways in which he can be engaged in a therapeutic process. The book will be of interest to mental health practitioners working with infants, who will learn that each individual and the family as a system can benefit from such an inclusive approach.

Professor Peyton Wilde has an enviable life teaching sociology at an idyllic liberal arts college--yet she is troubled by a sense of fading inspiration. One day an invitation arrives. Peyton has been selected to attend a luxurious all-expense-paid seminar in Iceland, where participants, billed as some of the greatest thinkers in the world, will be charged with answering one perplexing question. Meeting her diverse teammates--two neuroscientists, a philosopher, a dance teacher, a collage artist, and a farmer--Peyton wonders what she could ever have to contribute. The ensuing journey of discovery will transform the characters' work, their biases, and themselves.

Secondary Qualitative Data Analysis in the Health and Social Sciences

Cheryl Tatano Beck

Involving the use of an existing dataset to answer new research questions, secondary analysis of qualitative data allows researchers to once again make use of their dataset. This book outlines three approaches to the method and addresses the key issues often wrestled with, such as ethical considerations, voice and representation. Intellectual and interpretive hazards that can jeopardize the outcome of these analyses are discussed, as are the criteria for assessing their quality and trustworthiness. Written for qualitative researchers from across the health and social sciences, it includes a review of the state of the science in nursing as well as in-depth illustrative case studies.

Shaping Children's Services

Chris Hanvey

This text is an authoritative analysis of current services for children and young people in the UK. Drawing on European-wide data, it critiques the policies that have shaped today's services, argues that the current system is insufficiently joined-up and outlines a radical new model for the integrated delivery of children's care. It examines key indicators of children's development, provides a breakdown of the economics of caring for children and presents both good and failing examples of children's services. This book is an essential read for those involved in working with children from fields including health, education, social care, juvenile justice and voluntary sector services.

Integrating Health Humanities, Social Science, and Clinical Care

A Guide to Self-Discovery, Compassion, and Well-being

Anna-leila Williams, Quinnipiac University, USA

The health humanities are widely understood as a way to cultivate perspective, compassion, empathy and reflection among health professions students. This text links humanities themes to clinical practice using patients' and health professionals' stories. Presenting a comprehensive medical humanities curriculum, it highlights critical topics, such as cultivating resilience, witnessing suffering, understanding professional and personal roles, and recognizing interdependence. The chapters encourage active engagement with a range of literary and artistic artefacts and guide the reader to explore the skills necessary to navigate a relevant clinical scenario.

Managing the global health response to epidemics

Social science perspectives

Edited by Mathilde Bourrier, University of Geneva, Switzerland, Nathalie Brender, HEG - University of Applied Sciences Western Switzerland and Claudine Burton-Jeangros, University of Geneva, Switzerland

Series: Routledge Studies in Public Health

Recent epidemics have prompted large-scale international interventions. During a crisis, however, global health actions – including planning and organizing, communicating about risk, and cost-benefit evaluations – aren't usually part of single, integrated global response. Arguing that an uncoordinated approach can be challenged by local conditions, expectations and resistance, this volume provides insights for future outbreak management and global health governance. Drawing on experiences with A(H1N1), Ebola Virus Disease and SARS, the book takes a social science perspective to outline the current state of global health emergency responses and explore ways in which they can be improved.

Routledge Handbook on the Politics of Global Health

Edited by Richard Parker, Columbia University, USA; Associação Brasileira Interdisciplinar de AIDS (ABIA), Brazil and Jonathan Garcia, Oregon State University, USA

Significant debate exists about the possible solutions for nearly all of the most important global health challenges and competing visions of the values that should underlie global health policies have emerged, ranging from an emphasis on cost effectiveness and resource constraints, to new calls for health and human rights, and social justice. This volume critically evaluates how the global health industry has evolved and how the interests of diverse political and economic stakeholders are shaping the context of a rapidly changing landscape. It provides an authoritative overview for all those working in or concerned with the politics of public health around the globe.

The Anthropology of Epidemics

Edited by Ann Kelly, Frédéric Keck and Christos Lynteris

Series: Routledge Studies in Health and Medical Anthropology

Over the past decades, infectious disease epidemics have come to increasingly pose major global health challenges to humanity. The Anthropology of Epidemics approaches epidemics as total social phenomena: processes and events which encompass and exercise a transformational impact on social life whilst at the same time functioning as catalysts of shifts and ruptures as regards human-non/human relations. Bearing a particular mark on subject areas and questions which have recently come to shape developments in anthropological thinking, the volume brings epidemics to the forefront of anthropological debate, as an exemplary arena for social scientific study and analysis.

The Anthropology of Tobacco [Open Access]

Ethnographic Adventures in Non-Human Worlds

Andrew Russell, Durham University Dpt. of Anthropology, Canada Durham University, UK Durham University, UK Durham University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Public Health

Tobacco has become one of the most widely used and traded commodities on the planet. Reflecting contemporary anthropological interest in material culture studies, Anthropology of Tobacco makes the plant the centre of its own, contentious, global story in which, instead of a passive commodity, tobacco becomes a powerful player in a global adventure involving people, corporations and public health.

This book presents students, scholars and practitioners in anthropology, public health and social policy with unique and multiple perspectives on tobacco-human relations.

Nurturing Strangers

Strategies for Nonviolent Re-parenting of Children in Foster Care

Jane Hall Fitz-Gibbon and Andrew Fitz-Gibbon

Nurturing Strangers focuses on loving nonviolent re-parenting of children in foster care. This book is a jargon-free mix of narrative and real-life case studies, together with the theory and practice of nonviolence. This and the authors' previous book, Welcoming Strangers, are the first books to apply philosophies of nonviolence directly to the care of children in the foster care system. Nurturing Strangers is for foster carers, caseworkers, case managers, social work students, and parents, as well as the general reader interested in children who have been victims of violence in and out of the foster care system.

Social Work and Disasters

A Handbook for Practice

Margaret Alston, Tricia Hazeleger and Desley Hargreaves

Disasters are increasing in frequency and intensity across the world, causing significant destruction to individuals and communities. Yet many social workers are ill-prepared for the demands of this field of practice. This book discusses the role of social workers in disaster work, including in disaster-preparedness, during the disaster and in post-disaster practice.

With real-life case studies from top scholars in the field, this book is essential reading for social work practitioners working in the field of disaster practice, as well as social work students and academics. It will also be useful to other health professionals who wish to understand this field of practice.

Health Care Policy and Practice

A Biopsychosocial Perspective

Cynthia Moniz, Plymouth State University, USA and Stephen Gorin, Plymouth State University, USA

In Health Care Policy and Practice: A Biopsychosocial Perspective, Moniz and Gorin guide students through the development of the American health care system: what it is, what the policies are, and how students can influence them. The first section focuses on recent history and reforms; section two examines the system's structure and policies; and the third section explores policy analysis and advocacy, and disparities in health based on demographics and inequities in access to care. The book concludes with a discussion of the impact of social factors on health and health status.

Cases of a Hollywood Doctor

Edward Schwarz and Tomos Richards

It is established that learning based on interesting or novel methods makes information more memorable and improves retention. This book explores common medical presentations encountered during a medical student via vignettes that will bring to mind interesting and often humorous characters from literature, stage and screen. By attaching real pathology and clinical cases to characters with which the student can relate from their childhood and adult life, learning is made 'fun' without compromise to the clinical integrity of the content.

Series: WONCA Family Medicine

This practical 'How To' guide takes the reader step-by-step through designing, conducting and disseminating primary care research, a growing discipline internationally. The majority of health care issues are experienced by people in community settings, who are not adequately represented by hospital-based research. There is therefore a great need to upskill family physicians and other primary care workers and academics to conduct community-based research to inform best practice. Aimed at emerging researchers, including those in developing countries, this book also addresses cutting edge and newly developing research methods, which will be of equal interest to more experienced researchers.

Plankton

Guide to Their Ecology and Monitoring for Water Quality, Second Edition

Edited by Iain Suthers, David Rissik and Anthony Richardson

This practical book provides a comprehensive introduction to the biology and ecology of plankton and describes its use as a tool for monitoring water quality. All the major freshwater and coastal phytoplankton and zooplankton groups are covered and their associated environmental issues are discussed. A chapter on best practice in sampling and monitoring explains how to design, implement and conduct meaningful phytoplankton and zooplankton monitoring programs in marine and freshwater habitats, as well as how to analyse and interpret the results for effective management decision-making. Real-life case studies demonstrate the use of plankton for identifying and monitoring water quality issues.

Pocket Guide to Bacterial Infections

Edited by K Balamurugan

Series: Pocket Guides to Biomedical Sciences

Pocket Guide to Bacterial Infections provides information pertinent to the behaviour of bacterial cells during their interactions with different cell types of multiple host systems. This book will present the role of various bacterial pathogens affecting the host system. The book is to be organized flexibly so that chapters and topics are arranged with continuity from the former chapters. Each chapter has been made as self-contained as possible to promote this flexibility. This book will discuss each of the virulence properties of the bacteria with reference to their interacting hosts in a larger perspective.

The Population Ecology and Conservation of Charadrius Plovers

Edited by Mark A. Colwell, Humboldt State University, Arcata, California, USA and Susan M. Haig, U.S. Geological Survey, Corvallis, Oregon, USA

Series: Studies in Avian Biology

More than 30 species of plover (genus Charadrius) have provided key insights shaping theory across a wide range of ecological sub-discipline. Many of these species are also threatened because they live where human population is greatest. The editors propose to organize a group of international specialists to write a series of multi-authored chapters. The book will have a strong applied emphasis. The book will be of great use to conservationists worldwide. The book will be organized into sections corresponding to the annual cycle of each taxon. As such, it will use the Full Life Cycle Biology approach championed by researchers spearheading conservation of migratory species worldwide.

The Profession and Practice of Horticultural Therapy

Rebecca L. Haller, Horticultural Therapy Institute, Denver, Colorado, USA, Karen Kennedy and Christine L. Capra, Horticultural Therapy Institute, Denver, Colorado, USA

Horticultural therapy is a profession that serves the needs of practitioners having a broad understanding of the theories, techniques, and strategies for effective program development and management. This book is a manual of theories of horticultural therapy containing models of practices and programs. It features insight into methods of practice and provides a basis for education of new and experienced practitioners. Created for students of the profession, four sections define horticultural therapy practice; present theories supporting practice; explore program models and therapeutic tools for effective practice; and describe program management.

Human Life Before Birth, Second Edition

Frank Dye, Western Connecticut State University (Emeritus), Danbury, Connecticut, USA

This textbook presents essential and accessible information about human embryology including practical information on human health issues and recent advances in human reproductive technology. Starting with biological basics of cell anatomy and fertilization, the author moves through the development of specific organs and systems, before addressing social issues associated with embryology. Each chapter includes specific objectives, general background, study questions, and questions to inspire critical thinking. Human Life Before Birth also contains two appendices and a full glossary of terms covered in the text. Clinicians and researchers in this field will find this volume indispensable.

Human Molecular Genetics

Tom Strachan, Newcastle University, UK and Andrew Read, University of Manchester, UK

Human Molecular Genetics is an established title that provides an authoritative and integrated approach to the molecular aspects of human genetics. A class-proven textbook for upper-level undergraduates and graduate students, a go-to book for those studying human molecular genetics or genomics courses.

The Fifth Edition has been completely updated, so to provide the reader with current developments in the field. The text has been restructured and divided into five sections, with New Key Concepts at the beginning of each chapter, annotated further reading and High-quality artwork, helping readers navigate the wealth of information.

Spatial Data Analysis in Ecology and Agriculture Using R, Second Edition

Richard E. Plant, University of California, Davis, USA

This book provides practical instruction on the use of the R programming language to analyze spatial data arising from research in ecology, agriculture, and environmental science. Readers have praised the book's practical coverage of spatial statistics, real-world examples, and user-friendly approach in presenting and explaining R code, aspects maintained in this update. Using data sets from cultivated and uncultivated ecosystems, the book guides the reader through the analysis of each data set, including setting research objectives, designing the sampling plan, data quality control, exploratory and confirmatory data analysis, and drawing scientific conclusions.

Stochastic Modelling for Systems Biology, Third Edition

Darren J. Wilkinson, Newcastle University, UK

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Mathematical and Computational Biology

This is the third edition of a textbook on stochastic modelling for systems biology. It has been updated with new methods and applications throughout the book, and the use of R for the computing has been greatly extended. There is a whole new chapter on spatially extended systems, and the statistical inference chapter has also been extended with new methods. The book is now supplemented by an R package, Scala, which is described in a new appendix to the book.

TEXTBOOK

The Human Genome in Health and Disease

A Story of Four Letters

Tore Samuelsson, University of Gothenburg, Sweden

The Human Genome in Health and Disease examines the human genome, a linear sequence of roughly 3 billion bases. The intimate link between this information and biological function is systematically explored and is illustrated with inherited disorders and cancer. A range of sequence-based functional units of the human genome are thereby covered.

The book is motivated by the wealth of human sequence data currently accumulating and aids in understanding this information. It also discusses significant medical applications of human genome sequencing and genetic variation, such as the identification of causative variants in rare genetic disorders and a variety of current methods in gene therapy.

Antimicrobial Resistance in Bacteria from Livestock and Companion Animals

Edited by Stefan Schwarz, Lina Cavaco, Jianzhong Shen and Frank Moller Aarestrup

The global spread of antimicrobial-resistant pathogenic bacteria is a continuing plague to the health care of humans and domesticated animals. With an international team of editors and authors, this book features the history and use of antimicrobials, methods for detecting and monitoring resistance, detailed reviews of antimicrobial resistance within individual pathogenic species, and forward-looking perspectives on antimicrobial stewardship. This is a "must-have" for agricultural microbiologists, veterinarians, clinical microbiologists, and others interested in understanding and preventing antimicrobial resistance.

Approaches for Enhancing Abiotic Stress Tolerance in Plants

Edited by Mirza Hasanuzzaman, Sher-e-Bangla Agricultural University, Dhaka, Bangladesh, Kamrun Nahar, Sher-e-Bangla Agricultural University, Dhaka, Bangladesh, Masayuki Fujita, Department of Plant Science, Faculty of Agriculture, Kagawa University, Hirosuke Oku and Tofazzal Islam, Department of Biotechnology, Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman Agricultural University

Plants are frequently exposed to unfavorable and adverse environmental conditions known as abiotic stressors. These factors can include salinity, drought, heat, cold, flooding, heavy metals, and UV radiation which pose serious threats to the sustainability of crop yields. Since abiotic stresses are major constraints for crop production, finding the approaches to enhance stress tolerance is crucial to increase crop production and increase food security. This book discusses approaches to enhance abiotic stress tolerance in crop plants on a global scale. Plants scientists and breeders will learn how to further mitigate plant responses and develop new crop varieties for the changing climate.

