Challenging the New Atheism

Pragmatic Confrontations in the Philosophy of Religion

Aaron Pratt Shepherd, University of Massachusetts at Lowell, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

This book presents a pragmatic response to arguments against religion made by the New Atheism movement. The author argues that analytic and empirical philosophies of religion are methodologically unequipped to address the "Threefold Challenge" made by New Atheist thinkers. He assesses and responds to these claims by elaborating four philosophical perspectives—analytic philosophy, empirical philosophy, continental philosophy, and pragmatism—as well as contextualizing these perspectives in the history of the philosophy of religion. The author settles upon a modified version of pragmatism that he concludes is best suited for articulating the terms and stakes of the God Debate.

Philosophy by Women

22 Philosophers Reflect on Philosophy and Its Value

Edited by Elly Vintiadis

What is philosophy, why does it matter, and how would it be different if women wrote more of it? At a time when the importance of philosophy, and the humanities in general, is being questioned and at a time when the question of gender equality is a huge public question, 22 women in philosophy lay out in this book how they think of philosophy, what they actually do and how that is applied to actual problems. By bringing together accounts of the personal experiences of women in philosophy, this book provides a new understanding of the ways in which the place of women in philosophy has changed in recent decades while also introducing the reader to the nature and the value of philosophy.

Philosophy of Sculpture

Historical Problems, Contemporary Approaches

Edited by Kristin Gjesdal, Temple University, Fred Rush, Notre Dame University, USA and Ingvald Torsen, University of Oslo, Norway

Series: Routledge Research in Aesthetics

Sculpture has been a central aspect of almost every art culture. This volume comprises thirteen essays at the cutting edge of thinking about sculpture in philosophical terms, representing approaches to sculpture from the perspectives of both Anglo-American and European philosophy. Some of the essays are historically situated, while others are more straightforwardly conceptual. All of the essays, however, pay strict attention to actual sculptural examples in their discussions. This reflects the overall aim of the volume to not merely "apply" philosophy to sculpture, but rather to test the philosophical approaches taken in tandem with deep analyses of sculptural examples.

4th Edition

Philosophy through Film

Mary M. Litch, Chapman University, USA and Amy Karofsky

Uses recent popular films to explore answers to classic questions in philosophy in an approachable yet philosophically rigorous manner. Each chapter incorporates two or three films to examine one longstanding philosophical question or problem and assess some of the best solutions that have been offered to it. The authors fully integrate the films into their discussion of the issues, using them to help students become familiar with key topics in all major areas of Western philosophy and master the techniques of philosophical argumentation. Also includes an appendix of primary sources, which are fully integrated into the discussion.

Radically Rethinking Copyright in the Arts

A Philosophical Approach

James O. Young

Series: Routledge Research in Aesthetics

This book radically rethinks the philosophical basis of copyright in the arts. The author reflects on the ontology of arts to argue that current copyright laws cannot be justified. The book begins by identifying two problems that result from current copyright laws: 1) creativity is restricted and 2) they primarily serve the interests of large corporations over the artists and general public. Against this background, the author presents an account of the ontology of artworks and explains what metaphysics can tell us about ownership in the arts and makes a moral argument that copyright terms should be shorter and that corporations should not own copyrights.

The Development Trajectory of Eastern Societies

Zhao Jiaxiang and Xiaolu An

Series: China Perspectives

This four volume collection re-examines Marx and Engels' theories of the development trajectory of Eastern societies by combining discussions of theory and practice. Pointing out the guiding significance of five aspects of the basic principles of Marxism for studying how Eastern societies develop, this volume interrogates various assumptions that have prevailed in academia, addresses unexplained topics and offers insight into the understanding of these basic principles. The result is a penetrating and specific understanding of Marxist basic principles and the development trajectory of Eastern societies.

Epistemic Duties

New Arguments, New Angles

Edited by Kevin McCain, University of Alabama at Birmingham, USA and Scott Stapleford, St. Thomas University, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology

This book features a wide variety of positions, ranging from arguments for and against the existence of purely epistemic requirements, reductions of epistemic requirements to moral or prudential requirements, the biological foundations of epistemic requirements, extensions of the scope of epistemic requirements to include such things as open-mindedness, eradication of implicit bias and interpersonal duties to object, to new applications such as epistemic requirements pertaining to storytelling, testimony and fundamentalist beliefs. Anyone interested in the nature of responsibility, belief or epistemic normativity will find a range of useful arguments and fresh ideas in this book.

Ethno-Epistemology

New Directions for Global Epistemology

Edited by Masaharu Mizumoto, Japan Advanced Institute of Science and Technology, Jonardon Ganeri, New York University, Abu Dhabi and Cliff Goddard, Griffith University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology

This volume features new perspectives on the implications of cross-linguistic and cultural diversity for epistemology. It brings together philosophers, linguists, and scholars working on knowledge traditions to advance work in epistemology that moves beyond the Anglophone sphere. Ethno-Epistemology is an essential resource for philosophers working in epistemology and comparative philosophy, as well as linguists and cultural anthropologists interested in the cultural-linguistic diversity of knowledge traditions.

