7th Edition

A Cognitive Psychology of Mass Communication

Fred W. Sanborn, North Carolina Wesleyan College, USA and Richard Jackson Harris, Kansas State University, USA

In a constantly changing media landscape, A Cognitive Psychology of Mass Communication is the go-to text for any course that examines mass communication from a psychological perspective. Now in its seventh edition, the book continues its exploration of how our experiences with media affect the way we acquire and process knowledge about the world and how this knowledge influences our attitudes and behavior. While including real-world examples, the book also integrates psychology and communication theory along with reviews of the most up-to-date research.

2nd Edition

Advertising Theory

Edited by Shelly Rodgers, University of Missouri, USA and Esther Thorson, Michigan State University, USA

Series: Routledge Communication Series

Advertising Theory is a comprehensive text that draws on current research and practices in advertising theory by introducing key concepts, models, theories, conflicts, and issues for individuals interested in this area. Editors Shelly Rodgers and Esther Thorson have developed this volume as a forum in which to compare, contrast, and evaluate advertising theories in a comprehensive and structured presentation. This new edition is positioned to provide a detailed overview of advertising theory with a balance of theory and practice that will help provide a working knowledge of the primary theoretical approaches and will help readers synthesize the vast literature on advertising.

Cases in Public Relations Management

The Rise of Social Media and Activism

Patricia Swann, Utica College, USA

Developed for advanced students in public relations, Cases in Public Relations Management uses recent cases in public relations that had outcomes varying from expected to unsuccessful. The text challenges students to think analytically, strategically, and practically. Each case is based on real events, and is designed to encourage discussion, debate, and exploration of the options available to today's strategic public relations manager.

Communication Theory Through the Ages

Igor E Klyukanov, Eastern Washington University, USA and Galina V Sinekopova, Eastern Washington University, USA

This book presents communication theory as a journey through history by way of asking engaged questions. Informed by contemporary problems, students explore theory up close through their own engaged questions. Encouraging intellectual vitality, the authors show students step by step how theoretical ideas are interconnected and lead to an increasingly complex understanding of communication. Students will be motivated to ask questions as they encounter historical figures, social events and artifacts, resulting in a richer understanding of the biographical, cultural, and social context for communication theories.

Creating Intelligent Content with Lightweight DITA

Carlos Evia

Series: ATTW Series in Technical and Professional Communication

Creating Intelligent Content with Lightweight DITA documents the evolution of the Darwin Information Typing Architecture (DITA) —a widely used open standard for structuring technical content. DITA has grown in popularity and features since its origins as an internal grammar for structuring technical documentation at IBM. This book introduces Lightweight DITA (LwDITA, which should be read as "Lightweight DITA") as a proposed version of the DITA standard that reduces its dependence on complex Extensible Markup Language (XML) structures and simplifies its authoring experience.

Editing in the Modern Classroom

Edited by Michael Albers, East Carolina University, Greenville and Suzan Flanagan

Series: ATTW Series in Technical and Professional Communication

Editing in the Modern Classroom is a research-based collection that defines the current state of technical editing pedagogy and plots a potential roadmap for its future. It examines current academic and professional editing practices, the global and corporate contexts of technical communication programs, and the role of new challenges such as content management in order to assess what should be expected from editing courses today and how instructors can best structure their courses to meet these expectations.

Family Care, Development, and Health Communication in Rural China

Who's Left Behind?

Mohan Jyoti Dutta, National University of Singapore and Kang Sun, Greenville College, USA

Series: Critical Cultural Studies in Global Health Communication

Drawing upon the theoretical framework of the culture-centered approach, this book examines the conditions of care in the changing living environment of the elderly in rural China. With China moving into an aging society, studying the health of the elderly in rural families, who have been left behind while their adult children migrate to cities to work, offers a chance to understand the human costs of national development as well as challenging what health means for the study of health communication.

Humanizing Visual Design

The Rhetoric of Human Forms in Practical Communication

Charles Kostelnick, Iowa State University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Technical Communication, Rhetoric, and Culture

This book analyzes the role that human forms play in visualizing practical information and in making that information understandable, accessible, inviting, and meaningful to readers. Drawing on historical and contemporary examples, the book explores the many rhetorical purposes that human forms play in functional pictures, including empowering readers, narrating processes, visualizing social and cultural identities, and evoking pathos appeals. The book is aimed at scholars, teachers, and practitioners in business, technical, and professional communication as well as an interdisciplinary audience in rhetoric, art and design, journalism, engineering, marketing, science, and history.

Landmark Essays on Rhetorics of Difference

Edited by Damian Baca, Ellen Cushman, Associate Dean of Academic Affairs, Diversity and Inclusion at Northeastern University and Jonathan Osborne, Ph.D. student in English at the University of Northeastern

Series: Landmark Essays Series

Landmark Essays on Rhetorics of Difference challenges the Euro-centric perspective from which the field of rhetoric is traditionally viewed. Taking a step beyond the creation of alternative rhetorics that maintain the centrality of the European and Greco-Roman tradition, this volume argues on behalf of pluriversal rhetorics that co-exist as equally important on their own terms. A timely addition to the respected Landmark Essays series, it will be invaluable to students of history of rhetoric, literacy, composition, and writing studies.

Landmark Essays on Writing Program Administration

Edited by Kelly Ritter and MELISSA IANETTA

Series: Landmark Essays Series

Leading with the provocative observation that writing programs administration lacks "an established set of texts that provides a baseline of shared knowledge ... in which to root our ongoing conversations and with which to welcome newcomers"

Landmark Essays on Writing Program Administration focuses on WPA identity to propose one such grouping of texts. This Landmark volume is the cornerstone resource for new Writing Program Administrators and graduate students when seeking an ever-important overview of the literature on Writing Program Administration.

Models of Communication

Theoretical and Philosophical Approaches

Edited by Mats Bergman, University of Helsinki, Finland, Kęstas Kirtiklis, Vilnius University, Lithuania and Johan Siebers, Middlesex University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in European Communication Research and Education

Complementing earlier efforts to scrutinize the uses of models in the field of media and communication studies, this volume reassesses old perspectives and delineates new theoretical options for communication inquiry. It is the first book to undertake a philosophical investigation of the significance of modelling in the study of the varying phenomena, processes, and practices of communication. By homing in on the manifestations and purposes of modelling in ordinary discourses on communication as well as in theoretical expositions, it casts new light on the importance of models for communication inquiry.

Race/Gender/Class/Media

Considering Diversity across Audiences, Content, and Producers

Edited by Rebecca Ann Lind

Race/Gender/Class/Media considers diversity in the mass media in three main settings: Audiences, Content, and Production.

It brings together 53 readings – most are newly commissioned for this edition -- by scholars representing a variety of social science and humanities disciplines. Together, these readings provide a multifaceted and often intersectional look at how race, gender, and class relate to the creation and use of media texts as well as the media texts themselves.

This volume is an essential introduction to interdisciplinary studies of gender, race, and class across mass media.