Ecology, Capitalism and the New Agricultural Economy

The Second Great Transformation

Edited by Gilles Allaire, Institut National de la Recherche Agronomique, France and Benoit Daviron, Centre de Coopération Internationale en Recherche Agronomique pour le Développement (CIRAD), France

Series: Critical Food Studies

This book presents and applies French heterodox economics concepts to questions of agri-environmental governance in agrifood. The chapters focus on the development of products, markets, and social relations of production, consumption, and regulation. Specific attention is given to questions of environment and how ecological contradictions of industrial agriculture play out in various contexts. It is recommended supplementary reading for postgraduates and researchers in agricultural studies, food studies, food policy, the agri-food political economy and political and economic geography.

Forest Ecosystem Management and Timber Production

Divergence and Resource Use Resilience

Russell Warman, University of Tasmania, Australia

Series: The Earthscan Forest Library

Timber sourcing is shifting from extraction from natural forests to forms of cultivation that are increasingly agricultural and based on plantations. This book takes a multidisciplinary approach to examine the socio-political, biophysical and discursive dimensions of this divergence. It includes four case studies: global modelling of shifts in wood production, and three national case studies (Australia, Indonesia and New Zealand) each analysing shifts in resilience in wood/forest socio-ecological systems using a different disciplinary approach. This book will be of interest to advanced students, researchers and professionals in forestry, land use, conservation, rural studies and geography.

Mathematical Population Dynamics and Epidemiology in Temporal and Spatio-Temporal Domains

Harkan Singh and Joydip Dhar

This new volume, Mathematical Population Dynamics and Epidemiology in Temporal and Spatio-Temporal Domains, focuses on the study of population dynamics with special emphasis on the migration of populations in a heterogeneous patchy habitat, the human and animal population, and the spreading of epidemics, an important area of research in mathematical biology dealing with the survival of different species. The volume also provides the background needed to interpret, construct, and analyze a wide variety of mathematical models. Most of the techniques presented in the book can be readily applied to model other phenomena, in biology as well as in other disciplines.

Phylogeny and Evolution of Bacteria and Mitochondria

Edited by Mauro Degli Esposti
Life on earth began with bacteria, which now colonize every corner of the planet. As the ancestors of mitochondria, bacteria are also fundamental for our cells. Most bacteria look alike, but have very different functions. Therefore, knowing the functional profile of bacteria helps understand their impact on our life. This book provides a wealth of information on the functional evolution of bacteria in a novel and coherent way. The book is aimed towards scientists as well as those who are curious about the world of bacteria and their relationships with mitochondria, the powerhouses of our cells, and us.

Plant Tolerance to Environmental Stress

Role of Phytoprotectants

Edited by Mirza Hasanuzzaman, Department of Agronomy, Sher-e-Bangla Agricultural University, Dhaka, Bangladesh, Masayuki Fujita, Department of Plant Science, Faculty of Agriculture, Kagawa University, Japan, Hirosuke Oku and M. Tofazzal Islam, Gazipur, Salna, Bangladesh

The variability of environmental conditions paired with the sessile lifestyle of plants contribute to high exposure to various stress factors. Increasing tolerance of crop plants to abiotic stresses is needed to fulfill increased food needs of the population. This book covers various aspects of abiotic stress tolerance in plants and presents methods to alleviate the harmful effects of stress factors. It provides information on how exogenous phytoprotectants can mitigate abiotic stressors including drought, elevated ozone, salinity, extreme temperatures, flooding, waterlogging, and toxic metals.

Practical Guide to ChIP-seq Data Analysis

Edited by Borbala Mifsud, Queen Mary University London, UK, Kathi Zarnack, Goethe University, Frankfurt, Germany and Anaïs F Bardet

Series: Focus Computational Biology Series

Chromatin immunoprecipitation sequencing (ChIP-seq), which maps the genome-wide localization patterns of transcription factors and epigenetic marks, is among the most widely used methods in molecular biology. This book will guide readers through the steps of ChIP-seq analysis: from quality control, through peak calling, to downstream analyses. It will help experimental biologists to design their ChIP-seq experiments with the analysis in mind, and to perform the basic analysis steps themselves. It also aims to support bioinformaticians to understand how the data is generated, what the sources of biases are, and which methods are appropriate for different analyses.

Edited by Katsumi Maenaka, Hokkaido University, Japan and Enoch Y. Park, Prof. in Research Institute of Green Science & Technology Shizuoka University 836 Ohya Suruga-ku, Shizuoka, 422-8529 Japan

Series: Industrial Biotechnology

This book provides a comprehensive and up to date review about recent and future trends of silkworm biotechnology and potential pharmaceutical applications. Today's biotechnology-based industry faces hurdles in advancement owing to the lack of proper gene expression systems. Despite rapid growth of bioscience, there are still many proteins for which gene structure are unknown. Silkworm biotechnology is one such solution. The book begins with an overview on the fundamental research about the silkworm biofactory and then covers a wide range of applications for the large-scale expression of foreign genes.

Biology and Ecology of Pharmaceutical Marine Molluscs

Ramasamy Santhanam, Fisheries College and Research Institute, Tamilnadu, India, Manavalan Gobinath, Ratnam Institute of Pharmacy, Nellore, India and Santhanam Ramesh, Nehru College of Pharmacy, Kerala, India

Marine molluscs such as clams, oysters, mussels, squids, octopuses, and sea snails are well-known for their use as food and ornaments. Bioactive substances isolated from many of these invertebrates have been reported to possess antiviral, antimicrobial, antiprotozoal, antifungal, antihelminthic, and anticancer activities. As a potential source of secondary metabolites, many molluscan species are considered valuable for drug development. Biology and Ecology of Pharmaceutical Marine Molluscs is the first comprehensive book written by scientists from both the Marine Biology and Pharmacy disciplines to fill the long-felt need for a marine natural products book devoted exclusively to molluscs.

Innovative Strategies, Statistical Solutions and Simulations for Modern Clinical Trials

Mark Chang, Veristat, John Balsler, Veristat, Robin Bliss and Jim Roach

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Biostatistics Series

Every day, there are new problems and challenges that arise from the practice of clinical trials. Many of them require strategic thinking and innovative methods since some traditional methods are not adequate for 21st century clinical trials. To solve these problems requires good methodological skills, but also an in-depth knowledge of the practical problems we are dealing with and a strategic vision of the big picture. This book will show how to combine these two aspects and solve the problems.

Edited by C. Anandharamakrishnan, Director, Indian Institute of Food Processing Technology and S. Parthasarathi, CSIR-Central Food Technological Research Institute, Mysore, India

Series: Contemporary Food Engineering

The use of nanotechnology in the food industry promises improved taste, flavor, color, texture, and consistency of foodstuffs and increased absorption and bioavailability of nutraceuticals. This book explains the fundamental principles of nanotechnology and includes a number of case studies of the major techniques successfully employed by the food industry. This book clearly discusses the four major areas in food nanotechnology: fabrication of nanofood particles and its delivery, packaging and diagnostics, characterization methods of nanoparticles and regulatory issues in application of nanotechnology in food.

Non-thermal Processing of Foods

Edited by O. P. Chauhan

The book presents the latest developments in the area of non-thermal preservation of foods and covers such various topics as high pressure processing, pulsed electric field processing, pulsed light processing, ozone processing, electron beam processing, pulsed magnetic field, ultrasonics, and plasma processing. The book discusses the use of non-thermal processing on commodities such as fruits and vegetables, cereal products, meat, fish and poultry, and milk and milk products. The effects of nonthermal processing on vital food components, enzymes and microorganisms is also discussed. Lastly, safety aspects and packaging requirements for non-thermal processed foods are also presented.

The Regulation of Dietary Supplements

A Historical Analysis

Stephen J. Pintauro

This book documents the long, still ongoing battle between the US Food and Drug Administration and the dietary supplement industry. It presents the complex, often subtle, and sometimes overlooked series of events that had a major impact on how dietary supplements are manufactured, marketed, sold, and used today. While the first few chapters focus on some background topics, the remaining chapters walk the reader through timeline of events, legislative actions, FDA proposed and final rules, and judicial decisions that led to our current dietary supplement regulatory framework. Interwoven in narrative are examples of the roles of science, social and public policy, politics, and popular media.

An Architecture Manifesto

Critical Reason and Theories of a Failed Practice

Nadir Lahiji

In this manifesto, Nadir Lahiji takes a leap of faith. It is a faith in Lost Causes. He asserts that today, architectonic reason has fallen into ruins. As soon as architecture leaves the limits set to it by architectonic reason, no other path is open to it but the path to aestheticism. This is the wrong path contemporary architecture has taken. In its reduction to a pure aesthetic object, architecture negatively affects the human sensorium.

This manifesto is thus both a critique and a work of theory. It is a siren, alarm, klaxon to the current status quo within architectural discourse and a timely response to the conditions of architecture today.

Architecture and Resilience

Interdisciplinary Dialogues

Edited by Kim Trogal, University for the Creative Arts, UK, Irena Bauman, Bauman Lyons Architects, UK, Ronald Lawrence, University of Sheffield, UK and Doina Petrescu, University of Sheffield, UK

This is the first book to focus on the social, cultural and political dimensions of resilience. It covers issues such as reinvention and reconstruction; inclusive housing and ageing communities; new pedagogies; climate denial; ethics; and city-making. Drawing on insights from both theory and practice, it presents a series of dialogues as well as practice-based interventions, visual contributions, and interviews. With examples from countries such as Spain, Denmark, Germany, UK, USA, Australia, South Africa, Brazil, and Thailand, the book demonstrates the transformative role architecture can play in building social and ecological resilience.

Architecture, Democracy and Emotions

The Politics of Feeling since 1945

Edited by Till Großmann, International Max Planck Graduate School Moral Economies, Berlin, Germany and Philipp Nielsen, Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, USA

Architecture and emotions have been closely connected throughout history. Buildings are not only meant to provide shelter, safety and warmth – they are also designed to impress and awe. The end of the Second World War in 1945 and decolonization meant that almost all countries began claiming to be 'democracies'. This book examines how these aspirations influenced the built environment, prompting architects to use their designs to express ideas about emotions, morality and conduct and inspiring a variety of feelings towards different forms of democratic representation. An important read for students and researchers in architecture, urban studies, history, sociology, and political science.

Designing Social Equality

Architecture, Aesthetics and the Perception of Democracy

Mark Foster Gage

Gage proposes a dramatic realignment between aesthetic thought, politics, social equality and the design of our physical world. By reconsidering historic concepts from the deep history of aesthetic philosophy and deftly weaving them with emerging intellectual positions from a variety of disciplines, the book introduces a groundbreaking intellectual framework. Through what used to be known as the practice, teaching and discourse of architecture and design, this framework sets out to reconfigure a more encompassing social theory of how humanity perceives its very reality and how it might begin to more justly define that reality through new ways of reconsidering the built environment.

Healthcare Architecture as Infrastructure

Open Building in Practice

Edited by Stephen H. Kendall, Emeritus Professor of Architecture at Ball State University, Philadelphia, PA, USA.

Advocating an infrastructure theory of built environment transformation in which design and investment decisions are organized hierarchically and transcend short-term use, the book draws on ten case studies to showcase best practice from around the world. Written by experts with experience in policy-making, designing, building, and managing complex healthcare environments, it shows professionals in architecture, engineering, healthcare and facilities management how to enhance the long-term usefulness of their campuses and their building stock and how to strengthen their physical assets with the capacity to accommodate a quickly evolving healthcare sector.

How Drawings Work

A User-Friendly Theory

Susan C. Piedmont-Palladino, Washington Alexandria Architecture Center, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Alexandria, Virginia, USA

How Drawings Work cheekily explains that what architects make is information that enables other people to make buildings. That information comes in a variety of forms: drawings by hand and computer, models both physical and virtual, and words as needed. The book reflects in witty prose on the nature of architectural drawings as tools of communication, pulling from a diverse and eclectic landscape of theories from grammar, functional linguistics, philosophy, art criticism, science fiction, popular culture, and, of course, architecture, to propose a new way to think about architectural communication. Mass Customization and Design Democratization

Edited by Branko Kolarevic, University of Calgary, Canada and José Pinto Duarte, Pennsylvania State University, USA

Parametric design and digital fabrication are enabling non-designers to mass produce non-standard, highly differentiated products – from shoes and tableware to furniture and even houses. This is the first book to address this relevelately recent 'democratization' of design. Demonstrating how the potential of these tools can be realized in practice, it introduces essential technologies and design approaches and provides cutting edge examples from leading design firms, manufacturers and thinkers. A highly designed book featuring 300 color illustrations, this is essential reading for professionals and students taking courses in digital architecture, parametric design, and mass customization.

Constructing the Architect

An Introduction to Design, Research, Planning, and Education

Leonard R. Bachman, University of Houston, USA

This introductory textbook provides a study of architecture rather than a study about architecture. Unlike books which concentrate on the monuments and other artefacts that architects produce, An Introduction to Architecture focuses on architecture as a disciplinary and professional process, a role in society, and a career of learning and mastery. In doing so, it offers a lens into the architecture of architecture. Featuring over 100 illustrations to support understanding of this highly visual subject, this is an essential introduction for any student seeking to understand what it means to be an architect and to enter the professional

Sustainable Design for the Built Environment

Rob Fleming and Saglinda H Roberts

Sustainable Design for the Built Environment marks the transition of sustainable design from a specialty service to the mainstream approach for creating a healthy and resilient built environment. This ground-breaking and transformative approach introduces sustainable design in a clear, concise, easy to read format. This book creates a holistic and integrative approach addressing the social, cultural, ecological, and aesthetic aspects in addition to the typical performance driven goals. Supported by extensive online resources including videos for each chapter, this book will be essential reading for students of sustainability and sustainable design.

The Design Student's Journey

understanding How Designers Think

Bryan Lawson, Head of School and Dean of the Faculty of Architectural Studies, University of Sheffield, UK

Learning to become a designer can be tremendous fun but it can also be frustrating and at times painful. What you have to do to become a designer is not often clearly laid out and can seem mysterious. Over the past fifty years or so we have discovered a great deal about How Designers Think. This book relies upon that knowledge but presents it in a way specifically intended to help the student and perhaps the teacher. Bryan Lawson's classic book How Designers Think has been in print since 1980 and has gone through four editions to keep it up to date. This book can be seen as a companion volume for the design student.

Unorthodox Ways to Think the City

Representations, Constructions, Dynamics

Teresa Stoppioni, University of Greenwich, London, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

This book argues that architecture and the city and their processes can be better understood by drawing categories from disciplines that exceed the architectural and urban cultural context. It performs an open intellectual reading that traverses architecture and architectural theory, but also art theory and history, cartography, philosophy, literature and cultural studies, to unfold a series of 'figures' that are ambiguously placed between the representation and the construction of space in architecture and the city.

