Business Leaders and Leadership in Asia

Ying Zhu, University of South Australia, Shuang Ren, University of Melbourne, Australia, Ngan Collins and Malcolm Warner, University of Cambridge, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in the Growth Economies of Asia

The quality of its business leadership is a key issue for the future development of Asia's economies. Although Asia's economies have grown spectacularly in recent decades, they are currently facing increasing challenges. This book explores the current state of business leadership in Asia. It demonstrates that there is no single model of Asian business leadership, and that Western models often do not fit easily alongside Asian cultural values. It discusses how different Asian economies have different types of business leadership challenges. The book concludes by assessing how business leadership in Asia is likely to develop in future.

Routledge Handbook of Creative and Cultural Industries in Asia

Edited by Lorraine Lim, Birkbeck College, University of London, UK and Hye-Kyung Lee, King's College London, UK

The Routledge Handbook of the Cultural and Creative Industries in Asia provides readers with a broad understanding of the growth and transformation of the CClIs in Asia and serves as a key reference point for further scholarship in this area. The handbook is divided into five parts covering governance, production, consumption, technology and distribution. Each part includes a short introduction that defines its key terms and highlights the theme as well as an overview chapter that provides a comparative overview of the countries and CClIs examined and a concluding reflective chapter written by a practitioner.

Institutions and Economic Growth in Asia

The Case of Mainland China, Hong Kong, Singapore and Malaysia

Flora Huang and Horace Yeung

Series: Routledge Economic Growth and Development Series

This book explores the role of institutions in economic growth, looking in particular at specific Asian countries and at particular cities within those countries. It considers a wide range of factors besides institutions, including the law, cultural factors and overall government arrangements. The differences between the different countries studied are highlighted, and the impact of these differences assessed. The book's conclusions as to which factors have the greatest impact will be of considerable interest to economists of Asia and those interested in economic growth more widely.

A New Era in Democratic Taiwan

Trajectories and turning points in politics and cross-Strait relations

Edited by Chun-Yi Lee and Jonathan Sullivan

Series: Routledge Research on Taiwan Series

The KMT and its allies have dominated elections through Taiwan's two decade experience of democracy. With a "safe" China policy and effective resource channelling, they maintained a winning coalition among big business, the public sector, green collar workers and local factions, structuring Taiwan's political landscape. Until now. This book identifies past, current and future trajectories in areas such as political competition, state-society relations and national identity. Moving beyond headline rhetoric, it provides a timely investigation of ongoing trends based on empirical analysis. As such it will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Asian politics and cross-Strait relations.

Constitutional Democracy in India

Bidyut Chakrabarty, University of Delhi, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book examines the processes leading to constitutionalizing India and challenges the conventional idea that the Constitution of India is a borrowed doctrine. A careful study of the processes reveals that the 1950 Constitution was the culmination of an ideational battle that had begun with the consolidation of the British Enlightenment philosophy in the early days of British paramourcy in India. The book therefore argues that constitutionalizing endeavour in India had a clear imprint of ideas which had its root in this philosophy.

Critical International Relations Theories in East Asia

Relationality, Subjectivity, and Pragmatism

Edited by Kosuke Shimizu, Ryukoku University, Japan

Series: IR Theory and Practice in Asia

This book interrogates the meanings of the established ontology and subjectivity embedded in the discourse of 'Western' and 'non-Western' IR. We are predisposed to see a nation-state as a unified entity, everlasting and moving towards a particular end. This leads us to say, for example, 'Japan is threatened by the possible Chinese attack' without questioning what 'Japan' and 'China' mean in this context. This book tries to locate and unearth the consistent structure and system of the world, with a particular focus on subjectivity and temporality in IR, that captures the way in which we conceive and misconceive the world.

Danger, Development and Legitimacy in East Asian Maritime Politics

Securing the Seas, Securing the State

Christian Wirth, Griffith University, Australia

Series: Asia's Transformations

Danger, Development and Legitimacy in East Asian Maritime Politics is a timely contribution that furthers our understanding of several controversial debates in the politics of the Asia-Pacific. Its use of advanced social theory allows for the coherent treatment of a wide range of cases such as ocean development, island disputes and geopolitical maritime security concerns that were hitherto explored in isolation from one another. By showing how hegemonic ideas of development continue to inform security politics and distract from the salient problems of legitimacy, this book challenges conventional wisdom that economic growth will eventually pacify Asia-Pacific international relations.

Dynamics of Change in East Asia

Historical Trajectories and Contemporary Development

P.W. Preston

This book illuminates the historical development trajectory and contemporary circumstances of the countries of East Asia. Embracing a cross-disciplinary perspective, it summarises the history of the region and goes on to focus upon the rise of East Asia since the ruins of the Pacific War. Analysing the region's basic strengths and elite development strategies across the various countries, it also examines areas of domestic, intra-regional and international conflict. It covers the basic ground of political economy, society, culture and politics, whilst also taking care to locate the contemporary region in its own history and asking, what further change can be expected in the future?

Governance and Democracy in the Asia Pacific

Political and Civil Society

Edited by Stephen McCarthy, Griffith University, Australia and Mark R Thompson, City University of Hong Kong

Series: Politics in Asia

This book examines the nature of civil and political society in the Asia-Pacific region as well as the presence, or absence, of good governance and democracy. Divided into three themes - governance and democracy, political society, and civil society - each theme is intended to focus our attention on the kinds of issues it identifies and, in turn, encourage both an analytical and a comparative study between a number of similar countries or cases in the Asia Pacific region.

Hegemony and the US-Japan Alliance

Misato Matsuoka, Tokai University, Japan

Series: Sheffield Centre for Japanese Studies/Routledge Series

As a pioneering study, through the lens of neo-Gramscianism, this book unravels the intricate political dynamism between the US-Japan alliance and Japanese foreign policymaking, and underscores its relationship to US hegemony in the Asia-Pacific. It is an innovative attempt to link the concept of alliances to hegemony and to explain the complicated power dynamism in alliance contexts. As such, this book will present an alternative theoretical tool in the international relations field to analyse the political nature of alliances in the post-Cold War period, contributing to the fields of Japanese foreign policymaking and Asia-Pacific security, security studies and international relations.

Japan's Foreign Relations in Asia

Edited by James D.J. Brown, Temple University, Japan and Jeff Kingston, Temple University, Japan

This new textbook focuses on Japan's foreign relations in Asia over the last 20 years, a period in which there have been dramatic developments including the reinterpretation of the Constitution and expanded US-Japan defense cooperation. Covering the key regional players of China and the Koreans, this textbook also encompasses chapters on Japan's relations with India, Myanmar, Indonesia, Vietnam, the Philippines and Thailand, along with its multilateral initiatives. Combined with transnational thematic chapters, this textbook, with its accessible style and jargon-free analysis, provides an accessible resource giving students a deep understanding of Japan's contemporary relations in Asia.