Soft Skills for the New Journalist

Cultivating the Inner Resources You Need to Succeed

Colleen Steffen

Journalism is people managing, wrestling truth and story out of the messy, confusing raw material that is a human being, and the messiest human involved can often be the reporter themselves. It's time to talk about it. Instead of nervously skirting the sizable EQ (emotional intelligence) portion of this IQ (intelligence intelligence) enterprise, Soft Skills for the New Journalist explores how it FEELS to do this strange, hard, amazing job—and how to use those feelings to better your work and yourself.

The Global Public Relations Handbook

Theory, Research, and Practice

Edited by Krishnamurthy Sriramesh, Purdue University, USA and Dejan Vercic

Now in its Third Edition, The Global Public Relations Handbook: Theory, Research, and Practice continues to offer a global discussion on the history, development, and current status of the public relations industry. This new edition opens with a foundation in theory, delving into the ten generic principles that can be employed by public relations strategists. It features country-specific chapters that explore public relations practice in Africa, Asia, Europe, and the Americas. Contributors devote further attention to the status of public relations education in their respective countries, professionalism and ethics, new technologies and social media, and increased public diplomacy.

The Routledge Handbook of Positive Communication

Contributions of an Emerging Community of Research on Communication for Happiness and Social Change

Edited by José Antonio Muñoz Velázquez, Loyola Andalucía University, Spain and Cristina M. Pulido, University of Barcelona, Spain

Series: Routledge Handbooks in Communication Studies

The Routledge Handbook of Positive Communication forms a comprehensive reference point for cross-disciplinary approaches to understanding the central role of communication in the construction of hedonic and eudemonic happiness, or subjective and psychological well-being. Including contributions from internationally recognized authors in their respective fields, this reference uses as its focus five main scenarios where communication affects the life of individuals: mass and digital media, advertising and marketing communication, external and internal communication in companies and organizations, communication in education, and communication in daily life interactions.

The Twitter Presidency

Donald J. Trump and the Politics of White Rage

Brian L. Ott, Texas Tech University, USA and Greg Dickinson, Colorado State University, USA

Series: NCA Focus on Communication Studies

The Twitter Presidency explores the distinctive rhetorical style of President Donald J. Trump, attending to both his general manner of speaking and his preferred modality of speaking. The authors argue that there is a structural homology between Trump's general communication behavior and the specific platform (Twitter) he uses to communicate with his base. In addition to charting the defining characteristics of Trump's discourse, the book explores how Trump's rhetorical style has bearing on democratic norms, principles, and institutions.

Digitized Lives

Culture, Power and Social Change in the Internet Era

T.V. Reed

Reed avoids both techno-hype and techno-pessimism, offering instead succinct, witty and insightful discussions of how digital communication is impacting our lives and reshaping the major social issues of our era. The book argues that making sense of digitized culture means looking past the glossy surface of techno gear to ask deeper questions about how we can utilize technology to create a more socially, politically, and economically just world. This second edition includes important updates on mobile and social media, examining how new platforms and devices have altered how we interact with digital technologies.

Aspasia Stephanou

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

Using Paul de Man's concept of inhuman materiality, this book examines the manifestations of this materiality across different gothic media. It proposes to read blood as the conduit of an unnameable materiality that circulates through gothic media, seducing with its familiar mask of gothic aesthetics only to uncover the horror of a totally alienating and inhuman otherness. The book offers innovative readings of notions of blood inscription in different media, of gender and mysticism in film, of the Dark Web, accelerationism, technoscience and bioart in order to account for the widespread haemophilia in contemporary culture.

Radical Utopianism and Cultural Studies

On Refusing to be Realistic

John Storey

Utopian Desire: A Cultural Studies Approach explores the concept of utopianism from the trans-disciplinary perspective of cultural studies. Utopianism is not something new to the field yet the concept has tended to disappear from the mainstream of cultural studies. In this book, John Storey presents an accessible and engaging critical analysis of a range of theoretical approaches to the study of utopia and, in doing so, reintroduces the concept of utopianism into cultural studies as an important and interesting object of study.

What Painting Is*James Elkins, Art Institute of Chicago, USA

In this classic text, James Elkins communicates the experience of painting beyond the traditional vocabulary of art history. Alchemy provides a magical language to explore what it is a painter really does in the studio—the smells, the mess, the struggle to control the uncontrollable, the special knowledge only painters hold of how colors will mix, and how they will look. Written from the perspective of a painter-turned-art historian, this anniversary edition includes a new introduction and preface by Elkins in which he further reflects on the experience of painting and its role in the study of art today.

The Iraq War in Documentary Film

Monica Michlin, Paris-Sorbonne University, France

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This book is the first comprehensive study of documentary film on the Iraq War. In a series of close readings of some thirty American and European works, it analyzes how documentaries on the run-up, unfolding, and aftermath of the war have adopted different points of view and aesthetics in order to address their publics. As diverse as the films studied here may be in their political perspective and forms of address, all of these works focus on the stories that were not being reported by the mainstream media as they unfolded, and reassert documentary's claim to telling and showing the truth about real-world events against a backdrop of other, more dominant narratives about war.

American Graffiti

George Lucas, the New Hollywood and the Baby Boom Generation

Peter Kramer

Series edited by Yannis Tzioumakis

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

Drawing on a wide range of archival sources, Peter Kramer explains how American Graffiti came into existence, paying close attention to the small-town upbringing and previous films of its director George Lucas. The book also explores the film's story, style and themes; its marketing, critical reception, commercial success and cultural impact in the United States; and relates all of this both to the transformation of American cinema in the late 1960s and early 1970s, and to the impact of the postwar baby-boom on American culture and society.

American Pie

The Anatomy of the Vulgar Teen Comedy

Bill Osgerby, London Metropolitan University, UK

Series edited by Yannis Tzioumakis

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

This book examines American Pie (1999), a film that exemplifies that most disparaged of movie genres – vulgar teen comedy. Taking American Pie as its focus, Bill Osgerby explores the nature and appeal of gloriously 'grossed out' teen humour. The book considers the relationship between American Pie's success and broad shifts within both the youth market and the film business; it analyses the movie's representations of youth, gender and sexuality; and it explores the distinctive character of the film's comedy and the enduring place of such humour in contemporary popular culture.

Black Women Filmmakers and Black Love on Screen

Brandale N. Mills, Norfolk State University, USA

Series: Routledge Transformations in Race and Media

This book offers a thorough analysis of how romantic love between Black men and women (referred to here as Black Love) is portrayed in Hollywood films, specifically from the perspective of Black female filmmakers. Using historical and contemporary images of Black female representation in the media as a foundation, the main themes of this text focus on the male gazes' influence on Hollywood narratives, the necessity for the Black female perspective in Hollywood, and that perspective's influence on ideologies and narratives.

Ethics, Justice, Embodiment, and Global Film

Cinematic Provocations

Brian Bergen-Aurand, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This book is a study in film and philosophy that explores the intersection of global post-fascist cinema, ethics and justice, and screen bodies. It addresses the question "What is the good of film experience?" by staging an encounter between Levinasian-Derridean concerns over ethics and justice and cinematic engagements with issues of embodied and haptic response. In the end, this book argues such international filmmaking provokes us to respond through a redeployment of our questions of ethics and justice as well as our questions of film making and experiencing.