Doing Research in Urban and Regional Planning

Lessons in Practical Methods

Diana MacCallum, Courtney Babb and Carey Curtis

Series: Natural and Built Environment Series

Doing Research in Urban and Regional Planning provides a basic introduction to methodology and methods in planning research. It brings together the methods most commonly used in planning, explaining their key applications and basic protocols. It addresses the unique needs of planners by dealing with concerns which cut across the social, economic, and physical sciences, showing readers how to mobilise fresh combinations of methods, theoretical frameworks and techniques to address the complex needs of urban and regional development.

Garden Practices and Their Science

Geoff Dixon, Visiting Professor and Senior Research Fellow, Centre for Horticulture, University of Reading, UK.

Written in clear and accessible style, Garden Practices and Their Science guides gardeners in the practical arts of plant husbandry and in their understanding of its underpinning principles.

Achieving the manipulation of plant life is described in eight full colour well-illustrated chapters covering the growing of potatoes, bulb onions, legumes, small seeded vegetables, soft fruit, bulbs and herbaceous ornamentals in great detail. Tailored for readers requiring clear and concise directions, this very practical book is an instruction-manual directed at early-stage gardening learners.

Introduction To Environmental Impact Assessment

John Glasson, Oxford Brookes University, England, UK Oxford Brookes University, Oxford, UK Oxford Brookes University, UK and Riki Therivel, Oxford Brookes University, UK

Series: Natural and Built Environment Series

A comprehensive, clearly structured and readable overview of the subject, Introduction to Environmental Impact Assessment has established itself as the leading introduction to EIA worldwide. This fifth edition is a major update reflecting many significant changes in EIA procedures, process, practice and prospects over the last decade. It is also makes full use of colour illustrations, and chapter questions for discussion. Written by two authors with extensive research, training and consultancy experience of EIA, this book brings together the most up-to-date information from many sources.

Representing Landscapes

Analogue

Nadia Amoroso, University of Toronto, Canada

Series: Representing Landscapes

The fourth book in Nadia Amoroso's Representing Landscapes series, this text focuses on traditional methods of visual representation in landscape architectural education. Each chapter includes contributions from leading professors teaching studio and visual communication courses from landscape architecture programs across the globe, showcasing the best student examples of analog techniques. Over 220 full colour images explore the range of visual approaches students and practitioners of landscape architecture can implement in their designs. With worked examples in the chapters and downloadable images suitable for class use, this is an essential book for visual communication and design studios.

Planning Abu Dhabi

An Urban History

Edited by Alamira Reem Bani Hashim, Abu Dhabi Urban Planning Council, UAE

Series: Planning, History and Environment Series

Following the description of Abu Dhabi's early modern history, Reem focuses on three distinct periods dating from the discovery of oil in 1960 and coinciding with periods in power of the three rulers since then: Sheikh Shakhbut bin Sultan Al Nahyan, Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, and Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed Al Nahyan. She analyses the different approaches of each ruler to development; investigates the role of planning consultants, architects, developers, construction companies and government agencies; examines the emergence of comprehensive development plans and the policies underlying them; and assesses the effects of these many and varied influences on Abu Dhabi's development.

Visual Spatial Enquiry

Diagrams and Metaphors for Architects and Spatial Thinkers

Edited by Robyn Creagh, Curtin University, Australia and Sarah McGann, University of Notre Dame, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Architecture

This edited collection explores the interconnections between visual and textual ways of working within relational space. With an array of international contributions from across the arts, social sciences and humanities, this book explores textual and visual language to reappraise and reconsider research approaches, methods and processes in diverse fields such as architecture, design and planning. This exploration will be of value to researchers looking to develop their cross-disciplinary literacy, and to design practitioners looking to enhance and articulate their research skills.

The Routledge Handbook on Informal Urbanization

Edited by Roberto Rocco and Jan van Ballegooijen

This book investigates the mutual relationship between the struggle for political inclusion and processes of informal urbanisation in different socio-political and cultural settings. It seeks a middle ground between two opposing perspectives on the political meaning of urban informality. The first, the 'emancipatory perspective', frames urban informality as a practice that fosters autonomy, entrepreneurship and social mobility. The other perspective, more critical, sees informality predominantly as a result of political exclusion, inequality and poverty.

Advances in Renewable Energies Offshore

Proceedings of the 3rd International Conference on Renewable Energies Offshore (RENEW 2018), October 8-10, 2018, Lisbon, Portugal

Edited by Carlos Guedes Soares, Instituto Superior Técnico, University of Lisbon, Portugal

This book is a collection of the papers presented at the 3rd International Conference on Renewable Energies Offshore (RENEW 2018) held in Lisbon, Portugal, on 8-10 October 2018. It discusses a variety of fields related to renewable energies offshore: Modelling tidal currents, modelling waves, tidal energy devices (design, applications and experiments), tidal energy arrays, wave energy devices (point absorber, multibody, applications, control, experiments, CFD, coastal OWC, OWC and turbines), wave energy arrays, wind energy devices, wind energy arrays, maintenance and reliability, combined platforms, moorings and flexible materials.

Modernity, Frontiers and Revolutions

Proceedings of the 4th International Multidisciplinary Congress (PHI 2018), October 3-6, 2018, S. Miguel, Azores, Portugal

Edited by Maria do Rosário Monteiro, Universidade Nova de Lisboa, Portugal, Mário S. Ming Kong, Universidade de Lisboa, Portugal and Maria João Pereira Neto

Series: PHI

The texts presented in were compiled with the intent to establish a multidisciplinary platform for the presentation, interaction and dissemination of research on the topics of Harmony and Proportion with a focus on different visions relevant to Architecture, Arts and Humanities, Design, Engineering, Social and Natural Sciences, and their importance for the sense of both individual and community identity. The idea of modernity has been a driver of development since the Western Early Modern

Age. Its theoretical and practical foundations have become the working tools of scientists, philosophers and artists who seek strategies to accelerate the development process in different contexts.

2nd Edition • NEW EDITION

Smart Biosensor Technology

Edited by George K. Knopf, University of Western Ontario, Canada and Amarjeet S. Bassi, The University of Western Ontario, London, Canada

The field of smart biosensors has dramatically expanded over the past decade and the revised edition will provide a multidisciplinary perspective of this rapidly advancing field from international leading experts. The second edition will cover the fundamentals of smart biosensor technology, issues related to material design and selection, enabling methods of biosensor fabrication, bioelectronics and neuronal network micro-arrays, and applications that include pathogen detection, toxicity monitoring and lab-on-chip (LoC) technologies. All new are chapters that reflect a broader emphasis on nano-carbon based systems, mechanically flexible electronics, and biomedical applications.

Sustainable Construction Materials: Recycled Spent Garnet

Recycled Spent Garnet

Habeeb Lateef Muttashar Alzuabidi, University of Malaysia, UTM

Rapid industrial growth has witnessed the ever-increasing utilization of sand from rivers for various construction purposes, which has caused an over-exploitation of rivers' beds and disturbed the ecosystem. This book presents an investigation into the capacity of spent garnet (silicate minerals) as a sand replacement and to serve as a sustainable construction material.

Advanced Structural Analysis with MATLAB®

Srinivasan Chandrasekaran, Dept of Ocean Engineering, Indian Institute of Technology, Madras

Recent advancements in the selection of various geometric structural forms demand understanding of structural analysis using computer-aided tools. This book presents various important aspects of computer-aided tools and programming for advanced structural analysis, and includes exercises, exams with solutions, and MATLAB input-output code to provide a complete understanding of concepts. The content has been well received by graduate students and faculty colleagues. Demand from the students for a full-length textbook motivated the author to develop the present book, which follows a classroom model of explaining the concepts through clear explanations, illustrations, and tutorials.

Mechanics of Elastic Waves and Ultrasonic Nondestructive Evaluation

Tribikram Kundu, The University of Arizona, Tucson, USA

This book gives the reader the necessary mechanics background to understand and analyze elastic wave propagation in solids. This knowledge is necessary for modeling and interpreting experimental results generated by ultrasonic nondestructive evaluation (NDE) techniques. It will cover both linear and nonlinear ultrasonic NDE methods. This is important in determining internal damages in structural components, that need to be detected in a nondestructive fashion. Examples would be cracks inside various structural components related to aircraft, ships, automobiles and bridges. Knowledge contained in this book is quite useful for such damage detection applications.

Cathodic Protection for Reinforced Concrete Structures

Edited by Paul M. Chess

Cathodic protection of reinforced concrete structures is a technique for rescuing corrosion damaged structures and, in certain instances, preventing them from corroding in the first place, and its use is growing.

This book is for specialist contractors, large consultants and owners of corrosion damaged structures, and looks at international experience with this technique. It examines why corrosion is occurring, the differences in the application of CP with the stark dichotomy in its success and failure, and finally ways in which its performance can be improved on future installations.

Concrete-Filled Stainless Steel Tubular Columns

Vipulkumar Patel, La Trobe University, Australia, Qing Quan Liang, Victoria University, Australia and Muhammad Hadi, University of Wollongong, Australia

Concrete-filled stainless steel tubular columns offer high strength, high ductility, high corrosion resistance, high durability and aesthetics and ease of maintenance. This book presents accurate and efficient computational models for the nonlinear inelastic analysis and design of CFSST short and slender columns under axial load and biaxial bending.

This book is written for practising structural and civil engineers, academic researchers and graduate students in civil engineering who are interested in the latest computational techniques and design methods for CFSST columns.

Driver Distraction

A Sociotechnical Systems Approach

Katie J. Parnell, University of Southampton, Neville A. Stanton, University of Southampton, UK and Katherine L. Plant, University of Southampton, UK

Series: Transportation Human Factors

This book discusses the potential for a sociotechnical systems approach to driver distraction and the process where a new sociotechnical systems model of the behaviour was developed, applied, and validated. It focuses on the developments within technological devices that manufacturers build into vehicles and the portable devices they bring with them into the vehicle. The book includes the current state of driver distraction research and details the process through which novel methods are applied to the study of driver distraction that aim to understand why distraction occurs, what distracts drivers, and how the adverse effects of distraction may be targeted with novel countermeasures.

Ani Raiden, Nottingham Business School, Nottingham Trent University, UK, Martin Loosemore, University of New South Wales, Australia, Andrew King, Nottingham Trent University, UK and Christopher Gorse, Leeds Beckett University, UK

This is the first book looking at social value in construction, setting the agenda by exploring important questions through real-life case studies and examples of best practice to demonstrate how innovative companies can utilise contemporary research to create social value. It is time the construction industry viewed community involvement and CSR as an opportunity, and this is the book that shows the industry how. This is essential reading for all professionals in the construction, engineering, architecture and built environment sector. Project managers, clients, contract managers, quantity surveyors, CSR and HR personnel in particular will gain a lot from reading this book.

Electrical Installation Work, 9th ed

Brian Scaddan

Now updated in line with the 18th Edition of the Wiring Regulations, this highly successful book provides a topic by topic progression through the areas of electrical installations, including how and why electrical installations are designed, installed and tested. Brian Scaddan's subject-led approach makes this a valuable resource for professionals and students on both City and Guilds and EAL courses.

Additional content in this edition includes detail on LED lighting and medical locations. A new appendix contains a glossary of electrical installation work terms, ensuring that readers of all levels of experience can easily grasp every topic.

Host Government Agreements and the Law in the Energy Sector

The case of Azerbaijan and Turkey

Hakan Sahin, Maltepe University, Istanbul, Turkey

Series: Routledge Research in Energy Law and Regulation

This book determines the political risks, particularly of indirect expropriation, that arise from unilateral actions of host governments during the life span of the energy investment projects. Focusing on stabilisation clauses as a political risk manager, it examines what influences host states to agree stability in long term host governmental agreements. Proposing a framework for the role to be played by both internal and external forces, it examines political regimes and state guarantees to foreign investors in Azerbaijan and Turkey from a comparative perspective, assessing how effective internal factors in these countries are in facilitating contractual stability.

Transitions in Energy Efficiency and Demand

The Emergence, Diffusion and Impact of Low-Carbon Innovation

Edited by Kirsten E.H. Jenkins and Debbie Hopkins

Series: Routledge Studies in Energy Transitions

This edited volume will sit at the forefront of research on the transition to a low carbon, low demand economy. Using a series of historical and contemporary case studies combined with theoretical chapters discussing the general dynamics of technological change, it will discuss the potential for using innovation to reduce energy demand, as well as suggest general lessons for the reduction of energy demand internationally. Combining an impressive range of contributions from key thinkers in the field, this book will be of great interest to energy students, scholars and decision-makers.

Transformative Propaganda

Opening the Archives of the British Safety Council

Mike Esbester, University of Portsmouth, UK

Transformative Propaganda: Opening the Archives of the British Safety Council offers a fascinating and vivid insight into the social and political realities of the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s through a wealth of historical documents, press cuttings, correspondence, photographs and posters. It offers a truly extraordinary window onto the evolution of health and safety within the UK and richly deserves a place on the bookshelf of every safety professional.

Health and Safety: Risk Management

Tony Boyle

Health and Safety: Risk Management is the clearest and most comprehensive book on risk management available today. This newly revised fifth edition integrates new developments in legislation, standards and practice, and incorporates up-to-date information for qualification syllabuses. ISO 45001 is given comprehensive treatment, and the latest ISO 9004 has also been addressed. This authoritative treatment of risk management is essential reading for both students working towards degrees, diplomas and postgraduate or vocational qualifications and experienced health and safety professionals, who will find it invaluable as a reference.

Office Ergonomics and Human Factors

Practical Applications, Second Edition

Céline McKeown, Link Ergonomics, Nottingham, UK

Just like the current edition, this new edition aims to provide practical advice on how to create, develop, or improve office environments so that those individuals who work within them can do so comfortably and contently. Those environments include traditional purpose built offices, home offices, vehicle interiors, or transient environments like train stations, hotels, and airports. Technology has changed radically since the first edition published in 2007. The new edition will be completely updated and offer simple and practical advice that can be employed easily in any office environment, whether typical or atypical.

Human Performance and Situation Awareness Measures

Valerie Jane Gawron, The MITRE Corporation

This book was developed to help researchers and practitioners select measures to be used in the evaluation of human/machine systems. The book begins with an overview of the steps involved in developing a test to measure human performance. This is followed by a definition of human performance and a review of human performance measures. Each measure is described, along with its strengths and limitations, data requirements, threshold values, and sources of further information. To make this reference easier to use, an extensive author and subject indices are provided.