Political Participation in Asia

Defining and Deploying Political Space

Edited by Eva Hansson and Meredith L. Weiss, SUNY Albany, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary Asia Series

This book explores political participation in Asia and how democracy and authoritarianism function under neoliberal economic relations. It examines changes that coincide seemingly perversely with a participation explosion: with mass street protests and "occupations," energetic online contention, movements of students and workers, mobilization for and against democracy, and more. Organised thematically in three parts, this book analyses economic, regime and media shifts and how they function in tandem and across not just states, but sub-regions.

Political Violence in South Asia

Edited by Ali Riaz, Illinois State University, USA, Zobaida Nasreen and Fahmida Zaman

This book explores various dimensions of political violence in South Asia, namely in Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. Each chapter either speaks to an important aspect of the political violence or provides an overall picture of the nature and scope of political violence in the respective country. Political violence is understood in the larger sense of political, that is above and beyond institutions such as elections, although institutions are not excluded as they play a crucial role in producing and reproducing violence, but also as an integral part of social relationships where social norms and the role of individual agency play seminal roles.

Power and Water in Central Asia

Filippo Menga, The University of Reading, UK
Series: Routledge Advances in Central Asian Studies

This book analyses the role of state power in transboundary water relations. It provides an in-depth study of the evolution of interstate relations in Central Asia in the field of water from 1991-2015. Taking as a case study the planned construction of the Rogun and Kambarata dams in Tajikistan and Kyrgyzstan, the author examines various forms of overt and covert power shaping interstate relations and the way hegemonic and counter-hegemonic measures are put in place in an international river basin. He argues that the intimate correlation between the concepts of power and hegemony can offer key insights to the analysis and understanding of transboundary water relations.

Regional Environmental Politics in Northeast Asia

Conflict and Cooperation

Jeongwon Park, Lingnan University, Hong Kong

Series: Politics in Asia

Against the backdrop of debate on how to understand Northeast Asia as a 'region', Park focusses on the major regional economies of China, Japan and the ROK, along with Russia, North Korea and the Republic of Mongolia, due to both their geopolitical proximity and their significance to the region. She attempts to answer the questions 'How far has regional environmental cooperation progressed in Northeast Asia?'; and 'Why are Northeast Asian countries reluctant to cooperate further on urgent transboundary and regional environmental issues?'

Routledge Handbook of Asian Migrations

Edited by Gracia Liu-Farrer, Waseda University, Japan and Brenda S.A. Yeoh

Housing more than half of the global population, Asia is a region characterised by increasingly diverse forms of migration and mobility. Offering a wide-ranging overview of the field of Asian migrations, this new handbook therefore seeks to examine and evaluate the flows of movement within Asia, as well as into and out of the continent. Through in-depth analysis of both empirical and theoretical developments in the field, it includes key examples and trends such as British colonialism, Chinese diaspora, labour migration, the movement of women and recent student migration.

Routledge Handbook of Central Asian Politics

Edited by Reuel R. Hanks, Oklahoma State University, USA and Dilshod Achilov, East Tennessee State University, USA

Written by experts on the region's complex politics, this Handbook provides an in depth understanding of political issues in the five states of Central Asia. It is structured along the themes of security and stability, development of political institutions and national integration, issues in political economy and international relations. This academic Handbook, produced by experts on the region's complex politics, fill a void in the existing literature. It is much needed to provide an in depth understanding of political issues in Central Asia.

The Army and the Indonesian Genocide

Mechanics of Mass Murder

Jess Melvin

Series: Rethinking Southeast Asia

Using documents from the former Indonesian Intelligence Agency's archives in Banda Aceh this book shatters the Indonesian government's official propaganda account of the mass killings and proves the military's agency behind those events. This book tells the story of the 3,000 pages of top-secret documents that comprise the Indonesian genocide files. Drawing upon these orders and records, along with the previously unheard stories of 70 survivors, perpetrators, and other eyewitnesses of the genocide in Aceh province it reconstructs, for the first time, a detailed narrative of the killings using the military's own accounts of these events.

The International Politics of the Asia Pacific

Fourth and Revised Edition

Michael Yahuda, London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London, UK

Series: Politics in Asia

This fully revised fourth edition of Michael Yahuda's extremely successful textbook brings the region fully up-to-date, introducing students to the international politics of the Asia-Pacific region since 1945. As well as assessing the post-cold War uncertainties that challenged balance and power with the region, Yahuda also examines the first two decades of the new millennium which includes no let up on the 'war on terror', new political administrations in all the key player-states and increased cooperative security between some nations, polarised by volatile relationships between others.

The Politics of Decentralisation in Cambodia

Netra Eng, Cambodia Development Resource Institute (CDRI), Cambodia

Series: Rethinking Southeast Asia

This book argues that decentralisation reform in Cambodia has failed to transform the existing power relations necessary to produce democracy, accountability and improved service delivery. It is the first substantive publication on this topic with a focus on the new district system of Cambodia's sub-national governance. It will be of interest to researchers in the fields of decentralisation, public sector reform, the politics of development, local governance, Political Economy and Southeast Asian studies.

The Crisis of Belonging

Debdatta Chowdhury, University of Westminster, London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Diasporas, Migrations and Mobilities

The Partition of Bengal in 1947 resulted in the creation of new states and the India-Bangladesh border. This book examines the lived experiences and perceptions of the people living across the India-Bangladesh border in the years following 1947. The author traces how the people living along this border have experienced and perceived this geographical unique area and complex citizenship status.

Japanese Animation

Transnational Industry and Culture in Asia

Edited by Wong Heung Wah and Marco Pellitteri

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

"Anime", involving hand drawn or computer animation, often characterized by colourful graphics, vibrant characters and fantastical themes, is a quintessentially Japanese art form. Distributed through cinema, television and over the internet it has an enormous following, both in Japan and more widely. This book provides a comprehensive survey of the historical development, industrial structure and technical features of Japanese animation, and of the overall dynamics of its globalization. Specific chapters cover production techniques, "anime" as an "emotion industry" and the involvement of a range of East Asia countries both in the production of and consumption of Japanese animation.

Lives of Muslims in India

Politics, Exclusion and Violence

Edited by Abdul Shaban, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, India

The wide-ranging essays in this volume focus on the intensified exclusionary practices against Indian Muslims, highlighting how, amidst a politics of violence, confusing policy frameworks on caste and class lines, and institutionalised riot systems, the community has also suffered from the lack of leadership from within. It discusses the politics of 'vote bank' and 'appeasement', marginalisation of Muslim women, Muslim Personal Law, and the right to development. Contributed by academics, activists and journalists, the articles discuss issues of integration, exclusion and violence, and attempt to understand categories such as 'identity', 'minority', 'multiculturalism', and 'nationalism'.