Film Theories and Philosophies of Colour

The Residual Image

Elizabeth Watkins, University of Leeds, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

Watkins here draws together theoretical and philosophical debates about the nature of colour and their impact on film theories of spectatorship, subjectivity, perception, and sexual difference. She argues that colour, as a facet of design, film material, form, and perception, is both complicit and disruptive of a sexualised but disembodied gaze, to offer new theoretical and cinematic perspectives on feminine desire.

Found Footage Horror Films

A Cognitive Approach

Peter Turner, Oxford Brookes University, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This book adopts a cognitive theoretical framework to address the mental processes that are elicited and triggered by found footage horror films. Through analysis of key films, it explores the effects that the diegetic camera technique used in such films can have on the cognition of viewers. It further examines the way in which mediated realism is constructed in the films in order to attempt to make audiences either (mis)read the footage as non-fiction, or more commonly to imagine that the footage is non-fiction. Films studied include The Blair Witch Project, Rec, Paranormal Activity, Exhibit A, Cloverfield, Man Bites Dog, The Last Horror Movie and Zero Day.

Halloween

Youth Cinema and the Horrors of Growing Up

Mark Bernard, Siena Heights University, USA

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

John Carpenter's 1978 film Halloween, a landmark of American horror cinema, kick-started the slasher film cycle in the early 1980s. This book explores the multi-dimensional nature of "youth" in Halloween by looking at the film in relation to youth-focused horror films that came before and after it. The book also illustrates how the film offers complex portrayals not only of teenagers, but also pre-adolescents and young adults. After considering how the young people in Halloween compare to John Carpenter's early films, the book concludes with an overview of the Halloween franchise and the various ways it has appealed to youth audiences for the last forty years.

Andrew Scahill, Salisbury University, USA

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

Heavenly Creatures (1994), an early film by blockbuster director Peter Jackson, chronicles the true story of Pauline Parker and Juliet Hulme, two adolescent girls in 1954 New Zealand. In the film, the girls develop a deep romantic friendship based in shared fantasy, but their forced separation leads the pair to descend into madness and commit matricide. This book turns to feminist and queer theory, postcolonial theory, auteur analysis, apparatus theory, new media studies, and reception studies to seek to unpack the film's complex portrait of adolescent turmoil, rebellion, and tragedy.

Melancholy Emotion in Contemporary Cinema

A Spinozian Analysis of Film Experience

Francesco Sticchi

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

This book analyzes film experience through the lens of Baruch Spinoza's embodied philosophy. Parts One and Two are dedicated to a re-evaluation of contemporary cognitive and philosophical theories on the emotional and intellectual aspects of film experience. Part Three contains four case studies, films that challenge the viewer's emotional engagement since they display situations of cosmic failure and depict controversial and damaged characters: A Serious Man (2009); Melancholia (2011); The Act of Killing (2012); Only Lovers Left Alive (2013). Spinoza's philosophy allows us to appreciate and master sad passions and, at the same time, to show the conceptual power of film experience.

Narratives of Place in Literature and Film

Edited by Steven Allen, University of Winchester, UK and

Kirsten Møllegaard, University of Hawai'i at Hilo, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

Narratives of place link people and geographic location with a cultural imaginary through literature and visual narration. This interdisciplinary collection seeks to interrogate such connections to probe how place is narrativized in literature and film. Utilizing close readings of specific filmic and literary texts, all chapters serve to tease out cultural and historical meanings in respect of human engagement with landscapes. Always mindful of national, cultural and topographical specificity, the book is structured around five core themes: Contested Histories of Place; Environmental Landscapes; Cityscapes; The Social Construction of Place; and Landscapes of Belonging.

New Approaches to Cinematic Space

Edited by Filipa Rosário, University of Lisbon, Portugal and

Iván Villarmea Álvarez, Universidade de Santiago de Compostela, Spain

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

New Approaches to Cinematic Space aims to discuss the process of creation of cinematic spaces through moving images and the subsequent interpretation of their purpose and meaning.

Throughout seventeen chapters, this edited collection will attempt to identify and interpret the formal strategies used by different filmmakers to depict real or imaginary places and turn them into abstract, conceptual spaces. The contributors to this volume will specifically focus on a series of systems of representation that go beyond the mere visual reproduction of a given location to construct a network of meanings that ultimately shapes our spatial worldview.

Rock around the Clock

Exploitation, Rock 'n' roll and the Origins of Youth Culture

Yannis Tzioumakis, University of Liverpool, UK and Sian Lincoln

Series edited by Yannis Tzioumakis

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

Rock around the Clock examines one of the earliest films made specifically for young audiences in US cinema, paying particular attention to the exploitation film production company that made the film, the ways it represented young people, especially in terms of their association with rock 'n' roll music and culture, and the ways in which the film was received by the press of the time and by more contemporary critics.

Screening Characters

Characterization in Film, Television, and Interactive Media

Edited by Johannes Riis, University of Copenhagen, Denmark and Aaron Taylor

Series: AFI Film Readers

The contributors to Screening Characters draw on archival material, interviews, philosophical enquiry, and conceptual analysis in order to give a robust and multifaceted account of characterization in moving image fictions. Areas of investigation include the importance of performer and stars, the societal contexts of types, the constraints of the medium, the role of a specific genre and the question of emotional and moral engagement. Dedicated to a pluralistic account of fictional beings across different representational forms, this volume offers essential new approaches to the study of character in interactive media, television and film.

Stardom in Contemporary Global Hollywood

Andrew Dix, Loughborough University, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Film Studies

Tracking film performers from the United States, the Americas, Europe and the Pacific Rim, this book explores the varieties and meanings of contemporary Hollywood stardom as it has become increasingly deterritorialized. Each chapter assesses the economic significance of its chosen star, identifying his or her contribution to the extension and hegemony of what has been called 'global Hollywood,' while also studying the selections of roles, modes of performance and fashioning of personas. In this way, Dix analyzes how contemporary transnational stars have not only advanced the global remit of Hollywood cinema but have played a part in reconfiguring and even contesting Hollywood.

The Breakfast Club

John Hughes, Hollywood, and the Golden Age of the Teen Film

Elissa Nelson, University of California, Santa Barbara, USA

Series edited by Yannis Tzioumakis

Series: Cinema and Youth Cultures

The Breakfast Club is often classified as a quintessential teen film. The film spoke to the generation coming of age at during the 1980s with a story that got to the heart of the conflict between adults and young adults, that understood both the camaraderie and the pressures of peer groups, and that unabashedly dealt with teenagers as real people with real problems. With writer and director John Hughes' particular voice at the helm, the film capitalized on a culture already targeting the youth market, but by telling its tale from a youth perspective, was able to leave a lasting impression on both contemporary and present-day audiences.

