The style is artistic and somewhat abstract, focusing on the basic features of the faces.

Anticipatory Policymaking

When Government Acts to Prevent Problems and Why It Is So Difficult

Rob A. DeLeo

Series: Routledge Research in Public Administration and Public Policy

Whereas traditional policy concerns manifest themselves through ongoing harms and ills, "anticipatory problems" are projected to occur sometime in the future, and it is the prospect of their catastrophic impact that generates intense speculation and concern in the present. This book provides an in depth examination of the complex process through which United States government institutions anticipate emerging threats. Using contemporary debates over the risks associated with nanotechnology, pandemic influenza, and global warming as case study material, Rob A. DeLeo highlights the distinctive features of proactive governance.

Long-Term Community Recovery from Natural Disasters

Lucy A. Arendt, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, USA and Daniel J. Alesch, Emeritus Professor, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, USA

After a natural disaster, rebuilding the physical artifact of the community is necessary, but not alone sufficient for long-term community recovery. This book addresses the need to understand how communities develop and/or decay after an extreme natural hazard event. It focuses on how these events disrupt "normal" development and change—defining which parts of the community have to become reestablished, or made more functional, so that the community can achieve long-term viability. The combined practical and philosophical insight presented in this book will be valuable to not only to policy makers but to scholars as well.

Production of Disaster and Recovery in Post-Earthquake Haiti

Disaster Industrial Complex

Juliana Svistova and Loretta Pyles

Series: Routledge Humanitarian Studies

When an environmental disaster strikes, such as the Haiti earthquake of 2010, media, NGO and government responses have a profound impact on how recovery projects are conceived, implemented and evaluated. The Social Production of Disaster and Recovery in Post-Earthquake Haiti reveals how the thoughts and decisions of a powerful few can filter down to a majority whose voices are silenced in the dominant venues of disaster recovery production and representation. The book seeks to re-imagine this contradiction by offering a transformative way forward for others facing disaster risk and vulnerability.

Edited by Alessandra Jerolleman, JEO Consulting Group and John J. Kiefer, Ph.D.

Transforming Disaster Response

Federalism and Leadership

William Lester, Jacksonville State University, Alabama, USA

Series: ASPA Series in Public Administration and Public Policy

This book explores ways in which transformational leadership principles may be applied to an organization's disaster preparation and response, moving the organization away from a competitive or top-down approach and toward a more collaborative one. Rather than focus on centralizing responsibility, with commands emanating from the top, author William Lester offers readers a new paradigm, with step by step instructions on placing transformative and collaborative systems front and center, in order to develop a sustainable disaster response system – one that is not centered on a specific leader or time, but instead focuses on the changes needed to build a system that can outlive any one leader.

Administrative Ethics and Executive Decisions

Channeling and Containing Administrative Discretion

Chad B. Newswander, Brigham Young University-Idaho, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Public Administration and Public Policy

Expanding the thinking of the constitutional school of public administration thought, Administrative Ethics and Executive Decisions is a theoretically grounded and empirically rich study of how administrators

Living in an Age of Mistrust

An Interdisciplinary Study of Declining Trust and How to Get it Back

Edited by Andrew I. Yeo and Matthew N. Green

Series: Routledge Studies in Governance and Public Policy

Given its complexity, trust as an object of study cannot be claimed by any single discipline. Rather than vouch for an overarching theory of trust, Living in an Age of Mistrust synthesizes existing perspectives across multiple disciplines to offer a truly comprehensive examination of this concept and topic of research. Using an analytical framework that encompasses rational and cultural (or sociological) dimensions of trust, the contributions found therein offer a wide range of policy issues both domestic and international to explore the apparent decline in trust, its impact on social and political life, and efforts to rebuild trust.

Series: Routledge Studies in Public Administration and Environmental Sustainability

Growing disenfranchisement with political institutions and policy processes has generated interest in trust in government. In this book, Robinson, Stoutenborough and Vedlitz argue that individual agencies develop specific reputations that may contrast with the more general attitudes towards government as a whole. Grounded in a detailed treatment in the nature of trust as a relationship between two specific actors and taking the Environmental Protection Agency as their subject, the authors illustrate that the agency's reputation is explained through general demographic and ideological factors – as well as policy domain specific factors like environmentalism.