The Dispositional Architecture of Epistemic Reasons

Hamid Vahid, Institute for Research in Fundamental Sciences, Iran

Series: Routledge Studies in Epistemology

This book is concerned with the conditions under which epistemic reasons provide justification for beliefs. It draws on metaethical theories of reasons and normativity and then applies his theory to various contemporary debates in epistemology. The author defends a dispositional account of how propositional and doxastic justification are related to one another. He examines how his theory of epistemic reasons influences perceptual reasons. Finally, he applies his dispositional framework to epistemological topics including the structure of defeat, self-knowledge, reasoning, emotions and motivational internalism.

Vice Epistemology

Edited by Ian James Kidd, University of Nottingham, UK, Heather Battaly, University of California, Fullerton, USA and Quassim Cassam, University of Warwick, UK

Human behaviors involve vices of the mind such as arrogance, closed-mindedness, dogmatism, gullibility, intellectual cowardice, as well as wishful or conspiratorial thinking. What sorts of things are epistemic vices? How do these vices prevent us from acquiring knowledge and what is their role in sustaining patterns of ignorance?

This book seeks to answer these important questions and more. Chapters explore the nature of epistemic vices, and case studies in applied vice epistemology, including education and politics. Essential reading for students of ethics, epistemology, and virtue theory, and various areas of applied, feminist, and social philosophy.

A Debate on God and Morality

What is the Best Account of Objective Moral Values and Duties?

William Lane Craig, Erik J. Wielenberg and Adam Lloyd Johnson

Philosophers William Lane Craig and Erik J. Wielenberg debate whether theism or secularism provides the best account of objective moral values and duties. Across four exchanges, Craig argues that theism provides a sound foundation for objective morality that atheism does not, and Wielenberg counters that morality can be objective without God. Written for a live debate, the arguments are supplemented here with extended endnote discussion, plus post-debate reflections from both participants. There are also five essay responses to the debate, from J. P. Moreland, David Baggett, Mark Linville, Wes Morriston, and Michael Huemer.

Exploring the Philosophy of Death and Dying

Classical and Contemporary Perspectives

Michael Cholbi and Travis Timmerman

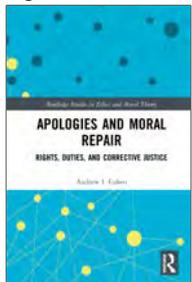

This is the first book to offer students the full breadth of philosophical issues that are raised by the end of life. The 38 chapters include both classic texts (by authors such as Epicurus, Hume, Nietzsche, and Schopenhauer) and new short argumentative essays by world-leading contemporary experts. It introduces students to both theoretical issues (whether we survive death, whether death is bad for us, whether immortality would be desirable, etc.) and practical (the ethics of suicide, the value of grief, criteria for declaring death, etc.). PowerPoints and test questions available online.

Apologies and Moral Repair

Rights, Duties, and Corrective Justice

Andrew I. Cohen, Georgia State University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This book argues that justice often governs apologies. Drawing on examples from literature, politics, and current events, Cohen presents a theory of apology as corrective offers. Many leading accounts of apology say much about what apologies do and why they are important. They stop short of exploring whether and how justice governs apologies. Cohen argues that corrective justice may require apologies as offers of reparation. Individuals, corporations, and states may then have rights or duties regarding apology. By casting rights and duties of apology as justifiable to free and equal persons, the book advances conversations about how liberalism may respond to historic injustice.

John Dewey's Ethical Theory

The 1932 Ethics

Edited by Roberto Frega, French National Center for Scientific Research and Steven Levine, University of Massachusetts Boston, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

This book provides a wide-ranging, systematic, and comprehensive approach to the moral philosophy of John Dewey. It features contributions by some of the most influential Dewey scholars from North America and Europe. Part I provides a running commentary on the chapters of the 1932 Ethics written by Dewey. Part II interprets the Ethics and demonstrates its contemporary relevance and vitality. The essays in this part situate the Ethics in the broader interpretive frameworks of Dewey's philosophy, American pragmatism, and 20th-century moral theory at large.

Cultivating Our Passionate Attachments

Matthew J. Dennis, TU Delft, Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This book offers a theory of how we can actively cultivate our passionate attachments. The author argues that not only do we have reason to view passionate attachments as susceptible to growth, change, and improvement, but we should view these entities as amenable to self-cultivation. He uses Hadot's and Foucault's accounts of Hellenistic self-cultivation to formulate a theory of cultivating our passionate attachments. Doing this brings out a significantly new dimension to the role of the passionate attachments in the flourishing life and offers theoretical and practical accounts of how we can cultivate them based on the Hellenistic conception of self-directed character change.

Kantian and Sidgwickian Ethics

The Cosmos of Duty Above and the Moral Law Within

Edited by Tyler Paytas, Australian Catholic University, Australia and Tim Henning, University of Stuttgart, Germany
Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This book presents points of agreement and disagreement in the writings of two giants of philosophical ethics: Immanuel Kant and Henry Sidgwick. The chapters will stimulate discussions among moral theorists and historians of philosophy by applying cutting-edge scholarship on each philosopher to shed light on some of the more perplexing arguments and views of the other, and by uncovering and examining points of agreement between Sidgwick and Kant as possible grounds for greater convergence in contemporary moral psychology, moral epistemology, and moral theology.