The Routledge Companion to New Cinema History

Edited by Daniel Biltereyst, Richard Maltby, Flinders University, Australia and Philippe Meers, Antwerp Universiteit, Belgium

Series: Routledge Media and Cultural Studies Companions

The Routledge Companion to New Cinema History is conceived as a showcase of, as well as a reflection upon, recently emerging trends in investigating the history of cinema as a significant social and cultural institution. In its assessment of the wider historical conditions of the cinematic experience, the Companion argues that, alongside the study of film production, distribution and exhibition, a more serious understanding and specific research on film exhibition and reception are required. It brings together newly written essays by leading scholars from around the world addressing some of the most urgent theoretical and methodological issues for researching and studying film history.

World Literature, Transnational Cinema, and Global Media

Towards a Transartistic Commons

Robert Stam

In this new book, Robert Stam argues that key terms in literature, film, and media studies, such as "World Literature," "Transnational Cinema," and "Global Media" have become baggy-monster concepts, signifying everything and nothing. By asking a series of questions of these terms, drawing on a range of disciplines in the humanities (literature, philosophy, history), the social sciences (anthropology, political science, sociology), and the transdisciplines (cultural studies, ethnic studies, critical race studies, media studies, and gender studies) and by drawing on a range of media, this book demonstrates how to think and research transnationally, transdisciplinary and transtextually.

A Short History of Disruptive Journalism Technologies

1960-1990

Will Mari

Series: Disruptions

A Short History of Disruptive Journalism Technologies provides a swift analysis of the computerization of the newsroom, from the mid-1960s through to the early 1990s. It focuses on how word-processing and a number of related affordances, including mobile-reporting tools, impacted the daily work routines of American news workers. This book is an illuminating survey for students and instructors of journalism studies. It represents an important acknowledgement of the impact of pre-internet technological disruptions which led to the even more disruptive internet- and related computing technologies in the latter 1990s and through the present.

Citizen Journalism

Practices, Propaganda, Pedagogy

Melissa Wall

Series: Disruptions

Citizen Journalism explores citizen participation in the news as an evolving disruptive practice in digital journalism. The book offers an overview of the state of the field; exploring its interactions with professional journalism, production outside of traditional news structures and potential to create propaganda. Other forms of citizen participation in collecting and reporting information in non-journalism arenas are surveyed, demonstrating the capacity of large groups to collaborate to collect facts. The book highlights the importance of developing more sophisticated news literacy among citizen journalists, examining existing pedagogies and what citizen practitioners can gain from them.

Ethical Reporting of Sensitive Topics

Edited by Ann Luce

Reporting on sensitive issues such as suicide, sexual abuse or migration is a skill that is often glossed over in a journalist's education. This book will correct this oversight and help journalists to cover such stories in a responsible and ethical manner. A diverse set of contributors ground each chapter in research alongside case studies and best practice guidelines. Covering these events can also have a significant impact on journalists which the book addresses by discussing self-care and laying out a roadmap for journalists moving into the middle stages of their career and beyond.

Investigative Journalism, Democracy and the Digital Age

Andrea Carson, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

This book examines investigative journalism's role in liberal democracies in the past and in the digital age. In its ideal form, investigative reporting provides a check on power in society and therefore can strengthen democratic accountability. The political and economic environment for journalism has changed substantially in recent decades, and the commercialization of the Internet has disrupted the business model of traditional media outlets and the ways news content is gathered and disseminated. Despite these disruptions, this book's central aim is to demonstrate that investigative journalism is not in fact in decline in developed economies, as is often feared.

Journalism and Data

Tensions and intersections

Eddy Borges-Rey

Engagement with data has become increasingly embedded in standard journalism practices, such as newsgathering, analysis and packaging of news stories across all forms of media. Journalism and Data analyses where the practice of journalism sits in relation to today's data driven society. Eddy Borges-Rey highlights the interlinked and sometimes oppositional history of journalism and computation, and illuminates the diverse power dynamics negotiated through access to data from open and inaccessible sources. Journalism and Data instigates vital discussions on the role of data in shifting contemporary news values and assesses the democratic implications of a data-reliant journalism.

Reporting Inequality

Tools and Methods for Covering Race and Ethnicity

Venise Wagner, San Francisco State University, USA and Sally Lehrman, Santa Clara University, USA

Under increasingly intense newsroom demands, reporters often find it difficult to cover the complexity of topics that deal with racial and social inequality. This book makes covering inequity manageable by: showing how racially disparate outcomes in health, education, wealth/income, housing, and the criminal justice system are often the result of inequity in opportunity; providing theoretical frameworks for understanding the roots of racial inequity; offering tools to help journalists accurately portray the structural roots of racial inequity; and showcasing best practices and examples of model reporting on disparate outcomes, which will enhance community-based reporting.

Tech Giants, Artificial Intelligence, and the Future of Journalism

Jason Paul Whittaker, University of Lincoln, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

This book examines the impact of the so-called Big Five technology companies – Apple, Alphabet/Google, Amazon, Facebook and Microsoft – on the media landscape more generally and journalism in particular. It looks at the current role of algorithms and artificial intelligence in curating how we consume media and their increasing influence on the production of the news. The book considers what happens to journalism once it is produced and enters the media ecosystems of these tech giants – and the impact of social media and AI on such things as fake news in the post-truth age.

Understanding Citizen Journalism as Civic Participation

Seungahn Nah, University of Kentucky, USA and Deborah S. Chung, University of Kentucky, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

News audiences globally are posting comments, uploading photos and videos and writing news stories—sometimes individually but also together with professional journalists, playing a vital role in covering common interests, community issues and civic affairs. This book re-conceptualizes citizen journalism practice as civic participation and develops an integrative theoretical model to test factors driving citizen journalism, with particular emphasis on locality-based communications and communicative action contexts. This emphasis provides insights into why communities should work together to build civic communication infrastructures in order to create a more civically vibrant community.

The Rise of NonProfit Investigative Journalism in the United States

Bill Birnbauer, Monash University, Australia

Series: Routledge Research in Journalism

As battered news media struggled to survive in the United States, investigative reporting start-ups funded by foundations, billionaires and everyday citizens sprang up at the state and national level. This book examines the growth, impact and sustainability of not-for-profit investigative reporting and its impact on US democracy. It addresses key questions of the sustainability of foundation funding, the agendas of foundations, and the independence of philanthropically funded journalism.

Writing Feature Articles

Print, Digital and Online

Mary Hogarth

Writing Feature Articles presents clear and engaging advice on how to develop and grow your feature writing skills across multimedia platforms, as well as exploring and explaining the ideas, pitches and content which editors are seeking today. The book compares and contrasts writing features for print publication with writing for digital markets, showing the importance of promotion and engagement with social media. Drawing on interviews with key industry contacts, the book also foregrounds freelancing and business practices, highlighting the importance of good market and subject research and offering a range of end of chapter exercises and assignments to help readers develop their skills.

Amateur Media and Participatory Culture

Film, Video, and Digital Media

Annamaria Motrescu-Mayes, University of Cambridge, UK and Susan Aasman

Amateur Media: Histories, Theories and Strategies offers the first comprehensive examination of the rapidly developing field of amateur media studies. It will chart the theoretical and historical developments in amateur media culture, from the late 1890s home movies and colonial travelogues, to the mid-2010s vlogs, snapchats and mobile phone films of war and activist engagements. The books methodical and interdisciplinary approach will provide valuable insights regarding the ways in which visual experiences and memory experiences are currently shaped, stored and re-distributed across new media technologies and visual channels.