Popular Culture and the Formation of Hong Kong Identity

Karin Ling-fung Chau, The University of Hong Kong, Heung Wah Wong, The University of Hong Kong and Hoi-yan Yau, Tsukuba University, Japan

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book charts the development of Hong Kong identity from the Second World War to the present. It argues that understanding popular culture is key to understanding how Hong Kong identity has evolved, and it discusses the various phases that popular culture has gone through in the post-war period. The book examines how the consumption of popular culture has been related to the changing geopolitical situation, to the politics of economic transformation, and to community building. It shows how behind all these aspects of popular culture lies the essential "in-between-ness" of Hong Kong, neither Eastern/traditional/conservative nor Western/modern/liberal.

Social Movements in Taiwan's Democratic Transition

Linking Activists to the Changing Political Environment

Yun Fan, National Taiwan University

Series: Routledge Research on Taiwan Series

Focusing on activists' relationship to the changing political environment, this book analyses the trajectories of three major social movements in Taiwan during the country's democratic transition between 1980 and 2000. Specifically, it explores why the labor and environmental movements became less partisan, while the women's movement became more partisan. Providing a comparative discussion of these key social movements, this book both explores key theoretical questions and presents a rich and comprehensive analysis of social activism during Taiwan's democratic transition.

Transnational Retailing in East Asia

A Japanese Supermarket Chain in Hong Kong and China

Heung-wah Wong

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book explores cross-cultural interaction in East Asia, arguing that globalisation of products and consumer tastes is much more complex than simply homogenisation along Western lines, or local adaption as a reaction against Western products and tastes. It considers specifically how a Japanese supermarket chain, Yaohan, expanded into Hong Kong in the 1980s and mainland China in the 1990s, and how this expansion evolved from initial success to ultimate failure and the company's bankruptcy, relating all this to the changing nature of society, consumerism and shopping in East Asia.

Early Modern East Asia

War, Commerce, and Cultural Exchange

Edited by Kenneth M. Swope and Tonio Andrade, Emory University, USA

Series: Asian States and Empires

This book presents exciting new research on early modern East Asia, exploring maritime connections, technological dissemination, military conflict, and the often-unforeseen consequences of missionary efforts. It demonstrates the benefits of a global history approach, outlining the complex interactions between Western traders and Asian states and entrepreneurs. Its authors also reflect on some big global history questions including the enduring vitality and dynamism of East Asian societies as they grappled with the challenge of the West, the differing diplomatic structures that affected relations between Asians and Europeans, and the rapid increase in the scale and scope of maritime trade.

Citizenship, Community and Democracy in India

From Bombay to Maharashtra, c. 1930 - 1960

Edited by Oliver Godsmark, University of Sheffield, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian History

This book delivers ground-breaking perspectives upon nascent conceptions and workings of citizenship and democracy during the colonial/postcolonial transition. It examines how processes of democratisation and provincialisation during the interwar years contributed to demands and concerns and offers a broadened and imaginative outlook on India's partition. Drawing upon a novel body of archival research, the book ultimately suggests Pakistan might also be considered as just one paradigmatic example of a range of coterminous calls for regional autonomy and statehood, informed by a majoritarian democratic logic that had an extensive contemporary circulation.

Education in Southeast Asia in Modern History

Schools, Manipulation, and Contest

Edited by Pia Maria Jolliffe, University of Oxford, UK and Thomas Richard Bruce, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

Because the West, from the nineteenth century, was the fount of 'modern' methods of public, financial and business administration, 'modern' technology, and certain hegemonic concepts, which constituted 'modern' thought (such as the nation-state and the international system), the extra-European world had to attain these new ways of doing things and did so in a variety of ways. Although this process took place at all levels of society, it was the local elites that took on the responsibility systematically. The establishment of new schooling institutions and curricula was the most tangible manifestation of the post-19th century phenomenon.

Classical Roman and Chinese Empires Compared

Parallel Worlds

Edited by Robert Gardella and Jonathan Perry

This book presents a systematic, comprehensive study of two imperial systems that were arguably the most complex, broadly influential entities to have arisen in antiquity. This text is designed to offer a comparative introduction to the empires of Rome and Qin-Han China, examining the formation, consolidation, further evolution and disintegration of these two complex states. The work represents a timely study in terms of the rapidly growing academic interest in macro-historical, comparative assessments of imperial systems, and translates those understandings into an accessible study that will prove valuable to students, scholars and the general public.

Foreign Policy of Colonial India

1900-1947

Edited by Sneh Mahajan, Indraprastha College for Women, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian History

This book analyses the foreign policy of the British colonial government in India which came to be known as 'the Raj'. Focusing on the relations of the Government of India with states along the territorial rim of the Indian Empire and along the routes that connected Britain with India, the author examines the foreign policy of the Raj during the last fifty years of British rule in India. At the time, India was a resource-rich and huge colony of an island state, Great Britain. Examining the official history of the Raj and based on extensive archival research, the book argues that the foreign policy was designed to serve the interests of the colonial power.

World War Two Legacies in East Asia

China Remembers the War

Chan Yang

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

How to commemorate World War Two in East Asia is a huge source of friction between China and Japan, continuing to cause major difficulties. As this book shows, however, there is also disagreement within these countries as to how to remember the war. Based on extensive original research, the book explores how China's commemoration of the war has evolved over time, moving from "benevolent amnesia" in the early decades following the war, to a more strongly anti-Japanese position in more recent years. It considers particular aspects of commemoration in China, explores the corresponding situation in Japan and discusses the continuing impact on the relationship between the two countries.

Buddhism and Free Will

Rick Repetti, Kingsborough Community College, US

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

This book deals primarily with Buddhism and free will. It brings Buddhist philosophy more explicitly into the Western analytic philosophical discussion of free will, in order both to render more perspicuous Buddhist ideas that might shed light on the Western philosophical debate, on the one hand, and to render more perspicuous the many possible positions on the free will debate that are available to Buddhist philosophy, on the other hand. The author critically reviews the extant literature on the subject from an analytic philosophical perspective and in light of broader Buddhist doctrine as well as by reference to primary sources in canonical and authoritative Buddhist texts.