The Story of Industrial Engineering

The Rise from Shop-Floor Management to Modern Digital Engineering

Adedeji B. Badiru, Air Force Institute of Technology, Dayton, Ohio, USA

Industrial Engineering is the profession dedicated to making systems function better together with less waste, better quality, and fewer resources, to serve the needs of society more efficiently and more effectively. This book uses a story-telling approach to teach and elaborate the fundamental principles of industrial engineering in a simple, interesting, and engaging format. It will incite interest in industrial engineering through applicable narratives of how the tools and techniques of the discipline apply to a broad spectrum of applications in business, industry, and engineering.

Russell G. Congalton, University of New Hampshire University of New Hampshire, Durham, USA and Kass Green, Consultant, Berkeley, California, USA

The field of assessing the accuracy of maps derived from remotely sensed data has continued to develop and mature since the first edition of this book in 1999. The third edition will have all chapters reviewed and updated with any new information available today. It will include a redo of spatial accuracy chapter to update for new ASPRS standards and better explain the issue with RMSE. Another new chapter on AA sampling for objects vs pixels will be included; an object-based case study and more information on proportional sampling. Finally, an entire new chapter on collection of reference data for general use and sharing in the public domain will complete the third edition.

Statistics in Engineering

With Examples in MATLAB® and R, Second Edition

Andrew Metcalfe, University of Adelaide, Australia, David Green, Tony Greenfield, Greenfield Research, UK, Mayhayaudin Mansor, Andrew Smith and Jonathan Tuke
Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

This is a textbook for an undergraduate course in statistics for engineers with a minimal calculus prerequisite. The second edition differs from existing books in three main aspects: it is the only introductory statistics textbook written for engineers that uses R throughout the text, there is an emphasis on statistical methods most relevant to engineers that are illustrated with practical applications, and there is an emphasis on random number generation and simulation, all very useful features in engineering.

Edited by Anne Richer de Forges, Florence Carré, Alex B. McBratney, The University of Sydney, Sydney, Australia, Johan Bouma, Wageningen Agricultural University and Dominique Arrouays, INRA-InfoSol Unit, Orléans, France

Global Soil Security: Towards More Science-Society Interfaces contains contributions presented at the 2nd Global Soil Security conference, held 5-6 December 2016 in Paris. These chapters focus on how to achieve soil security. This involves scientific, economic, industrial and political engagement to inform soil-users, policy makers and citizens with the objective of implementing appropriate actions. The contributions to this book address the five dimensions of soil security, namely:

capability, condition, capital, connectivity and codification.

Advanced Fracture Mechanics and Structural Integrity

Ashok Saxena, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, USA

Advanced Fracture Mechanics and Structural Integrity is organized to cover quantitative descriptions of crack growth and fracture phenomena. The mechanics of fracture are explained, emphasizing elastic-plastic and time-dependent fracture mechanics. Applications are presented, using examples from power generation, aerospace, marine, and chemical industries, with focus on predicting the remaining life of structural components and advanced testing methods for structural materials. Numerous examples and end-of-chapter problems are provided, along with references to encourage further study. The book is written for use in an advanced graduate course on fracture mechanics or structural integrity.

Advanced Materials for Membrane Fabrication and Modification

Edited by Stephen Gray, Toshinori Tsuru, Hiroshima University, Department of Chemical Engineering, Yoram Cohen and Woei-Jye Lau, Universiti Teknologi, Skudai, Malaysia

The book focuses on advanced materials for improving existing membrane performance across a wide range of applications including water/wastewater treatment, gas separation processes, organic solvent purification, and biomedical. It discusses new materials such as ceramic and ionic liquid membranes. Recent advances in electrospun nanofiber membranes for separation process and biomedical application are included. The book offers a comprehensive review of recent advanced materials that can be used to fabricate novel membranes with improved separation characteristics or to modify the existing membrane surface for achieving greater performance.

Chemistry of Pyrotechnics

Basic Principles and Theory, Third Edition

Chris Mocella, Summer Pyrotechnics Seminars, Chestertown, Maryland, USA and John A. Conkling, Chestertown, Maryland, USA

This book provides chemists with technical insight on pyrotechnics and explosives. It emphasizes basic chemical principles and practical, hands-on knowledge in the preparation of energetic materials. It examines the interactions between and adaptations of pyrotechnics to changing technology in areas such as obscuration science and low-signature flame emission. The updated third edition discusses chemical and pyrotechnic principles, components of high-energy materials, elements of ignition, propagation, and sensitivity. It offers heat compositions, including ignition mixes, delays, thermites, and propellants and investigates the production of smoke and sound as well as light and color.

Electrical Machine Drives

Fundamental Basics and Practice

Claiton Moro Franchi, Universidade Federal de Santa Maria, RS, Brazil

This work was developed based on the author's experience of more than 10 years working in research and industry in the areas of electrical drives and industrial automation. Seeking the connection between theory and its applications, the author presents a detailed conceptual description with lots of figures and illustrative examples that harmonize the theoretical approach with the practice. Composed of eleven chapters and three appendices, the book describes in a dynamic and didactic way the fundamental concepts related to the drives of electric machines. At the end of each chapter is a set of exercises to ease the fixation of the presented content.

Raj Deo Tewari, Jaime Moreno Ortiz and Abhijit Y. Dandekar

Series: Emerging Trends and Technologies in Petroleum Engineering

This book deals with complex fluid characterization of oil and gas reservoirs, emphasizing the importance of PVT parameters for practical application in reservoir simulation and management. It covers modeling of PVT parameters, QA/QC of PVT data from lab studies, EOS modeling, PVT simulation and compositional grading and variation. It describes generation of data for reservoir engineering calculations in view of limited and unreliable data and techniques like downhole fluid analysis and photophysics of reservoir fluids. It discusses behavior of unconventional reservoirs, particularly for difficult resources like shale gas, shale oil, coalbed methane, reservoirs, heavy and extra heavy oils.

Fundamentals of Polymer Engineering, Third Edition

Anil Kumar, Indian Institute of Technology Kanpur, India and Rakesh K. Gupta

This textbook for a first course on polymers assumes some familiarity with thermodynamics and transport phenomena. It covers physical and chemical aspects and the concept of property being determined by structure. It discusses polymer synthesis, associated kinetics and molecular weights and uses this information for reactor design. It covers emulsion polymerization, polymer characterization and thermodynamics, and behavior of polymers as melts, solutions and solids. It examines crystallization, diffusion of and through polymers, polymer processing, and introduces new information on polyolefin technology, biobased plastics, and post-consumer plastic recycling. Logan's Turbomachinery

Flowpath Design and Performance Fundamentals, Third Edition

Bijay Sultanian, University of Central Florida, Orlando, FL

Logan's Turbomachinery: Flowpath Design and Performance Fundamentals, Third Edition is the long-awaited revision of this classic textbook, thoroughly updated by Dr. Bijay Sultanian. While the basic concepts remain constant, turbomachinery design has advanced since the Second Edition was published in 1993. Airfoils in modern turbomachines feature three-dimensional geometries, Computational Fluid Mechanics (CFD) has become a standard design tool, and major advances have been made in the materials and manufacturing technologies that affect turbomachinery design. The new edition addresses these trends to best serve today's students, and design engineers working in turbomachinery industries.

Numerical Methods and Methods of Approximation in Science and Engineering

Karan S. Surana, University of Kansas, Lawrence USA

Numerical Methods and Methods of Approximation in Science and Engineering prepares students and other readers for advanced studies involving applied numerical and computational analysis. Focused on building a sound theoretical foundation, it uses a clear and simple approach backed by numerous worked examples to facilitate understanding of numerical methods and their application. Readers will learn to structure a sequence of operations into a program, using the programming language of their choice; this approach leads to a deeper understanding of the methods and their limitations. The text features highlighted examples, numerous problems, and a complete Solutions Manual for instructors.

Practical Motorsport Engineering

Andrew Livesey

This book covers motorsport engineering from a practical point of view. Written by a practising professional in an accessible style, it offers a wide-ranging insight into the nuts and bolts technology of practical car racing for students at all levels, especially levels 2 and 3 IMI, EAL and BTEC courses, and engineers.

Tides

A Primer for Deck Officers and Officer of the Watch Exams

Philip M. Smith

Tides: A Primer for Deck Officers and Officer of the Watch Exams prepares the reader for the Officer of the Watch and Master/Mate certificates required by all officers on commercial seagoing vessels. From the formation of tides and tidal stream data, right through to practice questions with answers, and even mock exam papers, this book will provide you with all the reference material you need in order to pass your exams.

Applications of Differential Equations in Engineering and Mechanics

Kam Tim Chau, Hong Kong Polytechnic University

This volume gives comprehensive coverage of the essential differential equations students are likely to encounter in solving engineering and mechanics problems -- alongside a preliminary companion text on theory. This covers a very broad range of problems, including beams and columns, plates, shells, structural dynamics, catenary and cable suspension bridge, nonlinear buckling, transports and waves in fluids, geophysical fluid flows, nonlinear waves and solitons, Maxwell equations, Schrodinger equations, celestial mechanics and fracture mechanics and dynamics. The focus is on the mathematical technique for solving the differential equations involved.

Corrosion Analysis

Michael Dornbusch

The book gives an overview on all relevant electrochemical and spectroscopic methods used in corrosion research. In addition to helping the reader choose the accurate method for a particular corrosion aspect, the various methods are correlated with industrial test methods for both the corrosion on metals (steel, zinc coated steel and aluminum) and the corrosion on coated metals (organic coatings and pre-treatments).

Handbook of Humidity Measurement, Volume 2

Electronic and Electrical Humidity Sensors

Ghenadii Korotcenkov

Capacitive, resistive, gravimetric, hygrometric and thermal conductivity-based humidity sensors and an analysis of the properties of humidity-sensitive materials used in device development are fully explored. Details polymers, metal oxides, porous semiconductors, carbon-based materials, zeolites, silica, and others. Fabrication features used in manufacturing and the challenge to develop more specialized and innovative sensors; smaller in size, cheaper, more robust and accurate in measurement, with better sensitivity and stability is fully explored. New technological solutions including integration, miniaturization, and specificity of the humidity sensor calibration are also addressed.

Intelligence in IoT-enabled Smart Cities

Fadi Al-Turjman

Smart Cities and intelligence are among the most significant topics in IoT. Intelligence in communication and infrastructure implementation is at the heart of this concept, and its development is a key issue in smart cities. This book addresses the challenges in realizing intelligence in smart cities and sensing platforms in the era of cloud computing and IoT, varying from cost and energy efficiency to availability and service quality. It focuses on both the design and implementation aspects of artificial intelligence approaches in smart cities and sensing applications that are enabled and supported by IoT paradigms, and mainly on data delivery approaches and their performability aspects.

Nanostructured Electrochromic Materials for Smart Switchable Windows

Avinash Balakrishnan, Suzlon Energy, Gujrat, INDIA and Praveen Pattathil, Suzlon Advanced Technologies Centre, Mumbai, INDIA

This book focuses on next-generation smart windows which can change their optical-physical properties by reflecting and/or transmitting incoming light radiation to attain comfortable indoor temperatures throughout the year. The book will address different techniques and materials used in smart windows in a simple way, including the basic principles, materials synthesis and thin film fabrication, optical and electrochemical characterization techniques followed in laboratories and in industry. The application-oriented perspective of the book will make it suitable to study solar energy conversion where research in nanomaterials can be extended to smart window applications.

Relativistic Magnetrons

Igor Vintzenko, Nuclear Physics Research Institute, Tomsk State University, Russia

The first experiments with relativistic magnetrons (PM), resulted in notable results, in the USA – Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the USSR - Institute of Applied Physics. Academy of Sciences of the USSR (Gorky), and the Nuclear Physics Research Institute at the Tomsk State University, hundreds of megawatts to several gigawatts with an efficiency of 10-30% were obtained. Relativistic high-frequency electronics has now become one of the fastest growing areas of scientific research. This reference is devoted to theoretical and experimental studies of relativistic magnetrons and is written by a leading expert who worked directly on these systems.

The Interdisciplinary Future of Engineering Education

Breaking Through Boundaries in Teaching and Learning

Edited by Plato Kapranos

The Interdisciplinary Future of Engineering Education discusses the current state of engineering education and addresses the daily challenges of those working in this sector. The topics of how to do a better job of teaching a specific audience, how to facilitate learning and how to prepare students for their future careers are extensively covered, and innovative solutions are proposed throughout. This unique book brings together a breadth of expertise, attested by the broad backgrounds of the experts and educational practitioners contributing to this volume, to lay the foundations for the future direction with the improvement of education of engineers in mind.

The Legal Aspects of Industrial Hygiene and Safety

Kurt W. Dreger, ES&H Deputy Assurance Manager & Legal Analyst, Lawrence Livermore National Lab., California, USA
Series: Sustainable Improvements in Environment Safety and Health

This book explores various legal issues that are often encountered by Industrial Hygiene and Safety managers during their careers. A description is presented of the various legal concepts and processes that often arise in the IH/S practice, including tort, contract, and administrative law. The goal is to provide IH/S managers with sufficient knowledge to be able to incorporate legal risk analysis into everyday decision-making and policy development. This book will explore the legal issues that arise in IH/S practice and will be helpful to new IH/S managers as they progress in their careers.

Understanding Digital Image Processing

Vipin Tyagi

This book introduces the fundamental concepts of modern digital image processing. It aims to help the students, scientists, and practitioners to understand the concepts through clear explanations, illustrations and examples. The discussion of the general concepts is supplemented with examples from applications and ready-to-use implementations of concepts in MATLAB® and C.

Meant for students and practicing engineers, this book provides a clear, comprehensive and up-to-date introduction to Digital Image Processing in a pragmatic manner.

Manufacturing and Enterprise

An Integrated Systems Approach

Adedeji B. Badiru, Air Force Institute of Technology, Dayton, Ohio, USA, Oye Ibidapo-Obe, University of Lagos, Nigeria and Babatunde J. Ayeni, 3M Company, St. Paul, Minnesota, USA

Series: Systems Innovation Book Series

This book presents an integrated systems approach to manufacturing and business enterprise. Traditionally, these topics are treated as separate and independent subjects but the practical fact is that the manufacturing and the business enterprises are intertwined. Currently, there is no book on the market that addresses both subjects from an integrated systems engineering approach with a manufacturing engineering foundation. Topics covered include engineering process, systems modeling, business enterprise, forecasting, inventory management, product design, and project management.

Sustaining Workforce Engagement

How to Ensure Your Employees Are Healthy, Happy, and Productive Lonnie Wilson

This is a book that explains the importance of employee engagement – it defines what it is, what it will do for your business, and how you can achieve it as well as sustain it. It covers the history of employee engagement along with why employees were formerly much more engaged with their work and company than they are currently.

Understanding, Measuring, and Improving Daily Management

How to Use Effective Daily Management to Drive Significant Process Improvement

Ross Kenneth Kennedy

This book explains the critical parts of a continuous improvement strategy and where reactive improvement through effective daily management fits in. In addition, it shows the consequences if daily management is not performed well.