Media Accountability in the Era of Post-Truth Politics

European Challenges and Perspectives

Edited by Tobias Eberwein, Susanne Fengler and Matthias Karmasin

Series: Routledge Studies in European Communication Research and Education

The current discussions about 'fake news' and 'post-truth politics', the role of social bots and algorithms as well as other disruptive influences on journalistic communication leave no doubt that quality and responsibility of the media have – once again – turned into trending topics. As the integrity of the international media landscape is challenged by far-reaching transformations, the need for a functional system of media regulation is bigger than ever.

Neoliberalism and the Media

Edited by Marian Meyers

Covering a wide range of media and genres, and adopting a variety of qualitative textual methodologies and theoretical frameworks, the chapters examine diverse topics, from news coverage of the 2016 U.S. presidential election to "kitchen porn." The book also takes an intersectional approach, as contributors explore how gender, race, class and other aspects of social identity are inextricably tied to each other within media representation. At once innovative and distinctive in its illustration of how the media is complicit in perpetuating neoliberal ideology, this book offers students and scholars alike an incisive portrait of the intersection between media and ideology today.

Social Media Materialities and Protest

Critical Reflections

Edited by Mette Mortensen, University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Christina Neumayer, IT University of Copenhagen, Denmark and Thomas Poell, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

The central question for this edited volume is: How should we theorise the tension between activist agency and platforms' techno-commercial strategies? To address this question, it is vital to move beyond case study research, which typically focuses on a single social media platform during intense periods of protest in particular locations. This volume develops a more systematic exploration into the relationships between protest and social media materialities. The major challenge taken up by this volume is to trace how social media materialities shape these spatial, material, and temporal relationships.

A Theory of Communication and Justice

Klaus Bruhn Jensen, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

The central aim of the book is to refocus attention on the end of communication – its translation into locally as well as globally coordinated agreements, solutions, and actions. Communication serves to manage extreme cognitive and cultural complexities for endless practical purposes. Communication typically comes with a deadline, imposed on communicators by their natural and social circumstances. Ideally, having been enlightened and empowered through communication, individuals, groups, institutions, and entire societies and cultures go on to act. The end of communication is to act.

Data Journalism and the Regeneration of News

Alfred Hermida and Mary Lynn Young

Series: Disruptions

Data Journalism and the Regeneration of News looks at the impact of disruptive digital innovations, such as Facebook and Twitter, on contemporary journalism; making the case that developments in data journalism are key to emergent journalistic practice. This study draws on three years of research, including interviews, visits to newsrooms, analysis of data journalism curricula and award submissions. Based on this research, disruptive innovation is examined more critically; deconstructing the discourse of disruption and understanding innovative capacity in this domain. The authors conclude by highlighting the potential costs of free tools and non-human actors on the future of news.

Reconstructing Journalism Norms

David Domingo

Reconstructing Journalism Norms analyses the evolution of the principles that define the role of journalism in society and how they are challenged by changes in the cultural, political and economic landscape. David Domingo explores conceptual issues relating to journalism's social purpose, such as the construction of journalistic norms, the impact of digital practices, and opportunities to reconstruct ideas of journalism's role through theoretical and practical challenges. Related critical debates are also investigated, including the political-economy of journalism, the dispersion of news production, and the role of journalism in politics, and citizens in journalism.

The Routledge Companion to Media Technology and Obsolescence

Edited by Mark J.P. Wolf, Concordia University Wisconsin, USA

Series: Routledge Media and Cultural Studies Companions

While so many books on technology look at new advances and digital technologies, the Routledge Companion to Obsolete and Vanishing Media Technology looks back at analog technologies that are disappearing, considering their demise and what it says about media history, pop culture, and the nature of nostalgia. From card catalogs and typewriters to stock tickers and cathode ray tubes, contributors examine the legacy of analog technologies, including those, like vinyl records, that may be experiencing a resurgence. Each essay includes a brief history of the technology leading up to its peak, an analysis of the reasons for its decline, and a discussion of its influence on newer technologies.

Transformation of Chinese Newspaper Companies

Management, Production and Administration

Miao Huang, Post-doctor Researcher, the Journalism School of Renmin University of China, Beijing

Series: Chinese Perspectives on Journalism and Communication

This book focuses on the transformation of Chinese newspaper companies in aspects of managerial strategies, newsroom practices and interactions with national policies. The comparative case study of two publishers comprises empirical evidence from editors, editor-in-chiefs, commercial staff, managers, technicians and scholarly experts. Locating in the intersection of media management, journalism and media policy, its analytical devices include differing but related theories. With the primary data and integrated theoretical frameworks, the primary argument is that the transformation is oriented to the Internet market, which is a consensus of newspaper practitioners and government administrators.

2nd Edition

Youth Culture and the Media

Global Perspectives

Bill Osgerby, London Metropolitan University, UK

This introductory text traces the development of contemporary youth culture and its relationship with the media. From the days of diners, drive-ins and jukeboxes, to today's world of iPads and Twitter, Bill Osgerby examines youth media in its economic, cultural and political contexts.

Analyzing the nature of different forms of communication as well as reviewing their production and consumption, this is an essential introduction to this key area in communication and cultural studies.

This second edition has been updated to include coverage of social media, smart phones, current internet usage, tablet computers and new forms of accessing culture such as Spotify, YouTube, Facebook and Twitter.

Understanding Media Production

Paul Dwyer

Understanding Media Production explores the links between economic, socio-political and cultural practices in the development of media production, and grounds the historical development of different television and film formats in shifts in production practices. Paul Dwyer presents a wide range of case studies examining different media products from blockbuster movies to TV news reports to propose new theoretical approaches integrating the cultural and industrial aspects of media production. The study bridges gaps between academic theory and industry practice and explains how media production systems develop, how and why they change, and what this means for the future.

World Comics

The Basics

Frederick Aldama

Series: The Basics

World Comics: The Basics approaches the history of comic books as a global one, one that includes the physical transmigration of artists and their styles and worldviews from one place to another, and increasingly includes the active participation of creators and editors in the publishing and translating of comic books across time, languages, cultures and communities. In this accessible guide, Aldama demonstrates that while each country has its own particular comics tradition such as Franco-Belgian bande dessinées, Japanese manga, Latin American historietas, German comicbuch, Filipino komiks, Korean manhwa, and Chinese lianhuanhua, among others.

Digital Media and Risk Culture in China's Financial Markets

Zhifei Mao, The Chinese University of Hong Kong
Series: Routledge Research in Digital Media and Culture in Asia
 This book analyzes the risk cultures in China that have emerged from the entanglement of new communication technologies and financial markets, examining the role that digital media play in Asian modernity and offering an alternative narrative to that of the West. The book illustrates the impact of exclusively Asian digital media on power dynamics within risk definition, arguing that such digital media empower individuals, enabling them to compete with an expert-oriented risk culture controlled by Government- and banker-led media outlets.