Logics of Genocide

The Structures of Violence and the Contemporary World

Edited by Anne O'Byrne, Stony Brook University, USA and Martin Shuster, Goucher College, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book employs philosophical approaches to explore the idea of genocidal violence as a structural element in the world. The chapters in this volume address the significance—moral, ethical, political—of the fact that our very form of agency requires structures that may make nation-states and national citizens more susceptible to genocidal projects. They touch on topics including birthright citizenship, contemporary mass incarceration, anti-black racism, and late capitalism. The book will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in philosophy, critical theory, genocide studies, Holocaust and Jewish studies, history, and anthropology.

Polarisation, Arrogance, and Dogmatism

Philosophical Perspectives

Edited by Alessandra Tanesini, Cardiff University, UK and Michael P. Lynch, University of Connecticut, USA

Polarisation, intransigence and dogmatism in political and moral debate have in recent years threatened to overwhelm many democracies. For many people, this marks a worrying deterioration in the moral and political climate, threatening to create a divisive environment of "us" versus "them".

In this superb collection a team of international contributors examine these pressing issues from a philosophical perspective. It will be of great interest to researchers in political philosophy, applied and social epistemology, ethics and feminist philosophy, as well as those working in politics, and sociology.

Reason and Ethics

The Case Against Objective Value

Joel Marks, University of New Haven and Yale University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Ethics and Moral Theory

This book defends the theoretical claim that all values are subjective and the practical claim that human affairs can be conducted fruitfully in full awareness of this. Marks suggests a novel answer to the Companions in Guilt argument that the denial of morality would mean relinquishing rationality as well. Marks disarms the argument by conceding the irrationality of both morality and logic, but is still able to rescue rationality while dispensing with morality on pragmatic grounds. He then offers a positive account of how life may be lived productively without recourse to attributions and assertions of right and wrong, good and bad, and even truth and falsity.

Sacrifice and Moral Philosophy

Edited by Marcel van Ackeren, Koln University, Germany and Alfred Archer

The aim of this book is to foster a more explicit and direct discussion of the concept of sacrifice and its importance in moral philosophy. The first part of the book investigates the nature of sacrifice. The next group of chapters investigates the role of sacrifice in our moral lives generally, while two investigate the role of sacrifice in relation to particular moral theories. The final two chapters investigate the value of sacrifice in relation to political and theological issues.

The Ethics of Microaggression

Regina Rini, York University, Canada

What are microaggressions? Can we be held responsible for them? How has social media affected the problem? What role can philosophy play in understanding microaggression? Regina Rini explores these highly controversial questions in an engaging and fair-minded way. She illustrates her argument with compelling examples from media, politics and psychology and explains the significance of essential concepts, such as media representation, reparative renaming, and safe spaces.

Ideal for anyone coming to the topic for the first time and for students in philosophy, gender studies, race theory, disability theory and social and political philosophy.

The Philosophy of Reenchantment

Edited by Michiel Meijer, University of Antwerp, Belgium and Herbert De Vriese, University of Antwerp, Belgium

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book presents a philosophical study of the idea of reenchantment and its connections with philosophical anthropology, ethics, and ontology. The chapters examine contested notions such as enchantment, transcendence, interpretation, attention, resonance, and the sacred or reverence-worthy— notions that are crucial to human self-understanding but have no place in a scientific worldview. They also explore the significance of adopting a reenchanting perspective for debates on major concepts such as nature, naturalism, God, ontology, and disenchantment.

The Principles of New Ethics I

Metaethics

Wang Haiming and Xiaolu An

This four-volume set proposes a model that divides ethics into three essential components: metaethics, normative ethics, and virtue ethics. This volume studies the five primitive concepts of metaethics — “value”, “good”, “ought”, “right”, and “fact” – and reveals their relationship, while demonstrating the solution to “Hume’s guillotine”. The author identifies excellent moral norms, leading to solutions on how to prove ethical axioms and ethical postulates.

The Chinese version of this set is a classic best seller that sold more than 60,000 copies in China. The English version can be an essential read for students and scholars of ethics and philosophy in general.

The Value and Meaning of Life

Christopher Belshaw, The Open University, UK

Which lives, if any, are valuable, and to what extent? What sort, or sorts, of value do they have? Is life meaningful? What sorts of lives? And what sorts of meaning can they have?

This book addresses these questions and more. Belshaw draws on work concerning death, identity, animals, immortality and extinction to build his argument on the value and meaning of life. Rejecting suggestions that life is intrinsically valuable, he argues that its value varies considerably both within and between different plants, animals and persons.

Essential reading for students and researchers in philosophy, as well those in related subjects such as religion.

The Principles of New Ethics III

Normative Ethics II

Wang Haiming and Xiaolu An

Series: China Perspectives

This four-volume set proposes a model that divides ethics into three essential components: metaethics, normative ethics, and virtue ethics. This volume is the second part of the discussion on normative ethics. The author analyzes humanity, liberty, justice, happiness, and systems of moral rules. He puts forward value standards that construct a system of measuring state instruction; reveals the relationship between humanity, liberty and justice; puts forward three objective laws of happiness; and discusses the goodness of important moral rules, such as honesty, self-respect and courage.

This set is an essential read for students and scholars of ethics and philosophy in general.