Buddhism and Gandhara

An Archaeology of Museum Collections

Edited by Himanshu Prabha Ray, Project Mausam, Indira Gandhi National Centre for the Arts, India; Honorary Professor, Munich Graduate School of Ancient Studies, Germany; Research Fellow, Oxford Centre for Hindu Studies, UK

Series: Archaeology and Religion in South Asia

This book re-examines the archaeological material excavated in the region in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and traces the link between archaeological work, histories of museum collections and related interpretations by art historians. The essays in the volume underscore the diverse cultural traditions of Gandhara as well as interrogate the grand narrative of Hellenism of which Gandhara has been a part. The book explores the making of collections of what came to be described as Gandhara art and reviews the Buddhist artistic tradition through notions of mobility and dynamic networks of transmission.

Divinizing in South Asian Traditions

Edited by Diana Dimitrova, University of Montreal, Canada and Tatiana Oranskaia, University of Hamburg, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

The book explores the question of divinizing from the 2nd century CE up to present-day in both North and South India. Written by experts in the field of South Asian religion the chapters discuss the issue both from the perspective of textual study and ideological analysis as well as from the perspective of anthropological analysis. Both insider- and outsider perspectives are represented. Applying theoretical models of religious and cultural studies to discuss texts written in South Asian languages and engage in critical dialogue with current scholarship in Asia and beyond, this book is an indispensable study of literary, religious and cultural production in South Asia.

Hinduism in Colonial Bengal

Beyond the Renaissance

Edited by Ferdinando Sardella, Stockholm University, Sweden and Lucian Wong, Oxford University, UK

Series: Routledge Hindu Studies Series

This book offers an overview of the Bengali Vaishnava tradition within the pivotal context of colonial Bengal. Contrary to other studies, which have paid attention to a now familiar host of figures and currents of religious reform associated with the so-called Bengal or Hindu 'Renaissance', this book sheds light on the significant role of pre-existing Hindu religious communities (sampradāya) in this context.

Modern Hindu Traditionalism in Contemporary India

The Sri Math and the Jagadguru Ramanandacarya in the Evolution of the Ramanandi Sampradaya

Daniela Bevilacqua, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Hindu Studies Series

This book provides an in-depth understanding of Modern Hindu Traditionalism through the case study of the Rāmānandī order (sampradāya) and the portrait of the Jagadgurū Rāmānandācārya Rāmnaresācārya. This guru belongs to the ancient tradition of the Rāmānandī order, which is active at the present time and the biggest religious order in Northern India. Analysing the historical evolution of the Rāmānandī order, the author shows how different centres have undergone changes over the centuries, and focuses on the independence struggle of a group of Rāmānandīs from the Rāmānūjis, which led to the creation of the role of Jagadgurū Rāmānandācārya and the construction of the Śrī Math.

Religion, Space and Conflict in Sri Lanka

Colonial and Postcolonial Contexts

Elizabeth J. Harris

Series: Routledge South Asian Religion Series

This book uses the lens of space to examine inter-religious and inter-communal conflict in colonial and post-colonial Sri Lanka, demonstrating that the colonial can shed light on the post-colonial, particularly on post-war developments, post-May 2009, when Buddhist symbolism was controversially developed in the former, largely non-Buddhist, war zones. Using the concepts of exclusivism and inclusivist subordination, the book analyses the different imaginaries or world views that were present in colonial and post-1948 Sri Lanka, with particular reference to the ethnic or religious Other, and how these were expressed in space, influenced one another and engendered conflict.

Ritual and Liturgy in Esoteric Chinese Buddhism

Tantric Subjects

Charles Orzech, University of Glasgow, UK

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

This book reconceptualizes the historiography of East Asian Buddhism by shifting the focus of analysis from philosophical texts and doctrine to ritual and practice. The author analyses 7th century manuals for performing ritual consecrations which were designed to install a deity in a disciple and to make that disciple a vehicle for divine action. These rituals have often been designated "tantric". Here, they are examined from the perspective of subject formation in the practice of ritual, not from the perspective of sectarian identification in doctrine. The author argues that the new "tantric" rites are developments of earlier practices surrounding ordination and the use of visions.

Ritual Journeys in South Asia

Constellations and Contestations of Mobility and Space

Edited by Jürgen Schaflechner, University of Heidelberg, Germany and Christoph Bergmann, University of Heidelberg, Germany

This book analyses and compares a wider and loosely connected range of phenomena, of which pilgrimage is only one special instance, namely ritual journeys. Establishing a new analytical framework for the study of ritual journeys, contributions focus on South Asian regions that have been largely understudied. The book engages with recent theoretical advances and broadens the scope of 'classical' Pilgrimage Studies in South Asia by presenting individual case studies on, thus giving it empirical depth.

The Transformation of Tamil Religion

Ramalinga Swamikal and Modern Dravidian Sainthood

Srilata Raman, University of Michigan, USA

Series: Routledge South Asian Religion Series

This book analyses the articulations of Tamil identity in the period of colonial modernity and beyond. It examines the development of Tamil religion by focusing on the important 19th century Tamil Hindu reformer and saint, Ramalinga Swamikal. The book presents him as inhabiting a "border" zone between early modernity and modernity, tradition and charisma, Hinduism and Christianity, indigenous identity (Dravidian nationalism) and colonialism. The book argues that these transformations are one meaningful way for a religious tradition to cope with and come to terms with the implications of historicization and the demands of colonial modernity.

Theravada Buddhism in Colonial Contexts

Edited by Thomas Borchert

Series: Routledge Critical Studies in Buddhism

The chapters in this book examine the many different colonial contexts and regimes that Theravada Buddhists experienced, not just those of European powers such as the British, French, but also the internal colonialism of China and Thailand. They show that while many Buddhists resisted colonialism, other Buddhists shared agendas with colonial powers, such as for the reform of the monastic community. They also show that in some places, such as Singapore and Malaysia, colonialism enabled the creation of Theravada Buddhist communities. The book demonstrates the importance of thinking about colonialism both locally and regionally.

Development and Large-scale mining in the Asia-Pacific

Unearthing Development

Glenn Banks, Massey University, New Zealand

Series: Routledge Pacific Rim Geographies

Large-scale mining is one of the most controversial contemporary development enterprises in the Asia-Pacific. Despite a number of high-profile social, environmental and human rights controversies connected with the mining industry, it continues to be an integral part of the economies and development planning of most countries in the Asia-Pacific region. Focusing on Melanesia, this book looks at a range of issues connected with the mining industry that resonate across the region, relating to environment, corporations, labour, economy, and community.

Jakarta

Claiming spaces and rights in the city

Edited by Jorgen Hellman, Marie Thynell and Roanne van Voorst, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Series: Routledge Research on Urban Asia

Including chapters written by contributors who have lived and worked in Jakarta for years, this book shows how urban space in Jakarta is increasingly created by the entanglement of different layers that co-exist in political and socio-economic life, with actors criss-crossing between formal and informal spheres. In each case the authors explore who are the drivers of urban change, and what are the processes in shaping the current and future city of Jakarta. Not denying that former elites are still a critical force in shaping Jakarta, the book analyses to what extent former stakeholders are undermined, and what types of new authorities or social institutions are emerging.