Digital Media, Sharing, and Everyday Life

Jenny Kennedy, RMIT University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in New Media and Cyberculture

Sharing is an important form of communication, and one that is championed in contemporary digital culture. This book asks what is sharing, and what roles do our digital devices and the platforms we use such as Facebook and Twitter play in these practices? Drawing on original empirical data, this timely book reveals detailed descriptions of the symbolic processes of sharing in digital culture and the complexities that arise in them. It draws out the relationship of sharing to privacy and control, the laboured strategies and boundaries of reciprocation, and our relationships with the technologies which mediate sharing practices.

Media Piracy in the Cultural Economy

Intellectual Property and Labor Under Neoliberal Restructuring

Gavin C. Mueller, The University of Texas at Dallas, USA

Series: Routledge Focus on Digital Media and Culture

Media piracy--the production, distribution and consumption of media texts in violation of intellectual property laws--has become an endemic feature of the cultural economy since the rise of the internet. This book situates piracy as a symptom of a restructuring of cultural labor in the era of the internet: labor that is digital, entrepreneurial, informal and even illegal, and increasingly politicized. Sketching the contours of this new political economy while engaging with theories of digital media, both critical and celebratory, Mueller reveals piracy as a submerged social history of the digital world, and potentially the key to its political reimagining.

Mediatized Religion in Asia

Studies on Digital Media and Religion

Edited by Kerstin Radde-Antweiler, University of Bremen, Germany and Xenia Zeiler, University of Helsinki, Finland
Series: Routledge Research in Digital Media and Culture in Asia

This edited volume discusses mediatized religion in Asia, examining the intensity and variety of constructions and processes related to digital media and religion in Asia today. Individual chapters present case studies from various regions and religious traditions in Asia, critically discussing the data collected in light of current mediatization theories. By directing the study to the geographical, cultural and religious contexts specific to Asia, it also provides new material for the theoretical discussion of the pros and cons of the concept mediatization, among other things interrogating whether this concept is useful in non-'Western' contexts."

Producing Masculinity

The Internet, Gender, and Sexuality

Michele White, Tulane University, USA

In this book Michele White explores the ways normative masculinity is associated with computers and the Internet and is a commonly enacted online gender practice. Through close readings and a series of case studies that range from wedding forums to men's makeup video tutorials, White considers the ways masculinities are structured through people's collaborations and contestations over the establishment of empowered positions, including debates about such key terms and positions as "the nice guy," "nerd," "bro," and "groom." A counterpart to her earlier book, Producing Women, White has crafted an excellent primer for scholars of gender, media, and Internet studies.

The Discursive Power of Memes in Digital Culture

Semiotics, Intertextuality, and Ideology

Bradley E. Wiggins, Webster University, Austria

Series: Routledge Studies in New Media and Cyberculture

This book explores cases of consumer activism and cultural, economic, and political critique levied by the purposeful production and consumption of internet memes. Often images, animated GIFs, or videos are remixed in such a way to incorporate intertextual references, quite frequently to popular culture, alongside a joke or critique of some aspect of the human experience. The book argues that memes therefore have a generative capacity for new forms of meaning-making, treating them as discursive units of digital culture whose authorship is less important than their ability to be rapidly spread, consumed, remixed, and iterated further.

Viral Structures in Literature and Digital Media

Networked Counterpublics and Participatory Capitalism

Kim Brillante Knight, The University of Texas at Dallas, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Digital Humanities

This book examines the ways digital networks facilitate new dissemination models for information, texts, and amateur media by tracing the proliferation of "viral structures." Knight examines how viral structures are affected by, or can affect, the relationship between powerful institutions and the subjects of network society, arguing that though the viral structure opens up space for participation by media makers from underrepresented groups, the disruptive possibilities of this space are tempered by the pre-existing media models of control society. She combines close reading of texts with analysis of data patterns, and chapters two through four have accompanying digital companions.

Batman and the Multiplicity of Identity

The Contemporary Comic Book Superhero as Cultural Nexus

Jeffrey A. Brown, Bowling Green State University, USA
Series: Routledge Advances in Comics Studies

Concentrating primarily on contemporary depictions of Batman in the comic books, this book analyzes why Batman is so immensely popular right now in America and globally, and how the fictional Dark Knight reveals both new cultural concerns and longstanding beliefs about American values. While Batman is perceived as a very clearly defined character, he is open to a wide range of interpretations and depictions in the comics. The idea of Batman functions as an anchoring point out of which multiple Batmen, or Batman-like characters, can occupy different positions, each opening up a discussion of different cultural issues, such as sexuality, ethnicity, femininity and familial relationships.

Climate Change and Popular Culture

Angi Buettner, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

This book examines how the climate change debate is represented, dealt with, narrated and more generally plays out within the field, texts and genres of the commercial media. Understanding the importance of environmental representations, narratives and discourses for our perceptions of the environment is a vital part of explaining the evolution of political responses to climate change. The book gives an account of the sciences' attempts at communicating climate change to the public, as well as of the relationship between media representations of climate change issues and how this might tie in to or inform political action.

Immigrants and Comics

Graphic Spaces of Remembrance, Transaction, and Mimesis

Edited by Nhora Lucía Serrano, Hamilton College, USA

Series: Routledge Advances in Comics Studies

This interdisciplinary, themed anthology focuses on the depiction of immigrants in cartoons, comics, and graphic novels across diverse cultures and time periods, as they navigate new socio-political milieus. It seeks to interrogate how immigration is portrayed in comics and how the "immigrant" was an indispensable and vital trope to the development of the comics medium in the twentieth century.

Superhero Bodies

Edited by Wendy Haslem, University of Melbourne, Australia, Elizabeth MacFarlane, University of Melbourne, Australia and Sarah Richardson, University of Melbourne, Australia

Series: Routledge Advances in Comics Studies

Throughout the history of the genre, the superhero has been characterized primarily by physical transformation and physical difference. This volume attends to the physicality of superheroes: the transformative bodies of superheroes, the superhero's position in urban and natural spaces, the dialectic between the superhero's physical and metaphysical self, and the superhero body's relationship with violence. It examines how ideologies of race, gender and disability are signified or destabilized in the physicality of the superhero and presents an exploration of superheroes across multiple media forms including comics, film, television, literature and the graphic novel.

Unplugging Popular Culture

K. Shannon Howard, Auburn University Montgomery, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Cultural and Media Studies

This book showcases youth and young adult characters from film and television who defy the stereotype of the "digital native" or unquestioning devotee to technology. Unplugged tools, or non-digital tools, do not necessitate a ban on technology or a refusal to acknowledge its affordances, but work instead to highlight the ability of fictional characters to move from high tech settings to low tech ones. By repurposing everyday materials, characters model the process of reusing and upcycling existing materials in innovative ways. In studying examples such as Pitch Perfect, Stranger Things, and Get Out, the book aims to make theories surrounding materiality apparent within popular culture.