Beyond Autonomy in Eighteenth-Century British and German Aesthetics

Edited by Karl Axelsson, Södertörn University, Sweden,
Camilla Flodin, Södertörn University, Sweden and Mattias Pirholt, Södertörn University, Sweden

Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy

This collection of essays re-examines traditional interpretations of the rise of modern aesthetics in eighteenth-century Britain and Germany. It provides a new account that connects aesthetic experience with morality, science, and political society. In doing so, the book challenges longstanding teleological narratives that emphasize disinterestedness and the separation of aesthetics from moral, cognitive, and political interests. In bringing together well-known scholars working on British and German eighteenth-century aesthetics, philosophy, and literature, it will appeal to scholars and advanced students in a range of disciplines who are interested in this topic.

German Philosophy in the Twentieth Century

Lukács to Strauss

Julian Young

German philosophy in the 20th century is one of the most exciting and controversial in the history of human thought. In this outstanding book, a companion volume to his German Philosophy in the Twentieth Century: Weber to Heidegger, Julian Young examines the way in which the major German thinkers of the period reacted to the challenges posed by the nature of modernity, the failure of liberalism and the concept of decline.

Essential reading for students of German philosophy, phenomenology and critical theory, and will also be of interest to students in related fields such as literature, religious studies, and political theory.

Historical Evolution of the Eastern Mode of Production

Zhao Jiaxiang and Xiaolu An

Series: China Perspectives

This volume focuses on the relationship between Marx and Engels' historical materialism and its special development in the context of Eastern societies. The author notes that Marx and Engels' historical materialism and its related theories on Eastern societies are compatible and interconnected. In addition, Marx and Engels' theory of the "Asiatic mode of production" plays an important part in the development trajectory of Eastern societies, and is closely related to their theory of "five social forms".

This volume is a key reference for readers who study and are interested in Marxism, Marxist philosophy and the history of philosophy.

Molyneux's Question and the History of Philosophy

Edited by Gabriele Ferretti and Brian Glenney

Series: Rewriting the History of Philosophy

In 1688 William Molyneux sent a letter to John Locke. He asked: could a man who was born blind and has learned to distinguish a globe and a cube by touch, be able to distinguish and name these objects by sight, once he had been given the ability to see? Molyneux's letter fascinated Locke, and psychologists and cognitive scientists wrestle with it today. Is it a thought experiment that can never be answered? Is one sense more fundamental than others? Are the senses individuated or linked?

This collection that explores these questions and more. Essential reading for students and researchers in philosophy and the history of psychology and cognitive science.

Perception and the Inhuman Gaze

Perspectives from Philosophy, Phenomenology, and the Sciences

Edited by Anya Daly, University of Melbourne, Australia, Fred Cummins, University College Dublin, Ireland, James Jardine, University of Jyväskylä, Finland and Dermot Moran, Boston College, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

The essays in this book analyze the concept of the inhuman gaze, as conceptualized by Merleau-Ponty, from a variety of different perspectives, including phenomenology, philosophy of mind, cognitive psychology, psychiatry, and psychopathology. The underlying motivation of the contributions is to question perceptions of "the human", and how this designation can be used to underwrite concepts of exclusion, denigration, dehumanization and demonization. The variety of perspectives featured across the volume speak to relevance of the phenomenological and psychological character of perceiving others as human or inhuman, in tandem with its expression in various social phenomena.

Philosophy's Nature

Husserl's Phenomenology, Natural Science, and Metaphysics

Emiliano Trizio, University of the West of England, UK

Series: Routledge Research in Phenomenology

This book offers a systematic interpretation of the relation between natural science and metaphysics in Husserl's phenomenology. It shows that Husserl's account of scientific knowledge is a radical alternative to established methods and frameworks in contemporary philosophy of science. The author's interpretation offers a critical reconstruction of the historical context from which his phenomenological approach developed, as well as new interpretations of key Husserlian concepts such as metaphysics, idealization, life-world, objectivism, crisis of the sciences, and historicity.

The Philosophy of Symbolic Forms

Three Volume Set

Ernst Cassirer and Steve G. Lofts, King's University College, University of Western Ontario, Canada

Series: The Philosophy of Symbolic Forms

Cassirer occupies a unique space in Twentieth-century philosophy, and The Philosophy of Symbolic Forms is his most important work. In it he presents a radical new philosophical worldview - at once rich, creative and controversial - of human beings as fundamentally "symbolic animals", placing signs and systems of expression between themselves and the world.

This major new translation, the first for over fifty years, brings Cassirer's magnum opus to a new generation of students and scholars. Correcting errors in previous English editions, it reflects the significant advances in Cassirer scholarship over the last thirty years.

Hegel's Foundation Free Metaphysics

The Logic of Singularity

Gregory S. Moss, The Chinese University of Hong Kong
 Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth-Century Philosophy
 Contemporary philosophical discourse has deeply problematized the possibility of absolute existence. This book demonstrates that by reading Hegel's Doctrine of the Concept in his Science of Logic as a form of Absolute Dialecticism, Hegel's logic of the concept can account for the possibility of absolute existence. Moss illustrates how Hegel's revolutionary account of universality, particularity, and singularity offers solutions to six problems that have plagued the history of Western philosophy: the problem of nihilism, the problem of instantiation, the problem of the missing difference, the problem of absolute empiricism, the problem of onto-theology, and the third man regress.