Routledge Handbook of Asian Borderlands

Edited by Alexander Horstmann, Martin Saxer, Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich, Germany and Alessandro Rippa, Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich, Germany

In Asia, where authoritarian-developmental states have proliferated, statehood and social control are heavily contested in borderland spaces. The contributors to the handbook highlight some of the processes taking place at the edge or fringe of the state and showcase how centering the margins may contribute to our understanding of central categories in our scholarly thinking, such as territory, sovereignty, state and economy. The topics of the reconfigurations of the economy and the state in the borderlands are dealt with from a point of view of agency, practices, milieu, enclaves, identity and belonging. They articulate many other topics of experience, such as violence, memory and mobility.

Gender Justice and Proportionality in India

Comparative Perspectives

Juliette Gregory Duara, Duke University, US
Series: Routledge Advances in South Asian Studies

This book deals with Gender Justice and Proportionality Analysis in India. The author argues that the Supreme Court of India should consider adopting Proportionality Analysis for the adjudication of the fundamental right to sex equality in Indian courts. The book includes an analysis of Canadian and South African Proportionality Analysis and makes some suggestions on how Indian Proportionality Analysis could be modified.

Law and Society in Malaysia

Pluralism, Religion and Ethnicity

Edited by Andrew Harding, Andrew Harding, National University of Singapore and Dian A. H. Shah
Series: Routledge Law in Asia

This book provides a systematic and interdisciplinary examination of law and legal institutions in Malaysia. It examines Malaysian legal issues from historical, social and political perspectives, and discusses the role of law in relation to Malaysian multiculturalism, religion, politics and society. It shows how the Malaysian legal system is at the heart of debates about how to deal with Malaysia's problems which include ethnic and religious divisions, uneven and unsustainable development, and political authoritarianism; and the book argues that the Malaysian legal system has much to teach other plural polities, nations within the common law tradition, and federal states.

The Judicialization of Politics in Pakistan

A Comparative Study of Judicial Restraint and its Development in India, the US and Pakistan

Waris Husain, Howard University School of Law, US

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book analyses the Pakistani judiciary through the important lens of comparative politics. It uses the counter-examples of India and the United States in order to present a justiciability standard and procedure for the Supreme Court of Pakistan to adopt. Beginning by tracing the varying development of judicial review in each country based on the impact of colonial judicial systems, the author moves onto comparing the roles of the courts in each country as envisioned by their respective Constitutional Founders.

Writing Chinese Laws

The Form and Function of Legal Statutes Found in the Qin Shuihudi Corpus

Ernest Caldwell, SOAS, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Law

This book utilizes a function and form approach, informed by law and society and legal linguistics theories, to examine two specific features of written law in Qin legal culture as evidenced by the Shuihudi legal corpus. First, it questions how the Qin conceptualized the function of law, specifically written legal statutes. Second, it examines the physical and linguistic form of Qin legal statutes. Drawing on the work of legal linguists, it argues that the intended function and intended audience of a text directly influence a text's physical and linguistic composition. This book will attempt to elucidate the role of writing in the conceptualization and composition of written law in Qin.

Ahmadiyya Islam and the Muslim Diaspora

Living in the End of Days

Marzia Balzani

Series: Routledge/Asian Studies Association of Australia (ASAA) South Asian Series

This book is a study of the British Ahmadi Muslims and of the complex nexus of religious, social and political forces within which they maintain their faith and community. Unlike most new religious movements that do not usually survive the death of a charismatic leader, the Ahmadi Muslims have not only endured but thrived and become a truly global community. It is in part precisely because they are a persecuted minority faith group that the Ahmadi Muslims have had to organize to defend their faith and find new and effective ways to protect their members and to sustain and grow their community.

Asylum-Seeking Journeys in Asia

Refugees in Hong Kong and Bangkok

Chun Tat Terence Shum, Technological and Higher Education Institute of Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Series on Asian Migration

This book examines the actual exilic process from homelands to Hong Kong or Thailand, in particular Bangkok and the processes of 'becoming' and 'being' a refugee. By focusing on the migration and asylum-seeking journeys as the center of ethnography and analysis, the book brings to the fore the process and events of the asylum-seeking journey itself and the social worlds of refugees. Instead of concentrating on what happened before the migratory decision or after the arrival of the refugees in the receiving societies, the author examines the multiple, long and difficult exile journeys refugees often undertake before arriving in the host society.

Change and Continuity in the Pacific

Revisiting the Region

Edited by John Connell, The University of Sydney, Australia and Helen Lee, La Trobe University, Australia

Series: Routledge Pacific Rim Geographies

The contributors to this book have all conducted long term research in the islands of the Pacific. During their visits and revisits they have witnessed first-hand the many changes that have occurred in their field sites as well as observing elements of continuity. They bring to their accounts a sense of their surprise at some of the unexpected elements of stability and of transformation. The authors take a range of disciplinary approaches, particularly geography and anthropology, and their contributions reflect their deep knowledge of Pacific places, some first visited more than 40 years ago.

High School for All in East Asia

Comparing Experiences

Edited by Shinichi Aizawa, Mei Kagawa and Jeremy Rappeleye

Series: Routledge Studies in Education and Society in Asia

This book focuses on the universalization of upper secondary school across the region, using it as a vantage point to understand the foundations of the region's economic development. Through chapters covering each of the countries in East Asia, it traces how upper secondary school supported the mass manufacturing labor force instrumental in East Asian economic expansion. Revealing the interrelationships between high economic growth and domestic expansion of upper secondary school, these analyses compare and contrast the experiences of these nations along two major axes: the relationship between public and private provision and the balance between general and vocational tracks.

Indian Philosophy and Meditation

Perspectives on Consciousness

Rahul Banerjee and Amita Chatterjee, Jadavpur University, Kolkata, India.

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

This book provides a detailed analysis of classical and modern Indian views on consciousness along with their related meditative methods. It offers a critical analysis of three distinct trends of Indian thought, viz., a dualistic mode of understanding and realizing consciousness in Hindu, an interactive mode in early Buddhist abhidharma, and the evolutionary transformational mode in the teachings of the twentieth-century sage Sri Aurobindo. This book explores the unifying features in Indian first person practices with regard to consciousness and the importance of these applied psychological practices and

Postmodernism and Contemporary Chinese Avant-Garde Fiction

Yongchun Cai, Macau University of Science and Technology

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book examines the work of a group of young avant garde fiction writers who emerged on the Chinese literary scene from the mid-1980s onwards. Exhibiting strategies of anti-mainstream, anti-paradigmatic discourse these writers debunked the traditional literary conventions of a hitherto very closed Chinese society using literary modes such as metafiction, narrative strategy and postmodernist language. This book will help its readers to understand why the Chinese avant garde were so closely related to Chinese politics, and how they played a role in bringing social and cultural change in China.