Urban Comics

Infrastructure and the Global City in Contemporary Graphic Narratives

Dominic Davies, City, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Advances in Comics Studies

Urban Comics: Infrastructure and the Global City in Contemporary Graphic Narratives makes an important and timely contribution both to comics studies and urban studies, offering a decolonisation and reconfiguration of both of these already interdisciplinary fields. With chapter-length discussions of comics from cities such as Cairo, Cape Town, New Orleans, Delhi and Beirut, this book shows how artistic collectives and urban social movements working across the global South are producing some of the most exciting and formally innovative graphic narratives of the contemporary moment.

Gender and Race in Postwar Variety Television

Colorful Performance

Meenasarani Linde Murugan, Fordham University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Gender, Sexuality, and Media

This book looks at how variety television articulated a cosmopolitanism that served to expand televisual constructions of gender and race in the postwar period, demonstrating how the entertaining of racial and ethnic identities by white variety show hosts was achieved through the featuring of people of color, musical performances, and representations of travel—simulated and actual. The emphasis on variety show performances reveals the transnational cultural flows at work in song choice, staging, and costume design. Through an analysis of industrial and press discourse as well as television programs this project situates the history US television in a global and transnational context.

Journalism, Gender and Power

Edited by Cynthia Carter, Linda Steiner and Stuart Allan

Journalism, Gender and Power revisits key themes explored in the 1998 book News, Gender and Power, updating and expanding upon the original publication's approach to cover issues of gender and power across the breadth of the contemporary mediascape. This new volume presents a range of new critical voices to provide a more global perspective on technological developments in traditional and new media. Contributors chart the impact of emerging protest movements and explore gender and power in the reporting of broader social issues. Areas include immigration, sex trafficking and cyberfeminism in a range of cultural settings, including in Arabic, Chinese and Muslim contexts.

Rethinking Television Formats

A New Theory from the Margin

Sharon Shahaf, Georgia State University, USA

Series: Routledge Advances in Internationalizing Media Studies

Over the last two decades television formats have been at the crux of a transformation in global television. One of the most notable changes is the rise of small players in locations that were marginalized and isolated in the "old world" of television. Reformatting Global Television focuses on the unlikely Israeli turn of fortune in the era of the global format to tell an alternative story about the very nature of formats. In tracing Israeli television's rise to be a leader in designing and distributing globally tradable innovative televisual concepts, this book explores deeper reasons that allowed formats to radically transform long held hierarchies in the global television system.

Series: Audio Engineering Society Presents

Written by an expert, this book is a rigorous, comprehensive guide to interactive audio runtime systems. Packed with practical examples and insights, the book explains each component of these complex geometries of sound. Using practical, lowest-common-denominator techniques, it covers soundfield creation across a range of platforms from phones through to VR gaming consoles. Whether creating an audio system from scratch or building on existing frameworks, the book also explains costs, benefits, and priorities. Interactive audio in the dynamic simulated world of games is becoming almost as complicated as the real world of sound. This book will explain how and why to tame it enjoyably.

Building a Band in the Bedroom

Creating a Record at Home with Real Instruments

Joe Lonsdale, Joe Public Studios

Series: Sound On Sound Presents...

Building the Band in the Bedroom aims to help the typical home music producer create the sound of a real band in a home-based recording studio, even though they may be working alone and not have the facilities or musical skills to handle the elements themselves. It will lead the reader through the process of taking a raw song idea through a finished, impressive, mixed and mastered record within the confines of a typical home or project studio and within a self-funded budget. The book is accompanied by online video tutorials to demonstrate some of the described processes. All the recordings and audio created for this project are available online for you to download and experiment with.

Foundations of Sound Design for Linear Media

An Interdisciplinary Approach

Michael Filimowicz, School of Interactive Arts and Technology, Simon Fraser University

This textbook presents a comprehensive overview of sound design for linear media. The book covers traditional topics in audiovisual pre- through post-production, plus topics like scoring for dance, electronica music production, basic music theory for sound designers, composition, and much more. The book contains contributions from leaders in the field. And, a companion website to the book offers an extensive coursepack with media examples and links, lab activities, skill building exercises and projects, downloadable code and project files, and instructional references.

Intelligent Music Production

A Theoretical Overview

Joshua Reiss, Centre for Digital Music, Queen Mary University of London, Ryan Stables, Digital Media Technology Lab, Birmingham City University and Brecht De Man

In audio engineering, one typically has many different recordings of sound sources, each one represented on a separate track. These tracks need to be heard simultaneously in the final audio mixture. Audio production is time consuming and requires a complex set of creative and technical skills. This book provides insight into areas of ambiguity, and attempts to provide computational models of these inherently complex subjective processes. The book details a full range of intelligent music production systems, and will provide readers with demos and examples, including a repository of links, code snippets, and software tools for incorporation of the techniques into their workflow.

Introducing Psychoacoustics

A Practical Guide to the Science of Psychoacoustics and its Applications in Sound and Music

Hyunkook Lee and Duncan Williams

Series: Audio Engineering Society Presents

Introducing Psychoacoustics is a practical guide to the science of psychoacoustics and its applications in sound and music. Using a classroom-tested presentation and reader-friendly writing style, the book is divided into two parts. The first presents an introduction to psychoacoustic theory, and the second features a series of applications and case studies intended to illustrate these theoretical concepts. Through these applications and case studies, readers will also acquire the knowledge to both design and undertake their own psychoacoustic evaluations.

Principles of Game Audio and Sound Design

Sound Design and Audio Implementation for Interactive and Immersive Media

Jean-Luc Sinclair, New York University, Berklee College of Music

The book covers sound design, synthesis, 3D audio localization and implementation techniques for games and virtual reality environments. It covers both the technical but also creative and aesthetic challenges of doing sound for games in the 21st century in a systematic manner. Scripting is introduced as a means to deal with potential challenges in game audio: sample selection randomization, sample concatenation, footsteps, collision detection, etc. Sound design is covered both from a practical and larger standpoint. A companion website is offered with extra resources such as fx, scripts, game levels, tutorials, and related links.

Producing Music

Edited by Russ Hepworth-Sawyer, Mastering Engineer (MOTTOsound), Producer, Consultant. Senior Lecturer - York St John University, UK, Jay Hodgson, Mastering Engineer (MOTTOsound) and Professor at Western University, Ontario, Canada and Mark Marrington, York St John University, UK

Series: Perspectives on Music Production

During the last two decades, the field of music production has attracted considerable interest from the academic community, more recently becoming established as an important and flourishing research discipline in its own right. This book presents cutting edge research across topics that both strengthen and broaden the range of the discipline as it currently stands. Focusing on areas such as genre, technology, concepts and contexts of production, Hepworth-Sawyer, Hodgson and Marrington have compiled key research from practitioners and academics to present a comprehensive view of how music production has established itself and changed over the years.