The book then introduces the seven elements of reactive improvement that must work in concert for effective daily management and allows the reader to rate their site or department to determine their starting point compared to best practices.

2nd Edition • NEW EDITION

Noise in the Plastics Processing Industry, 2nd edition

Robert Peters, Applied Acoustic Design, Staines, Middlesex, United Kingdom

This practical guide shows how to reduce high noise levels which often occur in the workplace and reduce the risk of noise-induced hearing damage. Practical methods for reducing noise from machinery are described with about 25 case studies such as granulators, shredders, extruders and injection moulders. It covers standard measures such as enclosures, silencers and the use of sound insulating, sound-absorbing materials, vibration isolation and damping, and now active noise control. This new edition adds chapters on environmental noise, on European Union machinery noise emission regulations, hearing protection, prediction of noise levels, and the design of quieter workplaces.

Edited by Ammar Y. Alqahtani, King Abdulaziz University, Makkah, Saudi Arabia, Elif Kongar, Kishore K. Pochampally, Southern New Hampshire University, Manchester, USA and Surendra M. Gupta, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts

Responsible Manufacturing has become an obligation to the environment and to society itself, enforced primarily by customer perspective and governmental regulations. This new book provides a foundation for academicians interested in this area and will also help practitioners understand how strategic planning issues can be approached or modelled using a quantitative solution methodology in a decision-making situation. The solutions are developed using popular industrial engineering and operations research techniques from integer programming, simulation modeling, queueing theory, goal programming, linear physical programming, material requirements planning, and analytical hierarchy process.

Data Science with Julia

Paul D. McNicholas, McMaster University and Peter Tait, McMaster University Hamilton, ON

This book introduces data science using the Julia programming language. The focus is on providing the essentials and laying a solid foundation for the reader. First, the core components of Julia are covered as well as a few packages relevant to the input, manipulation and representation of data. A chapter is dedicated to R interoperability using RCall. From there, data visualization using the Gadfly package is outlined and demonstrated. Methods will be demonstrated using existing Julia machine learning packages. All the material will be tied together in a final chapter.

Spatio-Temporal Statistics with R

Christopher Wikle, Andrew Zammit Mangion and Noel Cressie

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC The R Series

The world is becoming increasingly complex, with larger quantities of data available to be analyzed. It so happens that much of these "big data" that are available are spatio-temporal in nature, meaning that they can be indexed by their spatial locations and time stamps. Spatio-Temporal Statistics with R provides an accessible introduction to statistical analysis of spatio-temporal data, with hands-on applications of the statistical methods using R Labs found at the end of each chapter. The book fills a void in the literature and available software, providing a bridge for students and researchers alike who wish to learn the basics of spatio-temporal statistics.

Automata and Computability

Programmer's Perspective

Ganesh Gopalakrishnan

This class-tested textbook provides a comprehensive and accessible introduction to the theory of automata and computation. The author uses illustrations, engaging examples, and historical remarks to make the material interesting and relevant for students. It incorporates modern/handy ideas, such as derivative-based parsing and a Lambda reducer showing the universality of Lambda calculus. The book also shows how to sculpt automata by making the regular language conversion pipeline available through a simple command interface. A Jupyter notebook will accompany the book to feature code, YouTube videos, and other supplements to assist instructors and students.

Introduction to Probability, Second Edition

Joseph K. Blitzstein, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, USA and Jessica Hwang, Stanford University, California, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Texts in Statistical Science

Undergraduate probability book that assumes one-semester of calculus. One key is the emphasis on "stories" for the probability distributions (which I mean in both an intuitive and technical sense): there are a dozen or so key distributions (Normal, Binomial, Poisson, etc.) that are incredibly widely-used in statistics, but a lot of books just write down formulas for them without explaining clearly why these particular distributions are so important, or how they are all connected. Each of these distributions has a "story" (a natural application where it arises), and thinking about stories makes the distributions easier to remember, understand, and work with.

Analysis on Function Spaces of Musielak-Orlicz Type

Jan Lang, The Ohio State University, Columbus, USA and Osvaldo Mendez, University of Texas at El Paso, USA

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Monographs and Research Notes in Mathematics

Musielak-Orlicz spaces came under a new light when applications to electrorheological hydrodynamics forced the particular case of the variable exponent Lebesgue spaces into the center stage. Since then, research efforts in have been oriented towards carrying over the results of classical analysis into the framework of variable exponent function spaces. In recent years it has been suggested that many of the fundamental results in the realm of variable exponent Lebesgue spaces depend only on the intrinsic structure of the Musielak-Orlicz function, thus opening the door for a unified theory that in particular encompasses that of Lebesgue function spaces with variable exponent.

Design of Experiments for Generalized Linear Models

Kenneth G. Russell, National Institute for Applied Statistical Research Australia, University of Wollongong

Series: Chapman & Hall/CRC Interdisciplinary Statistics

While there are numerous books on the analysis of Generalized Linear Models (GLMs), there is very little information available on how to design the experiments that will collect the data. This book will describe the theory and methods for designing experiments to collect data that will be analysed by GLMs. It shows that the extensive theory underlying design for linear models does not work for GLMs, and gives practical guidance as to how best to design experiments for GLMs. It includes lots of examples to illustrate the topics, and is supplemented by R code for their implementation.

Generalized Trigonometric and Hyperbolic Functions

Ronald E. Mickens

Generalized Trigonometric and Hyperbolic Functions highlights, to those in the area of generalized trigonometric functions, an alternative path to the creation and analysis of these classes of functions. Previous efforts have started with integral representations for the inverse generalized sine functions, followed by the construction of the associated cosine functions, and from this, various properties of the generalized trigonometric functions are derived. However, the results contained in this book are based on the application of both geometrical phase space and dynamical systems methodologies.

Nonlinear Systems and Their Remarkable Mathematical Structures

Edited by Norbert Euler, Lulea University of Technology, Lulea

This book aims to describe some recent progress in nonlinear differential equations and nonlinear dynamical systems (both continuous and discrete). Written by experts, each chapter is self-contained and aims to clearly illustrate the mathematical theories of nonlinear systems and its progress to both the non-expert and active researchers. The book is suitable for graduate students in Mathematics, Engineering sciences, as well as for researchers (both pure and applied) in differential equations and dynamical systems. The common theme throughout the book is on solvable and integrable nonlinear systems of equations and methods/theories that can be applied to analyze those nonlinear systems.

Operational Procedures Describing Physical Systems

Marciel Agop, Technical University "Gh.Asachi" Iasi, Romania and Ioan Merches, Al.I.Cuza University, Iasi, Romania

The authors examine topics in modern physics and offer a unitary and original treatment of the fundamental problems of the dynamics of physical systems, as well as a description of the nuclear matter within a framework of general relativity. They show that some physical phenomena studied at two different resolution scales (e.g. microscale, cosmological scale), apparently with no connection between them, become compatible by means of the operational procedures, acting either as some "hidden" symmetries, or harmonic-type mappings. The book is addressed to the students, researchers and university/high school teachers working in the fields of mathematics, physics, and chemistry.

Pencils of Cubics and Algebraic Curves in the Real Projective Plane

Séverine Fiedler - Le Touzé, University Toulouse III

Pencils of Cubics and Algebraic Curves in the Real Projective Plane thoroughly examines the combinatorial configurations of n generic points in \mathbb{R}^2 . Especially how it is the data describing the mutual position of each point with respect to lines and conics passing through others. The first part of the book answers questions related to using rational cubics and pencils of cubics. The other two parts deal with configurations of eight points in convex position, and applications and results around Hilbert's sixteenth problem.

Sequential Models of Mathematical Physics

Simon Serovajsky, Al-Farabi Kazakh National University, Department of Differential Equations and Control Theory, Almaty, Kazakhstan

The equations of mathematical physics are the mathematical models of the large class of phenomenon of physics, chemistry, biology, economics, etc. In Sequential Models of Mathematical Physics, the author considers the justification of the process of constructing mathematical models. The book seeks to determine the classic, generalized and sequential solutions, the relationship between these solutions, its direct physical sense, the methods of its practical finding, and its existence.

Browsers, Devices, and Fonts

A Designer's Guide to Fonts and How They Function on the Web

Gary Rozanc

Part technical and part theoretical, this practical guide to web typography helps designers understand how the typographic choices they make in layout and prototyping programs behave once they are turned into live code. Through a series of demos, this book teaches designers how to create typographic specific webpages by learning just enough HTML and CSS to be able to view the pages in different browsers, devices, and operating systems. With live webpages to evaluate, designers will learn how to test those pages for supported features and performance, ensuring font choices look as good in the browser as it does in their layout program, delivering a speedy experience to the users.

Developing Creative Content for Games

Greg Johnson, Savannah College of Art and Design, Georgia, USA

This book provides readers with a solid understanding of game development, design, narrative, characterization, plot, back story and world creation—elements that are crucial for game writers and designers as they create a detailed world setting, adventure, characters, narrative and plot suitable for possible publication. Game design and development issues such as writing for games, emergent complexity, risk-reward systems, competitive and cooperative game play will be investigated, analyzed and critiqued. Examples will be used to highlight and explain the various concepts involved and how the game development process works.

Energy Efficient Computing & Electronics

Devices to Systems

Edited by Santosh K. Kurinec, Rochester Institute of Technology, New York, USA and Sumeet Walia, RMIT University, Victoria, Australia

Series: Devices, Circuits, and Systems

Today's mobile technologies utilize breakthroughs that squeeze more powerful performances into ever-smaller devices—boosting battery life, reducing weight and heat, and virtually eliminating the need for cooling. With billions of new connected devices expected by the end of the decade, each drawing its share of power from a strained global energy grid, low-power designs will be a top priority for years to come. This book investigates new approaches to lower energy requirement in computing and provides comprehensive coverage of various technologies that can help achieve this goal. Chapters are written by international experts in their corresponding field.

Industrial Applications of Machine Learning shows how machine learning can be applied to address real-world problems in the fourth industrial revolution, and provides the required knowledge and tools to empower readers to build their own solutions based on theory and practice. The book introduces the fourth industrial revolution and its current impact on organizations and society. It explores machine learning fundamentals, and includes four case studies that address a real-world problems in the manufacturing or logistics domains, and approaches machine learning solutions from an application-oriented point of view.

Information and Communication Technology for Sustainable Development

Cesar Marolla, Consultant, Lancaster, CA

Information and communication technology (ICT) is fundamental for monitoring climate change and also for transitioning toward sustainable economies. This book highlights the role ICTs can have in mitigating numerous global risks. It offers the first integrated approach to better managing infrastructures with more consistent on-time, on-target delivery of services. Through practical examples, the book presents better technology practices to innovate processes and operations, and implement faster integration of new technologies into business systems. Focused on sustainability, it addresses a strategic approach to cope with global environmental risks and also promote economic growth.

Link State Routing

Principles and Technologies

Rui Valadas

The book describes and compares both the IPv4 and IPv6 versions of OSPF and IS-IS. It explains OSPF and IS-IS by grounding the analysis on the principles of link state routing. It deliberately separate principles from technologies. The chapters on principles explain the features of LSR protocols and discuss the alternative design options, independently of technologies. The chapters on technologies provide a comprehensive description of OSPF and IS-IS with sufficient detail for professionals that need operate these technologies. The final chapter describes and discusses a set of experiments with Cisco routers designed to illustrate the various features of OSPF and IS-IS.

Edited by Ghita K. Mostefaoui and Faisal Tariq

The objective of this book is to gather best practices in the development and management of mobile apps projects. It will provide the concepts, architectures, models, and key technologies, which are required to achieve successful mobile apps projects. It will emphasize essential concepts and their application to real life problems. The book will cover requirements gathering and analysis, mobile device operating systems, design patterns, development tools, languages, and technologies, as well as other fundamental concepts. It will also examine quality and testing procedures for mobile apps, along with providing software engineering case studies.

Dijiang Huang, Arizona State University, Tempe, USA, Ankur Chowdhary, Arizona State University and Sandeep Pisharody, Arizona State University

Series: Data-Enabled Engineering

This book seeks to educate the reader regarding Cyber Maneuver or Adaptive Cyber Defense. Before implementing proactive cyber defense techniques, or Moving Target Defense schemes, it's important to analyze the threats, detect attacks, and implement countermeasures, while still preserving user experience. This book discusses how to detect multi-stage attack. It presents a comparative study of methods and solutions. It covers modern computing paradigms such as Software-Defined Networks and Network Functions Virtualization (SDN-NFV), and their effectiveness in implementing Moving Target Defense responses. Source codes, online labs, and exercises are available at the author's university website.

Think like a UX Researcher

How to Observe Users, Influence Design, and Drive Strategy

David Travis, System Concepts, London, UK and Philip Hodgson

This book aims to bridge the gap between uX content that is authoritative but at the same time easily digestible. It will contain a series of essays on UX research. Although the book could be read from cover to cover, our assumption is that user researchers will dip in and out of the book, somewhat like a bedside or coffee-break reader. User researchers will turn to this book to get inspiration and stimulation in various aspects of their craft as well as to stimulate team discussion topics. The first part of the book sets the stage and the last part encourages user researchers to reflect on the way they work. The remaining chapters discuss the phases of a typical research project.

Programming and Engineering Computing with MATLAB 2018

Huei-Huang Lee

This book is designed for undergraduate students completely new to programming with MATLAB. Case studies and examples are used extensively throughout this book and are at the core of what makes this book so unique. The author believes that the best way to learn MATLAB is to study programs written by experienced programmers and that the quality of these example programs determines the quality of the book. The examples in this book are carefully designed to teach you MATLAB programming as well as to inspire within you your own problem solving potential. Most of the examples used in this book are designed to solve a whole class of problems, rather than a single, specific problem.

Variational Techniques for Elliptic Partial Differential Equations

Theoretical Tools and Advanced Applications

Francisco J. Sayas, Thomas S. Brown and Matthew E. Hassell

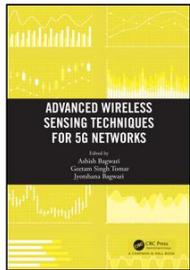

Variational Techniques for Elliptic Partial Differential Equations, intended for graduate students studying applied math, analysis, and/or numerical analysis, provides the necessary tools to understand the structure and solvability of elliptic partial differential equations. Beginning with the necessary definitions and theorems from distribution theory, the book gradually builds the functional analytic framework for studying elliptic PDE using variational formulations. Rather than introducing all of the prerequisites in the first chapters, it is the introduction of new problems which motivates the development of the associated analytical tools.