Unmasking Administrative Evil

Danny Balfour, School of Public and Nonprofit Administration, Grand Valley State University, USA, Guy Adams, Harry S. Truman School of Public Affairs, University of Missouri, USA and Ashley E. Nickels, Kent State University, USA

Unmasking Administrative Evil discusses the relationship between evil and public affairs, as well as other fields and professions in public life. The authors argue that the tendency toward administrative evil, as manifested in acts of dehumanization and genocide, is deeply woven into the identity of public affairs. Ordinary people within their normal professional and administrative roles can engage in acts of evil without being aware that they are doing anything wrong. This book lays the groundwork for a more ethical and democratic public life that recognizes its potential for evil and creates greater possibilities for avoiding state-sponsored dehumanization and destruction.

Social Change for Community Resilience

Nancy Meyer-Emerick, Cleveland State University, USA

Using Social Marketing for Public Emergency Preparedness applies the process of social marketing, which has been used widely in public health and other disciplines, to the lack of public preparedness. Written for emergency managers in government and non-profit agencies, students, and volunteers, the book provides enough background and resources to enable the user to carry out an effective emergency preparedness campaign in their community and maintain it over time. Unlike preparing one message for everyone, social marketing involves working with smaller communities to identify what and how people want to learn, training them, and maintaining that relationship to insure their preparedness.

The Public Administration Profession

Policy, Management, and Ethics

Bradley S. Chilton, University of Texas at El Paso, USA, Stephen M. King, Regent University, USA, Viviane E. Foyou, University of Texas at El Paso, USA and J. Scott McDonald, University of Texas at El Paso, USA

While many public administration texts contain a chapter on ethics, The Public Administration Profession is the first to utilize ethics as a lens for understanding the discipline. Analyses of the ASPA Code of Ethics are deftly woven into each chapter alongside complete coverage of the institutions, processes, concepts, persons, history, and typologies needed to gain a thorough grasp of public service as a field of study and practice. Providing students with a comprehensive introduction while offering instructors a new way to bring ethics prominently into the curriculum, this is an ideal introductory text for public admin and public affairs courses at the undergraduate or graduate level.

The Public Administration Workbook

Dennis L. Dresang, University of Wisconsin, Madison, USA

The Public Administration Workbook, 8e is specifically designed with the theoretically-grounded, practice-minded student in mind. It reviews scholarship in political science, law, industrial psychology, and the sociology of organizations and then allows students to see how these intellectual fields inform the analytical and managerial tasks that comprise public administration. Where standard public administration textbooks examine the nature of public agencies and explain how bureaucracies relate to other institutions, this workbook promotes a more effective way of learning—by doing—and more directly prepares those who will pursue careers in public agencies.

Edited by Saba Siddiki, Syracuse University, USA, Salvador Espinosa, San Diego State University, USA and Tanya Heikkila, University of Colorado Denver, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Public Administration and Public Policy

Contemporary Policy Beyond Ideology

Edited by Mark Fabian and Robert Breunig, Australian National University

Series: Routledge Studies in Governance and Public Policy

This volume provides a thorough introduction to this technical side of public policy analysis and development. International Public Policy Analysis

George M. Guess, George Mason University, USA and Thomas Husted

International Public Policy Analysis is the first textbook to take a truly comparative and cross-cultural approach, organized around policy issues, to examine important policy 'lessons' that affect the everyday lives of citizens. Guess and Husted demonstrate that incremental, marginal changes in sectoral policy systems using cross-national lessons can lead to larger changes in country policies, democracy, and better governance. Jargon-free and using a cross-cultural approach, the individual chapters in this book utilize a 3-level analysis to review the policy issue areas, present analytic tools and frameworks, and provide cases/exercises for practice in applying the methods and frameworks.