Kant's Critical Epistemology

Why Epistemology Must Consider Judgment First

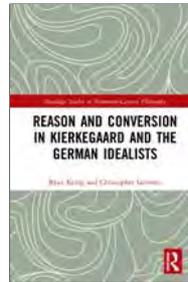

Kenneth R. Westphal, Bogaziçi University, Turkey
 Series: Routledge Studies in Eighteenth-Century Philosophy
 This book assesses Kant's Critical epistemology, and the rich resources it provides for understanding fundamental issues regarding human experience, perceptual judgment, empirical knowledge and cognitive sciences. Westphal examines Kant's methods and strategies for examining human sensory-perceptual experience, and then examines Kant's attention to judgment, and so to the humanly possible valid use of concepts and principles to judge particulars we confront. Westphal defends the significance of Kant's subtle and illuminating account of causal judgment for three main philosophical domains: history and philosophy of science, theory of action and human freedom, and philosophy of mind.

Reason and Conversion in Kierkegaard and the German Idealists

Ryan S. Kemp, Wheaton College, USA and Christopher Iacovetti

Series: Routledge Studies in Nineteenth-Century Philosophy

In Religion within the Boundaries of Mere Reason, Immanuel Kant struggles to answer a straightforward, yet surprisingly difficult, question: how is radical conversion—a complete reorientation of a person's most deeply held values—possible? In this book, Ryan S. Kemp and Christopher Iacovetti examine how this question gets taken up by Kant's philosophical heirs: Schelling, Fichte, Hegel and Kierkegaard. More than simply developing a novel account of each thinker's position, Kemp and Iacovetti trace how each philosopher formulates his theory in response to tensions in preceding views, culminating in Kierkegaard's claim that radical conversion lies outside a person's control.

Secret Subversion I

Mou Zongsan, Kant, and Early Confucianism

Tang Wenming and Cathy Tong

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Chinese Philosophy

From a more traditional Confucian perspective, this book makes a critical analysis on Mou Zongsan (1909-1995)'s "moral metaphysics", mainly his thoughts about Confucian ethos. It observes that Mou simplifies Confucian ethos rooted in various and specific environments, making them equal to modern ethics, which is a subversion of the ethical order of life advocated by traditional Confucianism. Besides, it believes that Mou has twisted Confucian ethos systematically by introducing Kant's concept of autonomy into the interpretation of Confucian thoughts.; The book will appeal to scholars and students in Chinese philosophy, especially those in Confucian studies.

The Collected Papers of Bertrand Russell, Volume 26

Cold War Fears and Hopes, 1950–52

Bertrand Russell and Andrew G. Bone, McMaster University

Series: The Collected Papers of Bertrand Russell

This volume covers a period of transition in Russell's political life between his defence of the West in the early post-war, and the dissenting advocacy of nuclear disarmament and détente that started in earnest in the mid-1950s.

While some of the assembled writings echo harsh prior criticism of Soviet dictatorship, others register growing qualms about the recklessness of American foreign policy and the anti-communist hysteria in the US. Russell's journeys across America and Australia are examined in depth using unpublished manuscripts and correspondence from the Russell Archives, which is mined extensively throughout the volume.

The Philosophy of Ralph Waldo Emerson

Joseph Urbas, University of Bordeaux, France
 Series: Routledge Studies in American Philosophy

This study offers the first comprehensive account of Emerson's philosophy since his philosophical rehabilitation began in the late 1970s. It builds on the historical reconstruction proposed in the author's previous book, Emerson's Metaphysics, and like that study draws on the entire Emerson corpus—the poetry and sermons included. The aim here is expository. The overall though not exclusive emphasis is on identity, as the first term of Emerson's metaphysics of identity and flowing or metamorphosis.

Language and World

A Defence of Linguistic Idealism

Richard Gaskin, University of Liverpool, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Metaphysics

This book defends a version of linguistic idealism, the thesis that the world is a product of language. This linguistic idealism is combined with a realism that accepts the objectivity of science, and it is accordingly distinguished from empirical pragmatism. Gaskin contends that there is a basic metaphysical level at which everything is expressible in language; but the vindication of linguistic idealism is nuanced inasmuch as there is also a derived level, asymmetrically dependant on the basic level, at which reality can break free of language and reach into the realms of the unnameable and indescribable.

Revising Fiction, Fact, and Faith

A Philosophical Account

Nathaniel Goldberg, Washington & Lee University, USA and Chris Gavaler, Washington & Lee University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book addresses how our revisionary practices account for relations between texts and how they are read. It offers an overarching philosophy of revision concerning works of fiction, fact, and faith, revealing unexpected insights about the philosophy of language, the metaphysics of fact and fiction, and the history and philosophy of science and religion. It will be of interest to a wide range of scholars and advanced students working in philosophy of language, metaphysics, philosophy of literature, literary theory and criticism, and history and philosophy of science and religion.

The Indexical Point of View

On Cognitive Significance and Cognitive Dynamics

Vojislav Bozickovic, University of Belgrade, Serbia

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book argues that there is a common cognitive mechanism underlying all indexical thoughts, in spite of their seeming diversity. Philosophers disagree as to whether a thinker's cognitive perspective can be captured and rationalized by semantic content and, if so, what kind of content this is. This book surveys competing views and then advances its own positive account. Ultimately, it argues that a thinker's cognitive perspective - or her indexical point of view - is to be explained in terms of the content that is believed and asserted as the only kind of content that there is which thereby serves as the bearer of cognitive significance.