A Social Network Approach

Edited by Mrutyunjaya Panda, Ajith Abraham, Machine Intelligence Research Labs and Aboul Ella Hassanien, University of Cairo

The popularity of social networking has dramatically increased in recent years, which has led to a rise in the amount of data created daily. Due to this huge amount of data, the traditional software algorithm is no longer efficient and big data analysis is required. At the same time, there is the risk of malicious users attacking others through their social relationships, which also poses a challenge. Based on the diversity and complexity of social network research in this area of big data, this book will address social network mining as well as required security measures.

How Well Do Executives Trust Their Intuition

Edited by Jay Liebowitz, Harrisburg University of Science and Technology, Pennsylvania, USA, Yolande Chan, Tracy Jenkin, Dylan Spicker, Joanna Paliszkiwicz and Fabio Babiloni, University of Rome, La Sapienza, Italy

Series: Data Analytics Applications

In this age of "big data", knowledge gained from experiential learning may be taking a back seat to analytics. But, the use of intuition should play an important role in the decision process. This book covers the Fulbright research study conducted by the authors. The main question is: How well do executives trust their intuition? In other words, do they typically prefer intuition over analysis/analytcs, and what types of intuition (Holistic-Big Picture, Holistic-Abstract, Affective Intuition, Inferential Intuition) may be most favorable looking at different variables? The research utilizes survey and biometrics approaches using C-level executives from Canada, U.S., Poland, and Italy.

Rolf Giesen's Puppetry, Puppet Animation and the Digital Age explores the unique world of puppetry animation and its application in the digital age. With the advent of digital animation, many individuals see puppetry and 2D animation as being regulated to a niche market. Giesen's text argues against this viewpoint, by demonstrating the pure aesthetic value they have, as well as examples of some of the greatest cinematic uses of puppets. Such samples include, The Adventures of Prince Achmed, Ladislav Starevich, O'Brien, Harryhausen and Danforth, Trnka and Švankmajer, Aardman and Laika Studios, ParaNorman, and the Bxtrolls.

Software Engineering for Variability Intensive Systems

Foundations and Applications

Edited by Ivan Mistrik, Matthias Galster and Bruce R. Maxim

This book addresses the challenges in the software engineering of variability-intensive systems. Variability-intensive systems can support different usage scenarios by accommodating different and unforeseen features and qualities. The book features academic and industrial contributions that discuss the challenges in developing, maintaining and evolving systems, cloud and mobile services for variability-intensive software systems and the scalability requirements they imply. The book explores software engineering approaches that can efficiently deal with variability-intensive systems as well as applications and use cases benefiting from variability-intensive systems.

Swarm Intelligence Methods for Statistical Regression

Soumya Mohanty

A core task in Big Data analytics is the fitting of flexible, high-dimensional, models to noisy data in order to capture meaningful patterns. This can often result in challenging non-linear and non-convex global optimization problems. The large data volume that must be handled in Big Data applications further increases the difficulty of this problem. This book will describe methods from the field of computational swarm intelligence (SI) and how they can be used to solve optimization problems encountered in Big Data analytics. It will consider some generic data analysis problems, and how they may be addressed using SI methods.

The GETMe Mesh Smoothing Framework

A Geometric Way to Quality Finite Element Meshes

Dimitris P. Vartziotis, NIKI Digital Engineering, Greece and TWT GmbH Science and Innovation, Germany and Joachim Wipper

This book describes the mathematical theory of regularizing element transformations as foundation for mesh smoothing. It gives a thorough introduction to GETMe based mesh smoothing and its algorithms providing a framework to focus on efficiently improving minimal element quality, overall mesh quality, and mesh validity. It addresses the improvement of various types of meshes like planar, surface, volumetric, mixed, isotropic or anisotropic meshes and addresses aspects of combining mesh smoothing with topological mesh modifications.

The Mathematics of Chip-Firing

Caroline J. Klivans

Series: Discrete Mathematics and Its Applications

The Mathematics of Chip-firing is a solid introduction and overview of the growing field of chip-firing. It offers an appreciation for the richness and diversity of the subject. Chip-firing refers to a discrete dynamical system — a commodity is exchanged between sites of a network according to very simple local rules. Although governed by local rules, the long-term global behavior of the system reveals fascinating properties.

The Fundamental properties of chip-firing are covered from a variety of perspectives. Instructors and students will discover that this book has a comprehensive background to approaching original sources.

Innovation-Based Development of the Mineral Resources Sector: Challenges and Prospects

Proceedings of the 11th Russian-German Raw Materials Conference, November 7-8, 2018, Potsdam, Germany

Edited by Vladimir Litvinenko, Saint-Petersburg Mining University, St. Petersburg, Russia

The Russian-German Raw Materials Conference (RGRC) is an interactive platform for the intensification of relations between the two countries in the commodity sector. It brings together representatives from both countries in the field of science and economics. Annually increasing number of participants, creation of joint projects with Russian regions and strengthening of the function of a platform for cooperation of specialists in the field of science allowed the commodity conference to become the main dialogue platform of both countries in this field at the moment.

Universe Dynamics

The Least Action Principle and Lagrange's Equations

Jacques Vanier, Université de Montréal, Quebec, Canada and Cipriana Tomescu (Mandache), Université de Montréal, Quebec, Canada

Brought together in one focused and exclusive treatment, this book provides an elementary introduction to the important role and use of the least action principle and the resulting Lagrange's equations in the analysis of the laws that govern the universe. It is an ideal complimentary resource to accompany undergraduate courses and textbooks on classical mechanics.

Core Principles of Special and General Relativity

James Luscombe

This book provides an accessible, yet thorough, introduction to special and general relativity, crafted and class-tested over many years of teaching. Suitable for advanced undergraduate and graduate students, this book provides clear descriptions of how to approach the mathematics and physics involved. It also contains the latest exciting developments in the field, including dark energy, gravitational waves, and frame dragging.

The table of contents has been carefully developed in consultation with a large number of instructors teaching courses worldwide, to ensure its wide applicability to modules on relativity and gravitation.

Fundamentals of Radio Astronomy

Observational Methods and Astrophysics - Two Volume Set

Jonathan Marr, Union College, Schenectady, New York, USA, Ronald L. Snell, University of Massachusetts Amherst, Massachusetts, USA and Stanley Kurtz, National Autonomous University of Mexico, Morelia

This two-volume set of introductory textbooks are the first exclusively devoted to radio astronomy, and the telescopes, observation methods, and astrophysical processes that furnish this exciting field.

Requiring no prior knowledge of astronomy, the two volumes are ideal textbooks for undergraduate and graduate students on radio astronomy courses, particularly those that emphasize radio wavelength instrumentation and observational techniques or the astrophysics of radio sources. The set enables instructors to pick and choose topics from the two volumes that best fit their courses.

Fundamentals of Radio Astronomy

Astrophysics

Ronald L. Snell, University of Massachusetts Amherst, Massachusetts, USA, Stanley Kurtz, National Autonomous University of Mexico, Morelia and Jonathan Marr, Union College, Schenectady, New York, USA

Series: Series in Astronomy and Astrophysics

This textbook, the second of two volumes, presents an extensive introduction to the astrophysical processes that are studied in radio astronomy. Suitable for undergraduate courses on radio astronomy, it discusses the physical phenomena that give rise to radio emissions, presenting examples of astronomical objects, and illustrating how the relevant physical parameters of astronomical sources can be obtained from radio observations.

Unlike other radio astronomy textbooks, this book provides students with an understanding of the background and the underlying principles, with derivations available for most of the equations used in the textbook.

Statistical Physics of Dense Plasmas

Elementary Processes and Phase Transitions

Setsuo Ichimaru, Tokyo University Department of Physics

Series: Frontiers in Physics

This timely book gives a complete overview on the statistical mechanics and electrodynamics elucidating the physical processes in dense plasma systems. The author emphasizes laboratory-based experiments on metallic hydrogen, and gives detailed account of the plasma phenomena in various astrophysical settings. The coverage encompasses the intersection with condensed matter physics, atomic physics, nuclear physics, and astrophysics, including such key topics as phase transitions, transport, optical and nuclear processes. This essential resource discusses important topics such as metallic hydrogen, stellar and planetary magnetisms, pycnonuclear reactions, and gravitational waves.

Survival Guide to General Chemistry

Patrick E. McMahon, Benedictine University, Organic Chemistry and General Chemistry, Lisle, Illinois, USA, Rosemary McMahon and Bohdan Khomtchouk

This work evolved over thirty combined years of teaching general chemistry to a variety of student demographics. The focus is not to recap or review the theoretical concepts well described in the available texts. Instead, the topics and descriptions in this book make available specific, detailed step-by-step methods and procedures for solving the major types of problems in general chemistry. Explanations, instructional process sequences, solved examples and completely solved practice problems are greatly expanded, containing significantly more detail than can usually be devoted to in a comprehensive text. Many chapters also provide alternative viewpoints as an aid to understanding.

Advanced Radiation Protection Dosimetry

Edited by Shaheen Dewji and Nolan E. Hertel, Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Atlanta, Georgia, USA

Series: Series in Medical Physics and Biomedical Engineering

Although many radiation protection scientists and engineers use dose coefficients, few know the origin of those dose coefficients. This is the first book in over 40 years to address the topic of radiation protection dosimetry in intimate detail.

It covers all methods used in radiation protection dosimetry, including advanced external and internal radiation dosimetry concepts and regulatory applications. It is an ideal reference for both scientists and practitioners in radiation protection and students in graduate health physics and medical physics courses.

Introduction to Megavoltage X-Ray Dose Computation Algorithms

Edited by Jerry Battista, Medical Biophysics Department, University of Western Ontario, Canada

Series: Series in Medical Physics and Biomedical Engineering

A critical element of radiation treatment planning is the accurate prediction and placement of dosage treatments, to minimise collateral damage to healthy tissue. The answer lies in three-dimensional (3D) dose computation algorithms, which simulate the passage of radiation through tissue and account for diffusion into healthy tissue.

This book explores the physics and mathematics that underlie the dose computation algorithms used in modern radiation oncology. It is an invaluable reference for clinical practitioners and researchers who wish to utilise the software, in addition to graduate students and residents in medical physics and radiation oncology.

Multinary Alloys Based on III-V Semiconductors

Vasyl Tomashyk

III-V semiconductors have attracted considerable attention due to their applications in the fabrication of electronic and optoelectronic devices as light emitting diodes and solar cells. This book covers all known information about phase relations in multinary systems based on III-V semiconductors.

This book will be of interest to undergraduate and graduate students studying materials science, solid state chemistry, and engineering. It will also be relevant for researchers at industrial and national laboratories, in addition to phase diagram researchers, inorganic chemists, and solid state physicists.

Spintronics Handbook, Second Edition

Metallic Spintronics - Volume One

Edited by Evgeny Y. Tsymbal, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, USA and Igor Žutić, University at Buffalo, The State University of New York, USA

Spintronics Handbook, Second Edition offers an update on the single most comprehensive survey of the two intertwined fields of spintronics and magnetism, covering the diverse array of materials and structures, including silicon, organic semiconductors, carbon nanotubes, graphene, and engineered nanostructures. It focuses on seminal pioneering work, together with the latest in cutting-edge advances, notably extended discussion of two-dimensional materials beyond graphene, topological insulators, skyrmions, and molecular spintronics. The main sections cover physical phenomena, spin-dependent tunneling, control of spin and magnetism in semiconductors, and spin-based applications.

Series: Focus Computational Biology Series

This book introduces aspects of modelling microbial communities, and presents an overview of the computational methods which have been developed. It is aimed at researchers, as well as biologists/experimentalists studying microbial communities who are keen on the concepts of computational modelling. The focus of the book is on methods for modelling interactions between micro-organisms in a community, with emphasis on constraint-based and network-based modelling techniques. A brief overview of population- and agent-based modelling is presented, along with case studies.

Developing an Impact-Based Combined Drought Index for Monitoring Crop Yield Anomalies in the Upper Blue Nile Basin, Ethiopia

Yared A. Bayissa, IHE Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

Series: IHE Delft PhD Thesis Series

This thesis proposes an impact-based combined drought index (CDI) and a regression prediction model of crop yield anomalies for the Upper Blue Nile basin in Ethiopia. The impact-based CDI is defined as a drought index that optimally combines the information embedded in other drought indices for monitoring a certain impact of drought, i.e. crop yield for the UBN. The developed impact-based CDIs have shown to be effective in indicating historic drought events in the Upper Blue Nile. The impact-based CDI could potentially be used in the future development of drought monitoring in the UBN basin in order to mitigate adverse drought impacts.

Metal Recovery from Electronic Waste: Biological Versus Chemical Leaching for Recovery of Copper and Gold

Arda İşildar, IHE Institute for Water Education, Delft, The Netherlands

Series: IHE Delft PhD Thesis Series

Waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) generation is a global problem. Despite the growing awareness and deterring legislation, most of the waste is disposed improperly, i.e. landfilled or otherwise shipped overseas, and treated in sub-standard conditions. WEEE contains considerable quantities of valuable metals. This PhD research investigates novel metal recovery technologies from WEEE. Using acidophilic and cyanide-generating bacteria, copper and gold were removed from crushed electronic waste with removal efficiencies of 98.4 and 44.0%, respectively. The leached metals in solution were recovered using sulfidic precipitation and electrowinning separation techniques.

How to Know God

The Yoga Aphorisms of Patanjali

Edited by Swami Prabhavananda and Christopher Isherwood

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Yoga

The aphorisms collected in this book, first published in 1953, were composed by Patanjali, a great Indian sage, over 1,500 years ago, and here translated into clear English prose. The accompanying commentary interprets the sayings for the modern world, and in doing so gives a full picture of what yoga is, what its aims are, and how it can be practised.

In Days of Great Peace

The Highest Yoga as Lived

Mouni Sadhu

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Yoga

For several years Mouni Sadhu steeped himself in the teachings of the foremost Hindu ascetic, Sri Ramana Maharshi. This book, first published in 1957, is the best attempt by a European to describe without technicalities what such teachings entail, what meditation is about, and why Indians worship their gurus. Mouni Sadhu's rare facility for describing his own mental and spiritual states enables him to pass on to the reader his knowledge and enthusiasm. It is an authentic account of life with an inspired Hindu yogi and spiritual teacher.

Integral Yoga

The Concept of Harmonious and Creative Living

Haridas Chaudhuri

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Yoga

Originated by the great sage of modern India, Sri Aurobindo, integral yoga has been presented in this volume, first published in 1965, in the context of modern western thinking. It expounds the concept of harmonious and creative living on the basis of a fruitful reconciliation of the self-perfecting mysticism of the East and the rationalistic humanism of the West. It gives a dynamic form, an evolutionary perspective, and a creative impetus to the ancient mystic idea of union with the eternal.