Finding opportunities offered by different democratic institutions, and organizing to take advantage of these opportunities, even minority groups can be influential. Using a variety of methods, a wealth of empirical data, and a new experimental dataset, Farrer proves that environmentalists can sometimes be more influential if they form interest groups, but under different institutions, political parties are the optimal organizational form.

While current studies have underlined differences and similarities in national approaches to policy analysis, the different national regimes have not been thoroughly explored and systematically evaluated in their entirety, examining both sub-national and non-executive governmental organizations as well as the non-governmental sector. Administrative Law for Public Managers

David H Rosenbloom

This book focuses on the essentials that public managers should know about administrative law—why we have administrative law, the constitutional constraints on public administration, and administrative law's frameworks for rulemaking, adjudication, enforcement, transparency, and judicial and legislative review. Rosenbloom views administrative law from the perspectives of administrative practice, rather than lawyering with an emphasis on how various administrative law provisions promote their underlying goal of improving the fit between public administration and U.S. democratic-constitutionalism.

Biopolitics and Security

A. R. Sriskanda Rajah, Brunel University, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book analyses where Sri Lanka stands as a state that has in place liberal democratic state-institutions but exhibits the characteristics of an authoritarian state. Using Michel Foucault's concept of biopolitics, the author argues that Sri Lanka enacted racist legislations and perpetrated mass-atrocities on the Tamils as part of its biopolitics of institutionalising and securing a Sinhala-Buddhist ethnocentric state-order. The book also explores the ways that, apart from military action, power relations produce the effects of battle, and thus the way that peace can often become a means of waging war.

When Service Delivery Trumps Democracy

Anna A. Amirkhanyan, American University, USA and Kristina T. Lambricht, Binghamton University, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Public Administration and Public Policy

Today, governments contract with private organizations to deliver a wide array of services. Yet, we know very little about how citizens influence government decisions and policies in the "hollow state." Based on nearly 100 interviews with public and private managers, Citizen Participation in the Age of Contracting finds that the state of citizen participation in contract governance is somewhat disheartening. Public and private organizations engaged citizens in a number of ways. However, most of their efforts failed to shift the power structure in communities and did not give citizens a chance to fundamentally shape local priorities and programs.

Localizing Governance in India

Bidyut Chakrabarty, Delhi University, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book analyses local governance structures in India. It traces historical-intellectual trajectories of participatory governance and how older Western discourses have influenced Indian policymakers. The author demonstrates that participatory governance has a long history in India. While colonial rulers devolved power to accommodate dissenting voices, for independent India, participatory governance was a design for democratizing governance in its true sense. Participation also acted as a vehicle for localizing governance.

Partnership Governance in Public Management

A Public Solutions Handbook

Seth A. Grossman, Rutgers University, Newark, New Jersey, USA and Marc Holzer, Rutgers University-Newark, USA

Series: The Public Solutions Handbook Series

Partnership Governance in Public Management describes what partnership is in the public sector, how public partnerships are managed, and how partnerships can be measured and evaluated effectively. Partnerships are considered not only a skill set and policy tool, but an effective way to understand public processes that produce results. Instead of looking at partnerships in terms of surviving the other partner, this book examines partnerships and partnering technologies as a way to bridge sectors to produce a new sense of public purpose and a stable foundation for governance to flourish.

Radical Politics and Governance in India's North East

The Case of Tripura

Harihar Bhattacharyya, University of Burdwan, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book examines the roots, nature, governmental performance, and theoretical and policy implications of left radicalism in Tripura. The case of Tripura is placed in comparison with her neighbours in the region, and in some cases with India's advanced States in governance matters. Based on original archival and the very recent empirical and documentary sources on the subject, the author shows that the Left in Tripura is well-entrenched, and that it has sustained itself compared to other parts of India, despite deeply rooted ethnic tensions between the aboriginal peoples (tribes) and immigrant Bengalis.