Models and Modeling in the Sciences

A Philosophical Introduction

Stephen M. Downes

This book first presents a wide range of models from a number of different scientific disciplines. After assembling some illustrative examples, Downes demonstrates how models shed light on many perennial issues in philosophy of science and in philosophy in general. Reviewing the range of views on how models represent their targets introduces readers to the key issues in debates on representation, not only in science but in the arts as well. Also, standard epistemological questions are cast in new and interesting ways when readers confront the question "What makes for a good (or bad) model?"

2nd Edition

The Animal Mind

Kristin Andrews, York University, Canada

Andrews introduces and assesses the essential topics, problems and debates as they cut across animal cognition and philosophy of mind, citing historical and empirical data and case studies throughout. This second edition includes a new chapter on animal culture, and new sections on the evolution of consciousness, tool use in animals, mental representation, belief, communication, theory of mind, animal ethics and moral psychology.

An indispensable introduction to those teaching philosophy of mind, philosophy of animal minds, or animal cognition. It will also be an excellent resource for those in fields such as ethology, biology and psychology.

3rd Edition

The Disordered Mind

George Graham

This book examines, from a philosophical standpoint, what mental disorder is: its reality, causes, consequences, and more. Updated throughout, the 3rd edition includes enhanced discussions of the distinction between mental health and illness, selfhood and delusions about the self, impairments of capacities in mental disorder and the roles that mental causation and neural mechanisms play in mental illness.

Includes chapter summaries and further reading, and presupposes no special background in philosophy. As such it will be of interest to those in related disciplines such as psychology, psychiatry and mental health, and professions such as nursing and social work.

Transparency and Apperception

Exploring the Kantian Roots of a Contemporary Debate

Edited by Boris Hennig, David Hunter, Ryerson University, Toronto, Canada and Thomas Land

Transparency and Apperception: Exploring the Kantian Roots of a Contemporary Debate explores the links between the idea that belief is transparent and Kant's claims about apperception. The idea of transparency and its roots in apperception remain obscure and give rise to difficult methodological and exegetical questions. The contributions in this work address these questions and will be required reading for anyone working on this intersection of the philosophy of mind, language, and epistemology.

The chapters in this book were originally published in a special issue of the Canadian Journal of Philosophy.

Why It's OK to Be of Two Minds

Jennifer Church

Series: Why It's OK

Jennifer Church argues in this book that inner conflict can be a good thing, and not just as a temporary road bump on the road to resolution. This book describes several desirable types of "double consciousness"—or being of two minds—and explains why and how they should be maintained. Church looks critically at some common ideas about identity, including a popular belief about narratives that suggests our lives should "make sense" as a story. She also examines how empathy can helpfully cause us to be of two minds, and how various forms of irony and laughter enable us to benefit from holding onto opposing views.

Why It's OK to Make Bad Choices

William Glod

Series: Why It's OK

Glod argues that it's OK to allow people to make bad choices. It's OK even if those choices risk causing a lot of harm. Most defenders of paternalism agree that some bad choices are not harmful enough to require laws to stop them. However, Glod argues that some people might want—and deserve—the freedom to make truly bad choices because such freedom is the only way they can act responsibly. He also argues that some "bad" choices may not even be bad, even if we can't know with confidence a person's true desires. Finally, it explores the potential pitfalls of paternalistic laws and policies – and how unintended consequences can sabotage the most well-intended plans.

Current Controversies in Philosophy of Science

Edited by Shamik Dasgupta, Ravit Dotan and Brad Weslake

Series: Current Controversies in Philosophy

Philosophers debate six key questions in the philosophy of science: Are Boltzmann Brains Bad? Does Mathematical Explanation Require Mathematical Truth? Does Quantum Mechanics Suggest Spacetime is Non-Fundamental? Is Evolution Fundamental When It Comes to Defining Biological Ontology? Is Chance Ontologically Fundamental? Are Sexes Natural Kinds? These debates explore the philosophical foundations of scientific disciplines and also examine more general issues in the field. Annotated further reading lists and study questions are provided. Perfect for advanced philosophy students building knowledge of the foundations of the field and major debates in

Scientific Challenges to Common Sense Philosophy

Edited by Rik Peels, VU University Amsterdam, Netherlands,

Jeroen de Ridder, Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, The

Netherlands and René van Woudenberg, Vrije Universiteit

Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in the Philosophy of Science

This book debates the tenability of common sense in the face of recent challenges from the sciences. It begins with an overview of the nature and scope of common sense beliefs, and examines philosophical objections to common sense and its relationship to scientific beliefs. Then it features essays by scientists on a variety of different topics related to common sense beliefs, including space and time, free will and identity, rationality, morality, and religious belief. Philosophers respond to each essay to explore the connection between common sense philosophy and contemporary debates in evolutionary biology, neuroscience, physics, and psychology.

Catharine Macaulay's Republican Enlightenment

Karen Green

This comprehensive biography in the "life and letters" tradition situates Macaulay's works in their political and social context and offers an unprecedented, detailed account of the content and influence of her writing, the arguments she developed in her eight-volume history of England and her other political, ethical, and educational works. Her disagreements with conservative opponents, David Hume, Edmund Burke, and Samuel Johnson are developed in detail, as is her influence on more progressive admirers such as Thomas Jefferson, Jacques-Pierre Brissot, Mercy Otis Warren, and Mary Wollstonecraft. Macaulay emerges as a coherent and influential political voice.