Râja Yoga

Being Lectures by the Swâmi Vivekananda, with Patanjali's Aphorisms, Commentaries and a Glossary of Terms

Swâmi Vivekananda

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Yoga

This book, first published in 1922, examines the science of Râja Yoga. All the orthodox systems of Indian philosophy point to one goal, the liberation of the soul through perfection – and the method to attain this is through Yoga. This book presents lectures on Yoga, delivered to a western audience view to explaining Indian philosophy; the lectures are accompanied by the Sutras (aphorisms) of Patanjali, along with an explanatory commentary.

After Full Employment

John Keane, University of Sydney, Australia and John Owens, The University of Westminster, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1986. This book analyses the four main and competing political interpretations of the cause of unemployment and the future of paid work – social democracy, free market liberalism, the disciplinary state, and utopian socialism.

By focusing on an issue which was, and still is, at the heart of political debate, the book provides a lucid and approachable guide to four key strands of political thought in Britain and the US. It will be an ideal introductory text for students of politics, sociology and economics.

Industrialisation, Employment and Income Distribution

A Case Study of Hong Kong

Ronald Hsia and Laurence Chau

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1978. Beginning with a comprehensive evaluation of the effects of the various characteristics of employment and the labour force on household income distribution, this study assesses the impact of Hong Kong's industrialisation and employment growth on its income distribution. Through an analysis of the changes in industrial and occupational structures, employment status, household size, labour participation rate, inflow of labour and wage and employment structures, it considers not only how income distribution alters with economic development, but also the mechanism that has brought about these changes.

Inequality in the Workplace

Underemployment among Mexicans, African Americans, and Whites

José M. Soltero

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1995. During the late 1980s and early 1990s the American economy again became immersed in a recession. The study of labor force stratification can illuminate ways in which the American working class is segmented, as well as the relation to other social problems like poverty and delinquency.

In this book, the author explores underemployment, an arguably more accurate measure of labor force hardship than unemployment, amongst several demographic groups. This study will be of interest to students of both economics and sociology.

The Economics of Unemployment Insurance

Mark M. Hauser and Paul Burrows

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1969. This book analyses the role of Unemployment Insurance in a high-employment economy. It emphasises the social requirements of an income-maintenance scheme in the context of various economic policies, particularly government intervention in the labour market. The authors discuss other related problems including the relationship between Unemployment Insurance and redundancy compensation and the question of selectivity in social security.

The Impact of Trade on United States Employment

Catherine Sveikauskas

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1995. Over the last several decades there has been much concern that international trade has been destroying "good" jobs in the United States. This book provides a thorough empirical examination of this issue, focussing on the years when large, continuous deficits began. The analysis examines occupational employment data for 118 occupations in 156 different industries, and will be of interest to both students of business and economics and policy makers.

The Road to Full Employment

Edited by Sean Glynn and Alan Booth

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1987. This volume explores the inter-war unemployment problem and the development of economic and social policy in relation to that problem. This book is written by a group of expert historians and policy analysts who have been in the forefront of recent research. In particular, new insights into economic policy which have come from the release of cabinet and departmental papers at The Public Record Office are revealed. This work will be essential reading for students of modern British history and economic and social history as well as economic policy and government and politics.

Unemployment

The European Perspective

Edited by Angus Maddison and Bote S. Wilpstra

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1982. Unemployment was a major scourge of the advanced capitalist countries in the 1930s, but in the golden age of post-war expansion which lasted until 1973, it had seemingly been vanquished by enlightened economic policy. Since 1973, unemployment has re-emerged as a major problem, along with accelerated inflation and problems of structural adjustment imposed by soaring energy prices.

The present volume contains three comparative papers on the employment policy discussions in Germany, the Netherlands and the UK as well as papers examining the theoretical adequacy of Keynesian, monetarist, structuralist and Marxist reactions to the new issues.

Unemployment

An Economic Analysis

K. G. Knight

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1987. Unemployment is currently the major economic concern in developed economies. This book provides a comprehensive analysis of the economics of unemployment. It concentrates on theories of the labour market and examines the critical inter-relationships with the rest of the economy. It provides a thorough evaluation of theory and extensive consideration of the relevant empirical evidence. It emphasises the multi-causal nature of unemployment and concludes that policy-makers should respond with a multi-faceted mix of policies.

Unemployment, Schooling and Training in Developing Countries

Tanzania, Egypt, the Philippines and Indonesia

Edited by M. D. Leonor

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Employment and Unemployment

First published in 1985. Increasing doubt is being shed on the proposition that higher levels of education in developing countries are an unmitigated good. Unemployment among school leavers and university graduates is now a major problem. Some people argue that what is needed is a reform of primary education and the changing of attitudes to work; but many of the measures adopted have failed to achieve these goals and have only worsened the problem by increasing costs, making curricula less flexible and by increasing 'mis-education'. This book examines the problems and the measures adopted to alleviate them in four important developing countries.

Cross-National Studies of Women and Elites

Edited by Cynthia Fuchs Epstein and Rose Laub CoserSeries: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics*

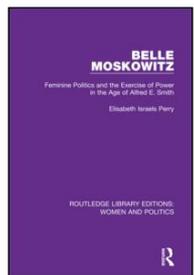

Originally published in 1981, this book is composed of papers that describe and analyse women's careers in government, business, and the professions. It examines women's access to and participation in elite careers in the US, and in selected countries of western and eastern Europe, as well as in international organizations. This book was an outgrowth of a conference on 'Women in decision-making elites in cross-national perspective,' held at King's College, Cambridge University, in July 1976. The countries represented were chosen because, although they were at similar stages of economic development, they exhibited differences in political structure, ideology, and tradition.

Feminine Politics and the Exercise of Power in the Age of Alfred E. Smith

Elisabeth Israels Perry

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics

It is commonly believed that women's entry into the political realm is a recent phenomenon. First published in 1992, this title shatters that myth, restoring to history the career of a remarkable woman who achieved unprecedented influence and power in American politics many decades before the contemporary era. As political advisor to Alfred E. Smith, four-term governor of New York and presidential candidate, Moskowitz played a crucial role in both state and national politics throughout the 1920s. The author, her granddaughter, has thoroughly searched through private and public records to document her career, drawing as well on the reminiscences of her daughter Miriam Israels Gabo.

Reva Pollack Greenburg

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics

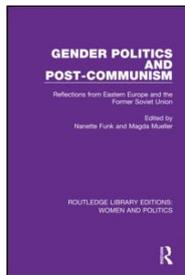

In the three decades before the First World War, the relationship between socialism and feminism was both curious and convoluted. In Britain, the uniquely middle-class, reform-minded Fabian Society might have been expected to bridge the gap between these movements. Yet, between 1884 and 1914, the Fabian Society's record on the "woman question" was highly inconsistent and, at times, overtly regressive. First published in 1987, this title looks at three of the most influential members, Sidney Webb, George Bernard Shaw and Hubert Bland and the women they were married to, who were also active in the Society, in a bid to understand the contradictions between their views and life experiences.

Reflections from Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union

Edited by Nanette Funk and Magda MuellerSeries: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics*

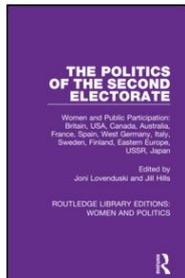

In the wake of communism's decline, women's concerns had become increasingly important in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. Yet most discussions of post-communism changes had neglected women's experiences. Originally published in 1993, this title was the first collection of its kind, presenting original essays by women scholars, politicians, activists, and former dissidents from Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, along with essays by Western feminists and scholars. They discuss gender politics during the often turbulent transition and crises of post-communism, offering vivid accounts and analyses of the conditions facing women in each country.

Women and Public Participation: Britain, USA, Canada, Australia, France, Spain, West Germany, Italy, Sweden, Finland, Eastern Europe, USSR, Japan

Edited by Joni Lovenduski and Jill HillsSeries: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics*

Prior to publication there had been little study of the political role of women. Gender had been seen only as a background variable in social surveys of political behaviour, and women had rarely been extensively or separately considered. Now, in essays specially written for this volume, first published in 1981, the authors map out the political behaviour of women in twenty 'industrially developed' countries, bringing together and analysing contemporary material on a variety of topics, such as voting, standing for public office, entering the political elite, and engaging in political activity outside the formal structures of government.

Women and Peace

Theoretical, Historical and Practical Perspectives

Edited by Ruth Roach Pierson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics

Originally published in 1987, this book includes contributions from scholars and peace activists in the US, Britain, Canada, Belgium, and the German Democratic Republic. These papers present, from a number of different perspectives, the experiences of women in relation to peace in North America, Japan and Europe. The theoretical diversity and historical breadth of the collection provide a balanced and enlightened view of women and peace movements. The papers range from an important theoretical contribution by the American scholar Berenice Carroll to one on the peace movement in Japan after Hiroshima and Nagasaki by Setsuko Thurlow, a Japanese-Canadian and a Hiroshima survivor.

Women and the State

The Shifting Boundaries of Public and Private

Edited by Anne Showstack Sassoon

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics

In the late 1980s, despite the fact that the vast majority of women now had a dual role – in paid work and in the domestic realm – the world of work, the welfare state, and the domestic sphere were all still organized as though women's place were primarily in the home. In this title, originally published in 1987, articles from women around the world bring the issues sharply into focus. Applying fresh perspectives, they widen and enrich the debate. This book marks a powerful contribution to a new and more realistic assessment of women's dual role in the state and the economy which should be read by all those concerned with the development of women's issues and with women's studies.

Women in Foreign Policy

The Insiders

Edited by Nancy E. McGlen and Meredith Reid Sarkees

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics

Originally published in 1993, this title provides a unique insight into the challenges faced by the women who shaped United States foreign policy at the time. The authors examine the "Gender Gap" in beliefs between men and women in the State and Defense departments. Highlighted by interviews with ten leading women in the field – including Jeane Kirkpatrick and Rozanne Ridgway, then the two highest ranking women in foreign policy – the book provides an intimate glimpse into the making of foreign policy during the Reagan administration.

Women, Power and Political Systems

Edited by Margherita Rendel

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Women and Politics

Originally published in 1981, this book shows that the family and the labour market are political institutions directly relevant to the distribution of power and to economic and social development. The studies in the book, which relate to widely different political systems and which cross disciplinary boundaries, all concentrate on the crucial activities of women. They serve to increase our understanding of the political implications of the family, of the sexual divisions of both domestic and wage labour and of the role of education in these inequalities at the time.

Adverse Selection in the Labor Market

Bruce C. N. Greenwald, Columbia University, USA

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1979. This thesis describes the theoretical impact on labour markets of a process of adverse selection similar to that described in outline by George Arthur Akerlof. Since the market failures that result have potentially significant consequences in the labour market, this study is devoted to examining their influence on the structure of wages and job tenure, and on the operation and efficiency of labour markets. This title will be of great interest to students of economics and business studies.

Developments in Labour Market Analysis

Caroline Joll, Chris McKenna, Robert McNabb, Cardiff University, UK and John Shorey

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1983. This text is designed to enable intermediate and advanced students to attain familiarity with the theoretical concepts used in labour market analysis, and to apply them fruitfully to the economic problem of labour markets. The contributions of different theoretical developments are assessed by reference to the current state of empirical research into labour market problems.

Flexibility, Mobility and the Labour Market

George S. Callaghan, The Open University, Milton Keynes, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1997. Data from a large factory and office is used to argue that the macro labour market consists of non-competitive work groups where strongly held views and values represent a substantial barrier to simplistic definitions of flexibility and mobility. The analysis takes place in three chapters, dealing with recruitment for work, skills used in work and perceptions of different types of work and workers.

Housing and Labour Markets

Building the Connections

Edited by John Allen and Chris Hamnett

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1991. The connection between housing and work is one of the most discussed yet least understood aspects of modern society. Housing and Labour Markets explores the different ways in which housing and labour are linked and examines their central significance in many of the key changes in society today. It provides a wide-ranging analysis of the relationships between housing and labour markets, with accounts of the different forms of work, paid and unpaid, in which various types of households are engaged.

International Labour Statistics

A Handbook, Guide, and Recent Trends

Edited by R. Bean

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1989. This book is an invaluable guide for users of international labour statistics. It centralizes and co-ordinates, from a range of sources, basic statistical information regarding the labour force for a large number of countries. Individual chapters, by specialists in the particular subject areas, deal with eight key aspects relating to the labour markets of major, developed capitalist countries (OECD countries); working population, unemployment, wages, consumer prices, labour costs, hours of work, trade union membership, and industrial disputes.

Labour Migration

The Internal Geographical Mobility of Labour in the Developed World

Edited by James H. Johnson, University of Wales, Swansea, UK and John Salt

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1990. This edited work brings together a collection of studies, by an international team of contributors, on inter-urban migration, which is largely dominated by labour migration. The structure of the book reflects the interaction of the supply and demand of labour and the information flows that make this possible.

The book offers a multi-dimensional analysis of labour migration, including behavioural, economic and institutional approaches. It combines various scales of analysis, including the national scale, the occupational scale and the household scale. The study also examines labour migration in a variety of national contexts.

Labour Problems of Technological Change

L. C. Hunter, G. L. Reid and D. Boddy

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1970. This book is concerned with the examination and assessment of the impact of changes in technology on companies in three selected industries: printing, steel and chemicals. Its main focus is on the employment and associated labour market effects of technological change; but part of the rationale for the study as a whole has been to relate these effects to the technological environment of each industry. Accordingly, a good deal of attention has been paid to the character of the innovations themselves and to their implications for the industries in general terms. This title will be of interest to students of Business Studies and Economics.

Patterns of Labour

Work and Social Change in the Pottery Industry

Richard Whipp

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1990. Patterns of Labour explores the interaction between home, paid work, and the individual. It looks at how the social relations of work both shape and are shaped by the context in which they occur. In a detailed examination of the pottery industries of Britain and America over two centuries, Richard Whipp looks at the far-reaching effects of key issues, such as industrialisation and economic transformation. However, he also examines changing notions of gender, the family, community and unionisation. The book centres on the difficulties of organising, controlling and describing work – not least because of the human act of its making.

Taxation and Labour Supply

Edited by C. V. Brown

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1981. This book reports on a decade of research into the effects of taxation on the supply of labour. In addition to their work in making labour supply estimates, the study explores a number of the ways labour supply estimates can be used. The implications of labour supply estimates for the study of inequality and optimal taxation are considered.

This book will appeal to academic economists, senior students and policy-makers in the field of public finance and labour economics, who will find much of interest from both the theoretical and policy standpoints.

Wages and Employment Policy 1936-1985

Russell Jones

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1987. This fascinating study provides an understanding of the failings of the post-war era of active macroeconomic policy-making, and only by a better comprehension of past failings can we hope to provide the successful policies for the present and future. The book takes as its primary bench mark an analysis of Keynes's conception of the wages problem at or near full employment in The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money. It then depicts the developments in official thinking and policy with regard to this problem as the confidence in Keynesian principles waxed and waned over the period.