Using a theoretical framework based on power, the book examines the American assistance discourse, its formation and justification in relation to historical contexts, and its operation on the African continent. Beginning with a problematization of development as a concept that structures racial hierarchies, the book highlights how cultural, political and economic conceptions influence the American assistance discourse.

Principles and International Practice

Salvatore Schiavo-Campo, The World Bank, USA

Government budgets should be the financial mirror of society's choices, and sound management of public expenditure at the core of a well-functioning state. However, most see budgeting as uninteresting, and core concepts are rarely explained understandably to the non-specialist or presented with adequate consideration of a country's governance and institutional capacity. Government Budgeting and Expenditure Management redresses both of these failings. Each chapter progresses from basic principles to more technical aspects and on to implementation issues, using concrete examples and illustrations from countries at different levels of income and administrative capacity.

Fiscal Analysis in Development Management

Edited by Peter Fuseini Haruna, Texas A&M Int'l University, Laredo, TX, USA and Shikha Vyas-Doorgapersad, University of Johannesburg, South Africa

Africa stands at a public budgeting and fiscal administration cross-road. On the one hand, incomes, education, and life-expectancy rates are all on the rise. On the other hand, poverty is still widespread and economic inequality is widening. Now more than ever, it is important for administrators to ask the complicated questions about how African nations should be allocating their fiscal resources to advance the course of judicious development, especially given population growth, quality of life demands, and a growing need for government accountability.

This book compiles chapters from authors across countries to address the complex issues involved with decision-making and implementation.

Edited by John C. Morris, Old Dominion University, USA and Katrina Miller-Stevens, Colorado College, USA

The term collaboration is widely used but not clearly understood or operationalized. However, collaboration is playing an increasingly important role between and across public, nonprofit, and for-profit sectors. As collaboration scholarship rapidly emerges, it diverges into several directions, resulting in confusion about what collaboration is and what it can be used to accomplish. Advancing Collaboration Theory provides insight into existing ideas and theories of collaboration, advancing a revised theoretical model and accompanying typologies that further our understanding of collaborative processes within the public sector.

Marketing Public Policy

Complexity, Hurts and Minefields

Basskaran Nair, Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, National University of Singapore, Singapore

This book fills a much-needed gap in the existing literature on public policy by fusing complexity theories with communication practices (where behaviour is a unit of analysis). The book aligns with the behavioural foundations of policy making and goes further by exploring the what, why and how. It is a wonderful resource to help policy makers to anticipate, and better plan for, complexity, polarisation and other human behaviour that arise in the policy making process.

New Public Leadership

Making a Difference from Where We Sit

Douglas F. Morgan, Portland State University, USA, Marcus D. Ingle and Craig W. Shinn

Most leadership literature stems from and focuses on the private sector, emphasizing personal qualities that bind leaders and followers to a shared purpose. As New Public Leadership argues, if these shared purposes do not build trust and legitimacy in public institutions, traditional leadership tropes fall short of the standard demanded by contemporary public servants. The authors have developed a leadership education and training framework designed to encourage public service professionals to 'lead from where they sit.' This book presents that comprehensive, integrated, and practical leadership framework, grounded in the uniqueness of public legal missions, culture, history and values.

The Professionalization of Public Participation

Edited by Laurence Bherer, University of Montreal, Canada, Mario Gauthier, Université du Québec en Outaouais, Canada, and Louis Simard, University of Ottawa, Canada.

Public participation professionals are part of a new wave of political professions created in the last twenty years. They play an important role in the implementation of public participation and have as such become key actors in political mobilization and influence. We however know very little about how these actors operate on the ground. For the first time, leading and emerging scholars from North America and Europe have been assembled in one volume to present a clearer profile of these actors to better understand their role in the dissemination of public participation practices, and to identify the main issues involved in professionalization trends.

Offering practical examples and guidance on forming and sustaining a community health coalition, this book demonstrates the ways in which the success of a coalition depends upon a stable anchor organization and a committed leader.