Protecting the Weak in East Asia

Framing, Mobilisation and Institutionalisation in East Asia

Edited by Iwo Amelung, Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Moritz Bälz, Goethe University Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Heike Holbig, Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Cornelia Storz and Matthias Schumann-Brandau

Series: Routledge Contemporary Asia Series

This book probes into the paradigmatic shift taking place simultaneously in public debates in both Western and East Asian societies about who and what should be protected, and, from a broader perspective, the questions of why and how. Using case studies on disaster victims, employee well-being, cultural heritage and animal welfare in Japan and China, the book analytically distinguishes between framing, mobilisation and institutionalisation processes, and examines these processes at the intersections of international and domestic spheres. Overall, the volume makes significant contributions to the socio-political, economic, legal and cultural transformation of East Asian societies.

Restorative Justice in Asia Pacific

Development, Implementation and Implications

Edited by Lennon Chao-Yang Chang, City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, Dennis Sing-Wing Wong and Brian Steels, Curtin University, Australia

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Law

This book is an essential resource in the study of restorative justice – an approach to understanding and managing crime that has gained popularity since the 1980s. Based on the greatly successful International Symposium on Restorative Justice, it brings together a myriad of officials from different institutions and jurisdictions in the Asia Pacific Region who analyse restorative practices and solutions which have been implemented in the fields of disputes, juvenile justice and prison management, amongst others. Individual chapters and contributors also provide insights into the future direction of restorative justice throughout the region.

Television in Transition in East Asia

Ki-Sung Kwak

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

This book examines the development of television broadcasting in Japan, Hong Kong and South Korea. It explores the policy regimes guiding the development of television broadcasting as a powerful institution, and analyses the relative importance in the different countries of cable, satellite, digital broadcasting, and the use of the Internet for purposes associated with television broadcasting. The nature of television regimes in each of the three countries is very different, and the contrasting situations provide great insights into how television is developing, and how it could develop further, both in East Asia and worldwide.

Urban Planning in Hong Kong

The Space and Logic of the Vertically Integrated City

Zheng Tan, Tongji University, China

Series: Routledge Research on Urban Asia

This book examines vertical urbanism in the context of Hong Kong's environmental design practice and its related historical context and regulatory environment. It raises questions about the assumptions and foundations in planning practices in the West, where there is an abnormal absence of a formal theory for planning in the vertical dimension. Three interconnected factors underlying the urban scene of Hong Kong are discussed: market logic, planning policy, and a culture of proximity. It defines the institutional characteristics of the East Asian urban form, including collective consumption, alternative building paradigms, and spatial operation of interiorized public life.

China's Global Political Economy

Managerial Perspectives

Edited by Robert Taylor, Sheffield University, UK and Jacques Jaussaud, University of Pau, France

Series: Routledge Studies on Comparative Asian Politics

Examining changes in the management strategies of foreign companies investing in China and Chinese enterprises doing business overseas, this book analyses China's political economy in the context of the Communist Party's changing policies. The introductory section begins by studying the aspects of economic growth as it impacts on domestic issues and Chinese power abroad. Within this overall framework, it also critically assesses foreign investment, business strategies, human resources and corporate social responsibility. Arguing that the encouragement of consumption is a significant objective of the Chinese leadership, the last section is concerned with the importance of the food industry.

China's Virtual Monopoly in Rare Earth Elements

Roland Howanietz

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Rare Earth Elements are a group of 17 metals which have a central role in modern industry, increasingly used in green technologies, high technological consumer goods, industrial and medical appliances and modern weapons systems. Although deposits of Rare Earths are globally dispersed, over 90% of global demand has been provided by Chinese mines since the late 1990s, leading to China having a virtual monopoly. This book surveys the Rare Earths mining industry, discusses the extent to which Rare Earths really are scarce elsewhere in the world and assesses the economics of production, demonstrating the vulnerability of the rest of the world to China's control of these vital resources.

Chinese Private Manufacturing Firms

The Challenges of Global Competition

Xiao Chen

Series: Routledge Studies on the Chinese Economy

Since the beginning of China's economic reform, private manufacturing firms have played an indispensable role in the country's economic development. This book, based on extensive original research, explores the current development challenges for Chinese private manufacturing firms as China's integration with the global economy deepens. At the heart of the book are rich case studies of private manufacturing firms in the footwear and electrical equipment industries in the city of Wenzhou, which was where private enterprise in China was pioneered. Particular subjects covered include competition, the interaction of foreign and indigenous firms, and the role of industrial development areas.

Economic Policy Making In China (1949–2016)

The Role of Economists

Pieter Bottelier

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book explores the key ideas and the key people who were responsible for the development of China's economy from 1949 to the present. It discusses how economic policy evolved, how economic policy was formulated and how the role of economists in decision making evolved. It considers the interplay between ideological and practical questions, provides biographical details of the key economists and includes a clear annotated chronology of events. The book is especially valuable because the author, as a senior World Bank official, was a close observer of the situation and to some extent a key participant.

Financial Liberalization in China

Progress, Issues and Challenges

Edited by Hui Feng

Series: Routledge Studies on the Chinese Economy

Capital account liberalization is a key, complicated issue for the Chinese economy. Free flow of capital has been an essential part of the neo-liberal international economic system, but it is nevertheless understood in East Asia that free flow of capital was a crucial factor in deepening the Asian economic crisis of 1997, and the risks as well as the benefits are therefore fully appreciated. This book explores the steps which China has taken so far to implement capital account liberalization, discusses the extent to which China continues to exercise control, and assesses the current debates surrounding the issue and how they are likely to play out.

Rural Development and China's Rise

Reinventing a Market Tradition

Shaohua Zhan, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book examines contemporary rural development in China from a historical perspective and contends that the economic resilience has had much to do with the rural economy, weaving together the methods of historical comparison, multilevel analysis and case study. It examines the recent transformation of Chinese agriculture and rural industry, along with related issues such as labor migration and urbanization. In addition, it is built on the author's years of field research in Wujin county in Jiangsu province and Aohan county in eastern Inner Mongolia.

Wind Power In China

Julia Kirkegaard

Series: Routledge Studies on the Chinese Economy

Whilst China's growing economy is responsible for severe environmental degradation and relies heavily on fossil fuel energy, China is at the same time a leader in new green technology. This book explores the interplay in China between economic growth, new sustainable energy, the import of foreign technology, the political decision making process, and the economics of energy pricing and its impact. Although the book focuses on wind power, the analysis has much wider implications. One key observation is the growing importance of advanced software technology for managing, pricing and keeping sustainable new sources of energy, for which China is very dependent on foreign expertise.