Work, Welfare and Taxation

A Study of Labour Supply Incentives in the UK

Edited by Michael Beenstock

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Labour Economics

First published in 1987. In this book, Professor Beenstock and his colleagues took a comprehensive account of the social security of the 1980s, as well as the tax system, as it had evolved over the Beveridge era and how it affected our incentive to work. The book describes the theory of labour supply decisions in their relationship to the tax benefit system. It illustrates how tax and social security arrangements affected labour supply decisions as well as monitoring how these decisions had evolved over the post-war period. It also considers retirement decisions in the UK as well as the government's plans to reform the social security system.

Medical Theory, Surgical Practice

Studies in the History of Surgery

Edited by Christopher Lawrence

Series: Routledge Library Editions: History of Medicine

Originally published in 1992, Medical Theory, Surgical Practice examines medical and surgical concepts of disease and their relation to the practice of surgery, in particular historical settings. It emphasises that understanding concepts of disease does not just include recounting explicit accounts of disease given by medical men. The contributors illustrate how surgery rose from a relatively humble place in seventeenth century life to being seen as one of the great achievements of late Victorian culture. They examine how medical theory and surgical practices relate to social contexts.

Medicine at the Courts of Europe

1500-1837

Edited by Vivian Nutton, University College London, UK

Series: Routledge Library Editions: History of Medicine

Originally published in 1990, Medicine at the Courts of Europe 1500-1837 is a collection of essays examining the whole range of medical activities in a variety of European courts. It documents the diverse influences of custom, wealth, religion and royal intervention, along with foreign innovation, popular literary satire and matters of litigation which so changed the face of court medicine over three centuries. By looking at court medical practitioners in such a wide chronological, geographic and thematic context, these essays provide many new insights for all those interested in the history of medicine, society and politics from the sixteenth century to the early nineteenth century.

Problems and Methods in the History of Medicine

Edited by Roy Porter and Andrew Wear

Series: Routledge Library Editions: History of Medicine

Originally published in 1987, Problems and Methods in the History of Medicine is a collection of papers surveying and assessing the particular approaches and techniques which have been used in the history of medicine in the past or are still being developed (from the influence of Annales to the role of the computer). The emphasis is on historical practice rather than methodology in isolation. Besides the topics indicated above, a third problematic is that of historical demography. A common theme to all three groups of paper is the relation between quantitative 'hard' data and qualitative 'soft' data.

The Making of Man-Midwifery

Childbirth in England, 1660-1770

Adrian Wilson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: History of Medicine

Originally published 1995 The Making of Man-Midwifery looks at how the eighteenth century witnessed a revolution in childbirth practices. By the last quarter of the century increasing numbers of babies were being delivered by men – a dramatic shift from the women-only ritual that had been standard throughout Western history. The book explains this transformation in medical practice and shift in gender relations. By tracing the actual development and transmission of the new midwifery skills through the period, the book addresses both technological and feminist arguments of the period.

The Rise of the Medical Profession

A Study of Collective Social Mobility

Noel Parry and José Parry

Series: Routledge Library Editions: History of Medicine

Originally published in 1976 The Rise of the Medical Profession combines a sociological and historical approach to the rise of the medical profession in England. Sociologically it offers a theoretical framework which for the first time links the study of social mobility and professionalism with the theory of stratification. Historically, it examines the movement which led to the unification of the medical profession arising from effective social organisation among the surgeon-apothecaries in the early nineteenth century. It demonstrates that through the successful pursuit of the occupational strategy of professionalism the doctors have been able to raise income and status in the community.

The Scientific Revolution in Victorian Medicine

A.J. Youngson

Series: Routledge Library Editions: History of Medicine

Originally published 1979 The Scientific Revolution in Victorian Medicine looks at the great many factors which interacted in delaying the introduction of anesthesia and 'germ' theory to Victorian surgery. The almost wholly unscientific nature of British medical education and practice before 1860 or 1870 had a large impact on progression, as well as genuine disadvantages in the new methods of medical practice. Personal animosities and failure to face the facts, and fear of the unknowable consequences of change also played a significant part in the advancement of surgery in the Victorian period.

10 Volume Set

Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

Various

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

This set of 10 volumes, originally published between 1900 and 1994, amalgamates a wide breadth of research on Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century, including studies on notable figures such as Gregor Johann Mendel, Elizabeth Garrett Anderson and Sir Humphry Davy. This collection of books from some of the leading scholars in the field provides a comprehensive overview of the subject how it has evolved over time, and will be of particular interest to students of history and the sciences.

American Engineers of the Nineteenth Century

A Biographical Index

Christine Roysdon and Linda A. Khatri

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

First published in 1978, this biography aims to solve the problem of the lack of access to information regarding American engineers and technologists of the nineteenth-century, whilst also providing opportunities for scholars to study and assess the work of hitherto little known, potentially important figures. This title will be of interest to scholars and students of science and history.

Atoms and Elements

A Study of Theories of Matter in England in the Nineteenth Century

David M. Knight

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

First published in 1967, the impression is sometimes given that the Atomic Theory was revived in the early years of the nineteenth century by John Dalton, and that continuously from then on it has played a vital role in chemistry. The aim of this study is to revise this over-simplified picture.

Elizabeth Garrett Anderson

Jo Manton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

First published in 1965. In 1865, a woman first obtained a legal qualification in this country as physician and surgeon. Elizabeth Garrett surprised public opinion by the calm obstinacy with which she fought for her own medical education and that of the young women who followed her.

This full biography is based largely on unpublished material from the hospitals and medical schools where Elizabeth Garrett Anderson worked, and the private papers of the Garrett and Anderson families. This title will be of great interest to history of science students.

English Men of Science

Their Nature and Nurture

Francis Galton

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

This edition first published in 1970. In this work, Francis Galton examined at great length the antecedents, environment, education and hereditary features of the most prominent men of science in order to establish certain laws relating to heredity. It is a landmark in the transition from introspective to objective methods in biological and psychological research, and the author's statistical, nonanecdotal approach was to prove immensely fruitful for the development of psychology.

As Professor Cowan points out in her introduction, historians as well as scientists intent upon a deeper understanding of the Victorian mind will find much of interest in this remarkable book.

Heinrich Rudolf Hertz (1857-1894)

A Collection of Articles and Addresses

Edited by Joseph F. Mulligan

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

This book, first available in 1994, was published to commemorate the one-hundredth anniversary of Heinrich Hertz's death at the terribly young age of thirty-six. The introductory biography together with eleven papers by Hertz and seven about him are intended to highlight the importance of Hertz's contributions to physics and at the same time to serve the needs of anyone interested in doing research on this highly gifted scientist.

Medical Fringe and Medical Orthodoxy 1750-1850

W. F. Bynum and Roy Porter

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

First published in 1987. Even as the professionalism of medicine progressed, many sufferers continued to rely on what would now be termed "fringe" practitioners – quacks, backstreet surgeons, bone-setters, Thomsonian botanists, holists and naturalists. Many types of fringe medicine were popular in particular circles or reflected the political or religious preoccupations of their practitioners. The essays collected in this volume all present new research on this fascinating and diverse period in the history of medicine.

The Mercurial Chemist

A Life of Sir Humphry Davy

Anne Treneer

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Science and Technology in the Nineteenth Century

First published in 1963. Humphry Davy, knighted by the Prince Regent in 1812 for his contributions to science, and later created baronet for his invention of the miners' safety lamp, was among the foremost European chemists in the early nineteenth century.

Anne Treneer tells in full the story of Humphry Davy's life. From letters, journals and memoirs of the time, Davy and his contemporaries come to life. This title will be of great interest to scientists and historians.

5 Volume Set

Routledge Library Editions: Philosophy of Time

Various

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Philosophy of Time

Reissuing five works originally published between 1937 and 1991, this collection contains books addressing the subject of time, from a mostly philosophic point of view but also of interest to those in the science and mathematics worlds. These texts are brought back into print in this small set of works addressing how we think about time, the history of the philosophy of time, the measurement of time, theories of relativity and discussions of the wider thinking about time and space, among other aspects. One volume is a thorough bibliography collating references on the subject of time across many disciplines.

A Treatise on Time and Space

J. R. Lucas

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Philosophy of Time

Originally published in 1976. This comprehensive study discusses the philosophical, mathematical, physical, logical and theological aspects of our understanding of time and space. The text examines first the many different definitions of time, beginning with some of the puzzles arising from our awareness of the passage of time and shows how time can be understood as the concomitant of consciousness. The concept of space-time is then discussed and in an examination of the applications of tense logic the author discusses the traditional difficulties encountered in arguments for fatalism. In the final sections he discusses eternity and the beginning and end of the universe.

The Structure of Time

W. H. Newton-Smith

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Philosophy of Time

Originally published in 1980. The controversy about the nature and structure of time has traditionally been a diametrical argument. The author's arguments here provide grounds for rejecting both the absolutist and the relativist theories, firstly by establishing that 'empty' time is possible, and secondly by showing that the absolutist theory of time is untenable, through a discussion of the structure of time, considering whether time might be cyclical, branching, beginning or non-beginning. Two new theories are presented, shifting the traditional debate to a consideration of time as a theoretical structure and theoretical framework.

Time and its Importance in Modern Thought

M. F. Cleugh

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Philosophy of Time

Originally published in 1937. This book is a classic work on the philosophy of time, looking at the psychology, physics and logic of time before investigating the views of Kant, Bergson, Alexander, McTaggart and Dunne. The second half of the book contains more in-depth consideration of prediction, the concepts of past and future, and reality.

Time Devoured

A Materialistic Discussion of Duration

Edmund Parsons

Series: Routledge Library Editions: Philosophy of Time

Originally published in 1964. This lively, challenging book sets out to elucidate the shadowy concept of Time. This involves central philosophical issues, which are vigorously discussed. Also relativity theory, in a clear-cut exposition, is made intelligible in a new light. All who are interested in science and its philosophical implications will find this book highly controversial but certainly readable. The author believes philosophy to be important, not only for its professionals, but for everyman. The book ends, surprisingly but pertinently, with a bold plunge into the questions of telepathy, precognition and psychical research generally.

Approaches to the Treatment of Stuttering

Edited by Peggy Dalton

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

In the years prior to publication 'cures' for stuttering seemed to appear constantly, but many were of limited value, were poorly evaluated and gave only a temporary alleviation that was not transferred to daily life. More responsible clinicians produced publications expounding one particular approach to therapy but less was available giving a balanced overview which was of practical help to therapists. Originally published in 1983, this book aimed to provide such an overview, with a focus on practical intervention rather than on theory. The need for careful assessment is particularly stressed and also the need for flexibility in the choice of treatment for any one client.

Assessment in Speech and Language Therapy

Edited by John R. Beech, Leonora Harding and Diana Hilton-Jones

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

What assessment tests are available to speech therapists? How are they best used? Originally published in 1993, this title was designed to guide speech therapists in choosing the most appropriate assessments for evaluation, monitoring and intervention at the time. By providing guidance on defining the issues in assessment, it shows how to make sure that the process will produce a result relevant to the therapist's own needs and those of his or her clients. The major issues involved are discussed in detail, in particular how to make sure that assessments are relevant to individual needs. This title will be invaluable to all speech therapists and clinical psychologists working in this area.

Cognition and Figurative Language

Edited by Richard P. Honeck and Robert R. Hoffman

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

Originally published in 1980, this is a book about the psychology of figurative language. The editors felt there was a pressing need to bring together the growing empirical efforts of this topic. In a sense, recognition of the theoretical importance of figurative language symbolized the transition from the psycholinguistics of the 1960s to that of the late 1970s, that is from a linguistic semantics to a more comprehensive psychological semantics with a healthy respect for context, inference, world knowledge, and above all creative imagination. The organization of the volume reflects the more basic, general concerns with cognition.

Phonological Disorders in Children

Theory, Research and Practice

Edited by Mehmet S. Yavas

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

Originally published in 1991, the recent developments in the study of phonological disorders in children had led to a fruitful interaction between speech pathology and phonology. It is one aspect of the application of linguistic theory to the study of speech and language disorders which had opened up a new field, clinical linguistics. This book brings together the concerns of the linguist and the speech pathologist; the essays chosen share the quality of not discussing theory or therapy without addressing the implications one has for the other. By concentrating on recent work the editor hoped to stimulate further discussion in this important and fast growing area of research.

Signs, Signals and Symbols

A Presentation of a British Approach to Speech Pathology and Therapy

Edited by Stella E. Mason

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

Originally published in 1963, this title was an attempt to provide a new basis for the discipline of Speech Therapy. This was the first work to be published in England relating speech pathology to the wider study of human communication. It also contains results of original research into the problems of Dyslalia and Stammering. Several chapters are devoted to accounts of diagnostic measures and aids.

Speech and Voice

Their Evolution, Pathology and Therapy

Leopold Stein

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

Originally published in 1942, this title was recognised as setting new standards in the scientific approach to speech problems. Much speech therapy in the past had been unsatisfactory because of its emphasis upon the purely mechanical aspects of the condition, while at the same time the purely psychological approach was not sufficient to lead to satisfactory and radical treatment either. In this title the author combines the two approaches and by setting out the basic pathology of the various conditions, he throws new light upon them. Today it can be read and enjoyed in its historical context.

Stuttering Therapies

Practical Approaches

Edited by Celia Levy

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

Originally published in 1987, this book presented new ideas on the treatment of stuttering, by leading authorities within Britain at the time. There are chapters on children and adolescents, as well as on adults. In each chapter the author describes the therapeutic approach, how it fits into general views on the nature of stuttering, the clients for which it is appropriate, and possible methods of evaluation. The book is aimed at speech therapists and psychologists and provided an important up-date of the subject for practitioners.

The Infancy of Speech and the Speech of Infancy

Leopold Stein

Series: Psychology Library Editions: Speech and Language Disorders

For many centuries scientists and philosophers have tried to solve the problem of human language. First published in 1949, Stein had been fascinated by this problem and collected an enormous amount of data from past and present ages which, when viewed together, shed light upon the origin, evolution and meaning of human speech. He adheres to the concept that the development of the individual is a brief recapitulation of the evolution of the race, and has attempted to apply this principle to the solution of the problem of language. The work is crowned by the fact that his assumptions were being verified by the results obtained in the treatment of speech disorders based upon them at the time.

The Psychology of Everything

Know the psychology. Understand your world.
See your life in a new way.

The Psychology of Everything is a series of books which debunk the popular myths and pseudo-science surrounding some of life's biggest questions. The series explores the hidden psychological factors that drive us, from our subconscious desires and aversions, to our natural social instincts. Absorbing, informative, and always intriguing, each book is written by an expert in the field, examining how research-based knowledge compares with popular wisdom, and showing how psychology can truly enrich our understanding of modern life.