A Phenomenology of Institutions

Relationality and Governance in China and Beyond

Raul Lejano, New York University, USA, Jia Guo, Beijing Normal University, China, Hongping Lian, Beijing Normal University, China and Bo Yin, Beijing Normal University, China

A Phenomenology of Institutions begins with the problem of describing emergent institutional phenomena using conventional typologies. Constructing a new descriptive framework for rendering new, hybrid, and flexible institutional designs, Raul Lejano, Jia Guo, Hongping Lian, and Bo Yin propose new descriptors, involving concepts of autopoiesis, textuality, and relationality, that might better describe new and emergent models for governance. The authors illustrate the utility of this framework with a number of case studies, each dealing with a different aspect of Chinese legal and civic institutions and comparing these with 'Western' models.

Constitutional Democracy in India

Bidyut Chakrabarty, University of Delhi, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book examines the processes leading to constitutionalizing India and challenges the conventional idea that the Constitution of India is a borrowed doctrine. A careful study of the processes reveals that the 1950 Constitution was the culmination of an ideological battle that had begun with the consolidation of the British Enlightenment philosophy in the early days of British paramountcy in India. The book therefore argues that constitutionalizing endeavour in India had a clear imprint of ideas which had its root in this philosophy.

Employment, Poverty and Rights in India

Dayabati Roy, Centre for Studies in Social Sciences, Calcutta, India and Jyväskylä University, Finland

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

Employment, Poverty and Rights in India analyses unemployment in India and explains why the issues of employment and unemployment should be the appropriate prism to understand the status of wellbeing in India. The author provides a historical analysis of policy interventions on behalf of the colonial and postcolonial state with regard to the alleviation of unemployment and poverty in India and in West Bengal in particular. Arguing that, as long as poverty - either as a concept or as an empirical condition - remains as a technical issue to be managed by governmental technologies, the 'poor' will be held responsible for their own fate and the extent of poverty will continue to increase.

Governing in a Global World

Women in Public Service

Edited by Maria J. D'Agostino, John Jay College, City University of New York, USA and Marilyn Marks Rubin, John Jay College, City University of New York, USA

To what degree do women govern around the globe? Governing in a Global World captures the panorama of women governing around the world. Even though the modern era marks history's greatest advancements for women, worldwide they hold fewer than 30 percent of decision-making positions and are often missing from negotiating tables where policies are made and conflicts resolved. Taken together, the chapters in this book illustrate the worldwide importance of, and challenges to, promoting gender equality and women governing.

Making Gender Equality Happen

Knowledge, Change and Resistance in EU Gender Mainstreaming

Rosalind Cavaghan, Glasgow Caledonian University, UK
Series: Gender and Comparative Politics

Rosalind Cavaghan presents a much needed fresh insight into the mechanisms maintaining the state's production of gender inequality, along with new perspectives on how we can tackle them. Making Gender Equality Happen argues that we must examine why so many policy makers can't understand how to 'mainstream gender'. To do this, Cavaghan develops a new methodological and theoretical perspective Gender Knowledge Contestation Analysis and applies it to examine how Gender Mainstreaming did, and did not, work in the EU's Science and Research policy. Findings provide fresh insights which help us to better understand and implement gender equality policies, in the changing European political context.

Marriage and Values in Public Policy

Conflicts in the UK, the US and Australia

Elizabeth van Acker, Griffith University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Governance and Public Policy

Marriage is a controversial issue. It is widely discussed in policy terms, but in the UK, Australia and the US there is a clash of values between governments and diverse groups which strongly oppose or support marriage. In the meantime, fewer couples are marrying, while cohabitation and divorce rates are high. This book explores this disconnect by examining policy issues such as class divides, welfare dependency, religion, same-sex marriage, gender relations and romance.

Race and Social Equity

A Nervous Area of Government

Susan T Gooden

In this compelling book the author contends that social equity—specifically racial equity—is a nervous area of government. Over the course of history, this nervousness has stifled many individuals and organizations, thus leading to an inability to seriously advance the reduction of racial inequities in government. The author asserts that until this nervousness is effectively managed, public administration social equity efforts designed to reduce racial inequities cannot realize their full potential.