Recording Analysis

How the Recording Shapes the Song

William Moylan, Chairperson, Department of Music at the University of Massachusetts Lowell

What do the sonic dimensions of recordings contribute to music? How can the recording process be used to enhance the scope, meaning, and musical qualities of a song? In Recording Analysis: How the Recording Shapes the Song William Moylan combines a close study of recording methods with musical analysis to provide tools for deepening a song's purpose and substance. Readers will explore the qualities of timbral balance, sound staging, performance intensity, loudness levels, examples from popular music, and more to learn how recording engineers can develop the fabric of songs, craft a sense of variety and purpose across a record, and encourage musical innovation in the studio.

The Art of Mixing

A Visual Guide to Recording, Engineering, and Production

David Gibson

This popular textbook uses a patented visual framework to explain how to create a great mix. The visuals demonstrate how sound moves through the room between speakers and how it can be manipulated by adjusting the equipment. A full range of technical concepts are covered in an accessible way so that even a beginner can follow; and different musical styles are incorporated into discussions. Once the reader gets the visual framework of the space down, it's easier to gain control of the sound aurally and to make mixes that have real, emotional dynamics. The new edition brings material up-to-date and comes with a 3 hour visual tutorial online.

The Art of Producing

How to Create Great Audio Projects

David Gibson and Maestro B Curtis

This book tells you everything you need to know about becoming a producer. It explains the role of the producer across executive, musical, and engineering job types so you know what to expect, and it also covers how to sell yourself as a producer within different working environments. The book includes a nuts-and-bolts guide to analysing music from the pre-production standpoint including a special emphasis on the creative process, as well as explaining in technical detail what happens once the music hits the studio. This book also covers essentials like finance and copyright. Written in a fun and accessible way, the text includes lots of visuals and checklists to aid the reader.

Basic Cinematography

A Creative Guide to Visual Storytelling

Kurt Lancaster, Digital filmmaker, Multimedia producer, Northern Arizona University, USA

The cinematographer must translate the ideas and emotions contained in a script into something that can be physically seen and felt onscreen, helping the director to fulfil the vision of the film. The shots may look good, but they will not serve the story until the composition, lenses, and lighting express, enhance, and reveal the underlying emotions and subtext of the story. Rather than delve into technical training, Basic Cinematography helps to train the eye and heart of cinematographers as visual storytellers, providing them with a strong foundation for their work, so that they're ready with creative ideas and choices on set in order to make compelling images that support the story.

Creating Dialogue for TV

Screenwriters Talk Television

Monika Bednarek, The University of Sydney, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Media Theory and Practice

As entertaining as it is enlightening, Creating Dialogue for TV: Screenwriters Talk Television presents interviews with five Hollywood professionals who talk about all things related to dialogue – from naturalistic style to the building of characters to swearing and dialect. It provides direct insights into Hollywood writers' knowledge and opinions of how language is used in television narratives, and in doing so shows how language awareness, attitudes and the craft of using words are utilised to create popular TV series. The book will appeal to students and teachers in screenwriting, creative writing and linguistics as well as lay readers.

Independent Female Filmmakers

A Chronicle through Interviews, Profiles, and Manifestos

Edited by Michele Meek, Bridgewater State University, USA

This book collects original and previously-published essays, interviews, and manifestos from some of the most defining and ground-breaking independent female filmmakers of the last 40 years. Featuring material from the seminal magazine The Independent Film and Video Monthly—a leading publication for independent filmmakers for several decades as well as new interviews conducted with the filmmakers specifically for this book, Michele Meek presents a unique perspective into the ethnically and culturally diverse voices of women filmmakers integral to independent film history from the 1970s to the present, spanning narrative, documentary, and experimental film.

Reading and Writing a Screenplay

Fiction, Documentary and New Media

Isabelle Raynauld, University of Montreal, Canada

Reading and Writing a Screenplay takes you on a journey through the many possible ways of writing, reading and imagining fiction and documentary projects for cinema, television, and new media. It explores the critical role of a script as a document to be written and read with both future readers and the future film it will be giving life to in mind. This title offers an alternative, thought-provoking and inspiring approach to reading and writing a screenplay that is ideal for screenwriters, students and aspiring screenwriters, and readers interested in understanding how an effective screenplay is created.

The Filmmaker's Eye: The Language of the Lens

The Power of Lenses and the Expressive Cinematic Image

Gustavo Mercado, Independent filmmaker, Professor in Hunter College's Film & Media Studies Department, New York, NY, USA

While some cinematography books touch on the use of different lenses, this is the first book to treat the topic with the breadth it commands. The Filmmaker's Eye: The Language of the Lens shows readers in a visually-stunning way how crucial lens selection is to the design and intentions of a filmmaker's visual story. Scenes from a wide range of movies are shown in 4-color, and then broken down to convey what lens was used, why it was used, and how the reader can use that lens on their own film to achieve the look, story, and emotions they seek.

The Marketing Edge for Filmmakers

Developing a Marketing Mindset from Concept to Release

Russell Schwartz, Chapman University, USA and Katherine MacDonald, Paramount Pictures, USA

Series: American Film Market Presents

Many filmmakers believe that marketing begins when they hand over the finished film, but the truth is that every creative decision from concept to release will impact a movie's marketability. Written for filmmakers, directors, producers and screenwriters, The Marketing Edge for Filmmakers walks through every stage of the production process—from idea to post-production—and illustrates how creative decisions at each stage impact the marketability of a film. In the second part of the book, marketing experts Schwartz and MacDonald track four films of different budgets (studio, independent, and documentary) through the marketing process, from 12 months prior to release through opening week.

Typography and Motion Graphics: The 'Reading-Image'

Michael Betancourt, Savannah College of Art and Design, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Media Theory and Practice

In his latest book, Michael Betancourt explores the nature and role of typography in motion graphics as a way to consider its distinction from static design, using the concept of the 'reading-image' to model the ways that motion typography dramatizes the process of reading and audience recognition of language on-screen. Moving beyond title sequences, Betancourt also analyzes moving or kinetic typography in logo designs, commercials, film trailers, and information graphics, offering a striking theoretical model for understanding typography in media.

Big Data in Small Slices

Analysis and Visualization for Journalists and Communications Professionals

Dianne M. Finch, Elon University, USA

This book covers data vetting and visualization in a vernacular designed for the communications professional – replacing the usual geeky jargon and code lists with context and meaningful data sets. Each chapter serves as a case study on a different professional: an economist, a government budget manager, a public health official and an environmental scientist. By shadowing people who create and provide data to the public, readers will learn how data is vetted and why the grunt work of cleaning, filtering and vetting is essential to any visualization. The final chapter provides exercises for self-training or use in classes and the companion website provides data sets discussed in the book.

The Handmade Silver Gelatin Emulsion Print

Creating Your Own Liquid Emulsions for Black & White Paper

Denise Ross, Editor, The Light Farm

Series: Contemporary Practices in Alternative Process Photography

Silver gelatin photographic materials were the backbone of mainstream photography for a century before the development of digital photography. This book is a cookbook of lessons that start with the simplest, basic recipes for making black and white printing paper and then builds on these to create more complex emulsions, including techniques and processes that incorporate handmade paper. Combining the look and creative potential of traditional black and white printing with contemporary techniques, handmade silver gelatin emulsions offer an artist more control over the process and the end product.