Why It's OK to Ignore Politics

Christopher Freiman, College of William & Mary, USA

Series: Why It's OK

In this book, Christopher Freiman explains why these 100 million need not feel guilty. Why It's OK to Ignore Politics argues that you're under no obligation to be politically active. Freiman addresses new objections to political abstention as well as some old chestnuts ("But what if everyone stopped voting?"). He also synthesizes recent empirical work showing how our political motivations distort our choices and reasoning. Because participating in politics is not an effective way to do good, Freiman argues that we actually have a moral duty to disengage from politics and instead take direct action to make the world a better place.

Liberalism's Religion

Cécile Laborde and Her Critics

Edited by Aurelia Bardon and Jeffrey W. Howard

In her major new work, Liberalism's Religion, Cécile Laborde argues that the prevailing liberal-egalitarian approach toward religion is misguided and in need of crucial revision. This volume subjects her powerful new theory to scrutiny from an array of scholars, engaging each dimension of it. The volume includes a comprehensive reply by Laborde to the various points raised by these scholars, and therefore moves the debate forward.

Why It's OK to Want to Be Rich

Jason Brennan

Series: Why It's OK

In Why It's OK to Want to Be Rich, Jason Brennan argues that, in general, the more money you make, the more you already do for others, and that even an average wage earner is productively "giving back" to society just by doing her job. In addition, wealth liberates us to have the best chance of leading a life that's authentically our own. Brennan also demonstrates how money-based societies create nicer, more trustworthy, and more cooperative citizens. While writing that the more money one has, the more one should help others, Brennan also notes that we weren't born into a perpetual debt to society. It's OK to get rich and it's OK to enjoy being rich, too.

Toleration and the Challenges to Liberalism

Edited by Johannes Drerup, Free University of Amsterdam, Netherlands and Gottfried Schweiger, University of Salzburg, Austria

Series: Routledge Studies in Contemporary Philosophy

This book explores the relationship between different versions of liberalism and toleration by focusing on their shared theoretical and political challenges. The essays in Part I reconstruct some of the major historical controversies surrounding toleration and liberalism. Part II centers on general conceptual and justificatory questions concerning toleration as a central category for the definition of liberal political theory. Part III is devoted to the theoretical analysis of applied issues and cases of conflicts of toleration in liberal states and societies.

Avantgarde Art and Radical Material Theology

A Manifesto

Petra Carlsson Redell, Stockholm School of Theology, Sweden

Series: Routledge Focus on Religion

This book introduces a new thinker to the theological sphere, Russian avant-garde artist Liubov Popova (1889-1924). Popova's art and thought are discussed together with thinkers like Walter Benjamin, Donna Haraway, Gilles Deleuze and Henri Lefebvre, along with ecotheological and theopolitical perspectives. Inspired by the activist creativity of avant-garde art, the book's final chapter, playfully yet with deadly seriousness, presents a manifesto for radical theology today. As such, it will be of keen interest to academics in Theology, Religion and the Arts and the Philosophy of Religion.

Contemporary Spiritualities

Enchanted Worlds of Nature, Wellbeing and Mystery in Italy

Stefania Palmisano, Università degli Studi di Torino, Italy and Nicola Pannofino, Università degli Studi di Torino, Italy

Series: Routledge New Religions

This book argues, therefore, that spirituality in the 21st Century actually shares many of the same characteristics as Classical, Mediaeval, Renaissance and Modern spiritualities. It is neither entirely new, nor is it clearly alternative to more established religions. This is a bold take on the spirituality milieu and as such will be of great interest to scholars of Religious Studies working on the sociology of religion, contemporary spirituality and the rise of the "spiritual but not religious".

Indigenous Religion(s)

Local Grounds, Global Networks

Siv Ellen Kraft, Bjørn Ola Tafjord, Arkotong Longkumer, Gregory D. Alles and Greg Johnson

What counts as "indigenous religion" in today's world? Who claims this category? What are the processes through which local entities become recognizable as "religious" and "indigenous"?

This book sheds light on the contemporary lives of indigenous religion(s), through case studies from Sápmi, Nagaland, Talamanca, Hawai'i, and Gujarat, and through a shared focus on translations, performances, mediation and sovereignty.

With contributions from leading scholars in the field, this book is a must read for students and researchers in indigenous religions, including those in related fields such as religious studies and social anthropology.

Israelism in Modern Britain

Aidan Cottrell-Boyce

Series: Routledge New Religions

This book unpacks the history of British-Israelism in the UK. A detailed study on the subject of British-Israelism is necessary, because British-Israelists constitute an essential element of British life during the most violent and consequential century of its history. As such, this will be a vital resource for any scholar of Minority Religions, New Religious Movements, Nationalism and British Religious History.

Muslim Minorities and Social Cohesion

Cultural Fragmentation in the West

Edited by Abe W. Ata

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion

This book examines various attempts in the 'West' to manage cultural, linguistic, and religious diversity – focusing on Muslim minorities in predominantly non-Muslim societies. An international panel of contributors chart evolving national identities and social values, assessing the way that both contemporary 'Western' societies and their contemporary Muslim minorities view themselves and respond to the challenges of diversity. The contributors address multiple critical issues such as gender, the media, citizenship, and multiculturalism. Useful for scholars of religious studies, politics, culture, and migration.