Building Democracy and International Governance

George M. Guess, George Mason University, USA

Examining twelve wealthy and developing countries from five regions, representing democratic and authoritarian government structures, confederations, and federations, this book will be of interest to those teaching graduate and undergraduate courses in Political Development, Democratization, Federalism, and Comparative Political Economy.

Critical Infrastructures Resilience

Policy and Engineering Principles

Edited by Auroop Ratan Ganguly, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts, USA, Udit Bhatia, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts, USA and Stephen E. Flynn, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts, USA

Extreme events and stresses, including those that may be unprecedented but are no-longer surprising, have disproportionate effects on critical infrastructures, and hence on communities, cities, and megaregions. Environmental Policy and Governance in an Era of Climate Change

Matthew Nowlin, College of Charleston, USA

A mix of existing political theory and original analysis, this book applies recent policy scholarship to questions of environmental governance, with a particular focus on climate change. It examines how competing political actors influence policies within and across institutions, focusing on both a macro-level, where formal bodies set the agenda, and a meso-level, where issues are contained within policy subsystems. This book will help students enrolled in environmental studies courses—as well as all those interested in the impacts of policy on climate change—to understand what is, and will likely continue to be, one of the most pressing policy issues of our time.

Frontline Delivery of Welfare-to-Work Policies in Europe

Activating the Unemployed

Edited by Rik van Berkel, Utrecht University, Netherlands, Dorte Caswell, Aalborg University, Denmark, Peter Kupka, Institute for Employment Research (IAB), Germany and Flemming Larsen, Aalborg University, Denmark

Series: Routledge Studies in Governance and Public Policy

Frontline work plays a crucial role in determining what welfare-to-work practically means and how they affect the lives of the people they target, yet few books have deliberately focused on comparing what happens when professional social workers/welfare to work actors meet clients. Pioneering the provision of scholarly reflections on both theoretical and policy relevance of studying frontline practices of delivering activation, internationally renowned researchers present the first systematic comparative analysis of how welfare-to-work/activation policies are actually delivered by frontline staff in selected EU countries and in the United States.

In this ground-breaking new textbook, author Kevin Fandl develops a complete picture of society, from idea to action, by examining laws through the lens of policy, and vice versa. This holistic approach gives readers a chance to see not only why certain rules exist, but how those rules evolved over time and the events that inspired them. Inside Affirmative Action

The Executive Order That Transformed America's Workforce

Karin Williamson Pedrick, Independent Scholar and Practitioner and Sandra Arnold Scham, Catholic University of America, USA

Affirmative action is still a reality of the American workplace. How is it that such a controversial federal program has managed to endure for more than five decades? Inside Affirmative Action addresses this question. Recent books published on affirmative action address university admissions, but very few of them ever mention Executive Order 11246 or its enforcement by an agency within the Department of Labor - let alone discuss in depth the profound workplace diversity it has created or the employment opportunities it has generated. This book charts that history through the eyes of those who experienced it.

New Public Management in Africa

Emerging Issues and Lessons

Edited by Benon C. Basheka, Uganda Technology and Management University, Kampala and Lukamba-Muhiya. Tshombe, North-West University, Vaal Triangle Campus, Vanderbijlpark, Gauteng Province, South Africa

New Public Management in Africa provides much-needed theoretical foundations for the NPM discussion, and reflects on the role of implemented reforms in the development of several African states. The book contributes directly to policymaking, sharing findings on the results of reforms to date and adjustments required for them to succeed. For those outside of Africa, this book offers a report on NPM reforms in African states and information that is difficult to find elsewhere, contributing much to the exchange between African administration science research and that of other states, and demonstrating that African administrative research is well-prepared to help resolve global challenges.

Teun J. Dekker, Maastricht University, the Netherlands

Series: Routledge Research in Public Administration and Public Policy

Based on many hundreds of parliamentary debates, newspaper articles, speeches, as well as reports by think tanks and high commissions of state, the book identifies seven central arguments that occur in all these societies, translates them into the language of analytical philosophy, and then rigorously evaluates them.