Tradition and Transformation in a Chinese Family Business

Heung-Wah Wong, The University of Hong Kong and Karin Ling-fung Chau

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

Family businesses have been an important part of the economy in Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore and the Chinese diaspora, and, since the reforms, in mainland China itself. Some people have argued that the success of Chinese family businesses occurs because of the special characteristics and approach of such businesses. This book examines the nature of Chinese family business, considering the motivations and strategies of Chinese people setting up their own businesses, discussing company management and relations between family members. It charts the evolution of Chinese family businesses and discusses how Chinese family business are likely to evolve in the future.

China's Architecture in a Globalizing World

Between Socialism and the Market

Jiawen Han, Xi'an Jiaotong-Liverpool University, China
Series: Routledge Studies on China in Transition

China is currently in the midst of an unprecedented building boom and indeed interest in Chinese contemporary architecture has been fuelled by this huge expansion. Through a cutting edge theoretical discussion of Chinese architecture in relation to Chinese modernity, this book examines this phenomenon in detail. In particular, it highlights how changes in the social-political system, the residual influence of Mao and the demands of the market have each shaped and determined style and form in recent years.

China's Social Welfare Revolution

Contracting Out Social Services

Edited by Lei Jie and Chak Kwan Chan

Series: Comparative Development and Policy in Asia

The Chinese government has recently adopted a radical welfare approach by contracting out social services to non-governmental organisations. This is a big departure from its traditional welfare model, whereby all public services were directly delivered by government agencies. This book examines this new welfare approach. It analyses the implementation of various types of services, considers the nature and approach of the contracted NGOs, and explores major problems encountered by both government agencies and NGOs. The book also compares contracting policies in different cities. Overall, the book provides an overview of one of the most important welfare policy changes in contemporary China.

China's Housing Middle Class

Changing Urban Life in Gated Communities

Beibei Tang

Series: Routledge Studies on China in Transition

Home ownership plays a significant role in locating the middle class in most western societies, associated with consumerism and "people like us". In China, since 1949 private home ownership was not the norm. In the past three decades, however, there has been a fast growing housing consumption and private homeowners have become the most significantly changing aspect of urban life. Providing empirical evidence of the heterogeneity of China's new middle class, which underlines the relations between the state, market and life chances under a socialist market economy, this book it will be of interest to students and scholars of Chinese society, sociology and politics.

Chinese Television and National Identity Construction

The Cultural Politics of Music-Entertainment Programmes

Lauren Gorfinkel

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

This book examines music entertainment programmes on China Central Television, China's only national level television network, as well as on nationally-available provincial channels, exploring how such programmes project a nuanced image of China's identity and position in the world, which is in step with China's party-state nationalism, and at the same time flexible and open to change as China's circumstances change. Overall, the book demonstrates how the variations of Chinese identity fit with the prevailing political ideologies in China and with the emerging theme of a China-centred world.

Cultural Policies and Identity Formation in Taiwan and Hong Kong

Heeung Wah Wong, Hoi Yan Yau and Karin Ling-fung Chau

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

Although Taiwan and Hong Kong are both Chinese societies previously subjected to colonial rule, the identity formation of the two peoples differs significantly, with Taiwan's modern consciousness underpinned by nationalism and Chinese-ness whereas Hong Kong's identity is characterised by the "in-between-ness" between Eastern/traditional/conservative and Western/modern/liberal outlooks and lifestyles. This book examines how these different identities came about. It considers the impact of Japanese and British colonial rule, explores the cultural policies implemented both in colonial times and after, and discusses fully the nature of present day identity and consciousness in the two places.

Digital Media and Informal Cultures in China

Elaine Jing Zhao

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

Digital media in China is at the same time both structured, formal and government-sponsored and also amateur, informal and market-driven. This book explores the tensions between these two different ways of looking at digital media in China. It examines particular technologies such as smart phones and mobile apps, outlining their technological capacities and the market for them. It then considers the actual usage of such technologies, such as the posting of on-line videos and the take-up of mobile taxi apps. Overall, the book provides a rich picture of the culture of digital media and indicates how digital media in China is likely to develop going forward.

Disability Identity and Marriage in Rural China

Jing Yang, Guizhou University, China

Series: Routledge Research on Social Work, Social Policy and Social Development in Greater China

Based on data collected through in-depth fieldwork and interviews in Bai Township, this book examines how women with disabilities in rural Southwest China compensate for their disability identity through marriage. As the first book to theorize the married life of rural women with different disabilities, it traces the marriage process from mate selection to wedding ceremony, reproduction and role performance. It also generates a substantive theory grounded in the real experiences with Jing Yang arguing that these women are not passive victims in the marital process, but active agents who endeavour to minimize the risk of abuse and maximize security in their marriage.

Illicit Industries and China's Shadow Economy

Illicit Industries and China's Shadow Economy: Challenges and Prospects for Global Governance and Human Security

Edited by Victor Teo and Yoon Sungwon

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book considers a wide range of illicit industries in China, exploring what drives such activities, why consumers tolerate them to differing degrees, how attempts to regulate them are implemented and how such regulation is resisted. Industries considered include human smuggling, the trade in human organs, illicit pharmaceuticals, illicit fishing, illicit logging, unregulated lending and more. Throughout, the book discusses how the shadow economy works, analyses the degree to which illicit activities are regarded as criminal and highlights the importance of the shadow economy for certain regions of China and certain sections of Chinese society.

Midwifery in China

Ngai Fen Cheung and Rosemary Mander, University of Edinburgh, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book will examine the issues which are raised by a detailed scrutiny of the history of midwifery in China, demonstrating how an occupational group may lose and eventually regain its identity and function. The first theme covered is the role of women and the education and competence of midwives. The second theme is the professionalisation of Chinese midwifery which is associated with the extension of the formal health care sector. The third theme, the development of Chinese midwifery indicates an urgent need for an updated policy of support from the state health authorities. The fourth theme scrutinises the impact of the Western medical model of health care on Chinese midwifery.

New Chinese Migrants in New Zealand

Becoming Cosmopolitan? Roots, Emotions and Everyday Diversity

Bingyu Wang, Sun Yat Sen University, China

Series: Chinese Worlds

There are growing waves of 'desirable' migrants from Asia moving to New Zealand significantly increasing its ethnic diversity, particularly in its largest metropolitan region Auckland. In purely demographic terms much of this diversity has been generated by policy shifts since the 1980s and the adoption of a comparatively liberal immigration policy based on personal merit without discrimination on the grounds of race, national or ethnic origin. Due to these changes, migrants from Asia have become increasingly significant in migration flows into New Zealand making it a valuable case study for understanding how Chinese migrants assimilate into and affect their host nation.