Religion and Violence

A Religious Studies Approach

Paul R. Powers

Does religion cause much of the world's violence? This book explores the potential of classic social theories to shed light on the relationships between religion and violence, starting from the premise that both religion and violence are ordinary elements of social life and that rather than causing violence, religion plays a crucial role in the management of violence.

Ideal for any student approaching the topic of religion and violence for the first time, this core textbook includes chapter overviews and summaries, guides for applying theory to real-world events, discussion questions, and case studies.

Resisting Rape Culture

The Hebrew Bible and Hong Kong Sex Workers

Nancy Nam Hoon Tan, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Series: Rape Culture, Religion and the Bible

Resisting Rape Culture tackles controversial and harrowing rape myths prevalent in rape culture: namely that sex workers do not get raped, and that they are deserving victims of sexual violence. This cutting-edge book describes the rape culture in Hong Kong, focusing on how Hong Kong Christians interpret the Bible concerning prostitutes, and in turn how this affects the treatment of sex workers.

Scripture and Violence

Edited by Julia Snyder and Daniel H. Weiss, University of Cambridge, UK

Scripture and Violence explores the complex relationship between scriptural texts and real-world acts of violence. A variety of issues are addressed, including the modern tendency to condemn "religious" violence while tolerating other forms that are considered "secular," the prevalent assumption that texts have a single, clear meaning and application, and the common view that the actions of "religious" people are motivated by what they read in texts. Contributions come from a diverse group of scholars of Islam, Judaism, and Christianity. This book highlights the incredible complexity of the relationship between texts and human actions.

Seeing God in Our Birth Experiences

A Psychoanalytic Inquiry into Pre and Perinatal Religious Development.

Helen Holmes, King's College London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Religion

This book adds a new and innovative perspective to this line of thought by being the first to link prenatal and perinatal experiences to the origins of these unconscious underpinnings of our shared images of God. This is a bold study of the development of one of humanity's most fundamental aspects. As such, it will be of great interest to scholars of the psychology of religion, psychology, psychoanalysis, religious studies and early infant development.

The Bible and Sexual Violence Against Men

Chris Greenough, Edge Hill University, UK

Series: Rape Culture, Religion and the Bible

This book argues that the shame and stigma around male sexual abuse are interwoven with contemporary social and cultural concepts of masculinity, and are also found in the ancient world and biblical texts themselves. It is interdisciplinary, and has three main areas of exploration:

Men Too? Exploring the myths around sexual violence against men
Sexual violence against men in the Hebrew Bible
Reading Jesus' enforced nudity at the crucifixion as sexual violence.
In seeking to serve those who are not familiar with the Bible, short summaries of the biblical texts are given in each case.

The End of Religion

Feminist Reappraisals of the State

Edited by Kathleen McPhillips and Naomi Goldenberg
Feminist critical analysis has not yet examined how the assumption that religion is natural, timeless, universal and omnipresent supports sexist and race based oppression. This book proposes radical new thinking about religion in order to better comprehend and confront the systematic disempowerment of women and marginalized groups.

Including case studies focusing on how the category of religion is deployed to perpetuate male hegemony and racist inequities in Australia, Mexico, the United States, Britain and Canada, this volume will be of key interest to scholars and students of Religion, Sociology, Political Science and Gender Studies.

The Marketization of Religion

Edited by François Gauthier, University of Fribourg, Switzerland and Tuomas Martikainen

The Marketization of Religion provides a novel theoretical understanding of the relationship between religion and economy of today's world. The chapters provide both theoretical and empirical discussion of the changing dynamics of economy and religion in today's world. Through the lenses of marketization, the volume discusses the multiple, at times surprising, connections of a global religious reformation. Furthermore, in its use of empirical examples, it shows how different religions in various social contexts are reformed due to growing importance of a neoliberal and consumerist logic.

This book was originally published as a special issue of the journal

The Sunday Assembly and Theologies of Suffering

Katie Cross

Series: Explorations in Practical, Pastoral and Empirical Theology

This book draws on an ethnographic study of the atheistic congregation the Sunday Assembly to reflect on how the Church might better deal with suffering, lament and theodicy. The book's central theme emerges from Sunday Assembly's adoption of a philosophy of celebration, which in practice can lead to the "passing over" of the issue of suffering. In response, this book unpacks a similar tendency within the Church to avoid explicit discussion of these difficult issues. The insights provided by this book will be of particular interest to scholars of Religious Studies, Practical Theology, Secularism and Atheism/Non-religion.

Transcendence, Creation and Incarnation

From Philosophy to Religion

Anthony O'Hear, The University of Buckingham, U.K.

Series: Transcending Boundaries in Philosophy and Theology

This book expounds and analyses notions of transcendence, creation and incarnation reflectively and personally, combining both philosophical and religious insights. Preferring tender-minded approaches to reductively materialistic ones, it shows some ways in which reductive approaches to human affairs can distort the appreciation of our lives and activities.

Taking in art, literature, music and classical Greek writings, this is a multifaceted thesis on transcendence. It will, therefore, will be of keen interest to any scholar of Philosophy of Religion, Theology, Aesthetics and Metaphysics.