The Evaluation Enterprise

A Critical View

Edited by Jan-Eric Furubo and Nicoletta Stame
Series: Comparative Policy Evaluation

In this book, Jan-Eric Furubo and Nicoletta Stame have assembled an international line up of distinguished experts and emerging scholars to examine evaluation from a critical – or evaluative – perspective. Each contribution in this book offers a systematic and critical insight into the broader relationship evaluation shares with society. Divided into three parts, the various chapters demonstrate that the constitutive effects of the social practice of evaluation can also be the suppression of other forms of knowledge and the favoring of certain notions about societal development and political and administrative processes.

Discovering American Regionalism

An Introduction to Regional Intergovernmental Organizations

David Young Miller, University of Pittsburgh, USA and Jen Nelles

In this revolutionary new book, Miller and Nelles offer a new way to conceptualize Regional Intergovernmental Organizations (RIGOs) that bring together local governments to coordinate policies across jurisdictional boundaries. RIGOs are not governments themselves, but as the authors demonstrate, they do have a measure of political authority that allows them to quietly and sometimes almost invisibly work to further regional interests and mitigate cross-boundary irritations. Providing a new conceptual framework for understanding how regional decision-making has emerged in the US, this book will provoke a new and rich era of discussion about American regionalism in theory and practice.

Everyday State and Politics in India

Government in the Backyard in Kalahandi

Sainen Routray, Azim Premji University, India

Series: Routledge/Edinburgh South Asian Studies Series

This book focuses on processes of governance in Odisha, and provides an ethnographic account of the changing forms of governmental actions in Kalahandi by analysing the implementation of WORLP, a new generation watershed development project. The book also shows the morphings of the forms of the state on the ground, and the ways in which it is perceived by the agents and objects of statist actions. Arguing that changes in the institutions and practices of the state in India over the last three decades are better understood through the conceptualisation of state-fabrication, the author describes the governmental tactics related to emergent modes of governmental action.

The Business Improvement District Movement

Contributions to Public Administration & Management

Seth A. Grossman, Rutgers University, Newark, New Jersey, USA

This comprehensive book covers the theory and practice of Business Improvement Districts or BIDs – partnerships between local communities and governments established to revitalize neighborhoods and catalyze economic development in a region. In this book, author Seth Grossman demonstrates the ways in which BIDs work, pull stakeholders together, and acquire funds to manage the difficult process of community revitalization especially in urbanized, threatened town centers. BIDs also blur traditional lines between public and private organizations, and their governance raises critical new questions about democratic representation, accountability, transparency, and responsiveness.

E-Governance in India

Interlocking politics, technology and culture

Bidisha Chaudhuri, International Institute of Information Technology, India

Series: Routledge Advances in South Asian Studies

E-governance has been a strategic sector of reform in India since late 1990s under the rubric of 'good governance' agenda promoted by International Organisations. This book analyses e-governance in India and argues that such initiatives did not take place in isolation but followed in the footsteps of broader governance reform agenda that has already made considerable impact on the practices of governance in India. Employing interdisciplinary methodology, it presents a qualitative account of the policies and practices of e-governance reform in India along with a detailed case study of the Common Services Centres

Collaborative Strategies for Sustainable Cities

Economy, Environment and Community in Baltimore

Edited by Eric S. Zeemering, Northern Illinois University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Public Administration and Environmental Sustainability

A city may have a sustainability plan and personnel responsible for sustainability; but, in order to understand how cities make progress on their sustainability policy goals, we need a view of the networks working to advance sustainability in the community. Using the city of Baltimore to describe and analyze the involvement of the participants in local sustainability efforts in rich detail, Eric Zeemering argues that when we think about the sustainable city, the city government is not the best unit of analysis for our investigations or policy planning.

Cities, Networks, and Global Environmental Governance

Spaces of Innovation, Places of Leadership

Sofie Bouteligier, Wageningen University, The Netherlands
Series: Cities and Global Governance

This innovative study examines theories of the network society and global cities from a global ecology perspective. Through direct observation, interviews, and using two types of city networks that have been treated separately in the literature, Bouteligier discovers the structure and logic pertaining to office networks of environmental non-governmental organizations and environmental consultancy firms. In doing so she incisively demonstrates the ways in which cities fulfill the role of strategic sites of global environmental governance.

Greening Post-Industrial Cities

Growth, Equity, and Environmental Governance

Corina McKendry, Colorado College, USA
Series: Cities and Global Governance

City greening has been heralded for contributing to environmental governance and critiqued for exacerbating displacement and inequality. Bringing these two disparate analyses into conversation, this book offers a comparative understanding of how tensions between growth, environmental protection, and social equity are playing out in practice. Examining Chicago, USA, Birmingham, UK, and Vancouver, Canada, Corina McKendry argues that city greening efforts were closely connected to processes of post-industrial branding in the neoliberal economy. Both critical and hopeful, McKendry's work will interest scholars of city greening, environmental governance, and comparative urban politics.

The study of urbanization in Southeast Asia has been a growing field of research over the past decades. The Routledge Handbook of Urbanization in Southeast Asia offers a collection of the major streams and themes in the studies of the cities in the region. A focus on the urbanization process rather than the city as an object opens the topic more broadly to bring together different perspectives. Towards Safe and Inclusive Cities

Edited by Jennifer Erin Salahub, Markus Gottsbacher and John de Boer

Series: Routledge Studies in Cities and Development

The Cultural Contradictions of Progressive Politics

The Role of Cultural Change and the Global Economy in Local Policymaking

Donald L. Rosdil, Northern Virginia Community College, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Urban Politics and Policy

This work utilizes cultural change and the growth of non-traditional subcultures in explaining how cities seek to shape their futures. It serves as a useful corrective to much of the urban policy literature which relies on economic factors to account for policy outcomes. However, rather than pose a false dichotomy between these two kinds of causal factors, it shows how they work together to produce progressive outcomes.

The Global City 2.0

From Strategic Site to Global Actor

Kristin Ljungkvist, Uppsala University, Sweden

Series: Cities and Global Governance

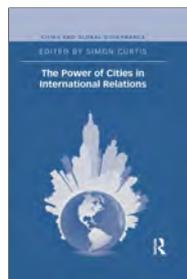

Global cities all over the world are taking on new roles as they increasingly participate directly and independently in international affairs and global politics. So far, surprisingly few studies have analyzed the role of the Global City beyond its already well explicated role in the globalized economy. What does it mean to be and to govern the contemporary Global City? Combining insights from International Relations and Urban Studies scholarship, and with the help of a case study on New York City, Kristin Ljungkvist develops an analytical framework for studying the Global City as an international political actor.

The Risk of Regional Governance

Cultural Theory and Interlocal Cooperation

Thomas Skuzinski, Virginia Tech, USA

Series: Routledge Research in Urban Politics and Policy

The Risk of Regional Governance argues that many of the most important cooperative decisions local officials make—those about land use planning and regulation—are driven by heuristic, biased reasoning driven by cultural values. It builds a sociocultural collective action framework, and supports it with rich survey and interview data from hundreds of local elected officials serving in the suburbs of Detroit and Grand Rapids, Michigan. It is a story of the Rust Belt, of how local officials think about their community and the region, and—most importantly—of how we might craft policies that can overcome biases against regional governance.

Urban Politics

Cities and Suburbs in a Global Age

Myron Levine, Wright State University, USA

This popular text mixes classic urban theory and research with a review of the most recent developments and trends in the urban and metropolitan arena. The book's balanced and realistic approach helps students understand the nature of contemporary urban problems and the difficulty in finding effective "solutions" to those problems in a suburban and global age.

The ninth edition, thoroughly rewritten, maintains its focus on questions of economic development and race and gives enhanced attention to the changing patterns of the American city, including the impacts of globalization and gentrification.