Post-Western Sociology - From China to Europe

Edited by Laurence Roulleau-Berger and Li Peilin

Series: China Policy Series

This book is rooted in an epistemological approach to sociology in which the boundaries between Western and non-Western sociologies are acknowledged and built on. It argues that the blurring of boundaries between Western and non-Western sociologies is very important; and that such a Post-Western approach will mean co-production and co-construction of common knowledge, the recognition of ignored or forgotten scientific cultures and a "global change" in sociology. The book brings together a wide range of Western and Chinese sociologists who explore the consequences of this new approach in relation to many different issues and aspects of sociology.

The Transformation of Marriage and Social Inequality in Post-Reform China

Yingchun Ji, Shanghai University

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Ji uses both interview and survey data to analyse the nature and extent of the "leftover" women phenomenon in China. She argues that it is mainly a social construction and that the reality has become distorted in the Chinese popular imagination. Moreover, she explores the connections between the phenomena of urban "leftover" women and rural "surplus" men in China's marriage market. The book shows how marriage mismatch has transformed marriage as a traditional social institution in China and deepened the social stratification in Chinese society.

Germany's Colony in China

Colonialism, Protection and Economic Development in Qingdao and Shandong, 1898-1914

Wai Ling So

This book explores the economic development of the northern Chinese city of Qingdao, which was held by Germany as a colony from 1898 to 1914. It focuses especially on the economic policies of the German colonial government and of the provincial government of the neighbouring Chinese province of Shandong, considering amongst other issues free trade and protection, the impact of the Gold Standard and assistance given to particular companies. The book shows how the Qingdao and Shandong economies fitted into overall East Asian and global trade patterns and concludes by discussing both the co-operation and the tensions between the Qingdao and Shandong governments.

Model Workers in China, 1949-1965

Constructing A New Citizen

James Farley

Series: Routledge Studies in Modern History

Seismic changes in ideology and economic policy in China followed the death of Mao Zedong but one aspect of culture that has remained constant. The use of 'Model Workers' in both a political and commercial context continues to thrive in China and although the messages they promote have largely changed, their continued use indicates the extent to which they are believed to be an effective form of persuasion. Model Workers were deployed at key points in China's recent history and served to embody the Party's vision of the ideal Chinese citizen as they attempted to reshape the nation following a, 'century of humiliation', a ruinous war with Japan and a divisive civil war.

The Collapse of China's Later Han Dynasty, 25-220 CE

The Northwest Borderlands and the Edge of Empire

Wicky W K Tse

Series: Asian States and Empires

In the Later Han period China's northwest was a porous frontier zone between the Chinese regimes and their inner Asian neighbours, with a large concentration of men of martial background. This book relates how this military elite, originally honoured by the imperial centre, was marginalised during the Later Han period by the ascendancy of eastern-based scholar-officials and the consequent increased emphasis on civil values and de-militarization, and how, from the ensuing tensions and resentment, followed the disintegration of the empire.

China and Transboundary Water Politics in Asia

Edited by Hongzhou Zhang, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore and Mingjiang Li, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Series: Politics in Asia

This book aims to systematically examine the complex reality of water contestations between China and its neighboring countries. It provides a discussion on transboundary hydro-politics beyond the state-centric geopolitical perspective to dig into various political, institutional, legal, historical, geographical, and demographic factors that affect China's policies and practices towards transboundary water issues. The book also provides a collection of comparative case studies on China's water resources management. Furthermore, this book sheds light on China's future role in global water governance.

China Reclaims World Power Status

Putting an end to the world America made

Paolo Urio

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Using both Chinese and Western theoretical approaches, this book analyses China's strategies for reclaiming power in the international domain. Examining China's domestic development, it also considers the strengths and weaknesses of its major international opponent, the US, and analyses their competing approaches to power resources. It studies the foreign policies of both states, first by going back to the historical origins of their ideological foundations and secondly by analysing their power building from the 19th century to the Trump and Jinping presidencies. Finally, this book focuses on the One Belt One Road Initiative as China's response to putting an end to the 'world

China's Financial Opening

Coalition Politics and Policy Changes

Yu Wai Vic Li, Education University of Hong Kong

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Li interrogates the domestic political dynamics underlying the dizzying switches between liberalization and restriction. This book argues that the interplay between the pro-opening coalitions and dissenting parties has been central to the policymaking process. Financial opening has not only been driven by central bureaucratic actors, but also by financial industry interests and the local authorities of financial centers acting in concert as coalitions.

China's Hydro-politics in the Mekong

Conflict and Cooperation in Light of Securitization Theory

Sebastian Biba, Goethe University, Frankfurt am Main, Germany

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book explores the conflict and cooperation over water use in the Mekong river basin between China and the countries of Laos, Thailand, Cambodia, and Vietnam. It scrutinizes the 'spring 2010 Mekong crisis' and events surrounding it which led to a series of complex multi-level, security-related interactions with China at the center. The book employs securitization theory as its theoretical framework and adds innovations to this theory. It embeds China's Mekong hydro-politics in the bigger picture of its (sub-)regional international affairs and provides new insights into the role of hydro-politics and its relationship vis-à-vis other issue areas of China's foreign policy.

China's Relations with Central and Eastern Europe

From "Old Comrades" to New Partners

Edited by Weiqing Song, University of Macau, Macao SAR, China

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

As China rises as an economic and an international power, new relationships are being forged with all areas of the world including Central and Eastern Europe. This book explores how this relationship is developing. It considers how China's links with Central and Eastern Europe fit in to China's overall international relations strategies. It looks at economic and trade ties, diplomatic initiatives and the role of the European Union, and examines China's bilateral relations with the different states of the region. These relationships are particularly interesting because before the end of communism in Eastern Europe China had many direct links with the countries of the region.

Ronald C. Keith

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

Deng Xiaoping is widely acknowledged as the principal architect of China's economic reforms, but how far was he also responsible for shaping China's foreign policy which emphasized "peace and development"? This book explores Deng's foreign policy and shows how he established basic principles for a foreign policy which supported economic development, "harmony" in the world, and a peaceful approach. It outlines how Deng worked to normalize relations with both the United States and the Soviet Union, how he was disappointed by the United States' response, where relations are still portrayed in terms of "the China threat", and how the principles established by Deng continue to be adhered to.

Yanwei Li

Series: China Policy Series

Environmental conflicts are the source of many large-scale popular protests in China, with some protests substantially endangering social order. Such protests have often prompted severe counter measures but have often then gone on to result in compromises whereby the demands of protesters have been largely met. This book considers the nature of environmental conflicts in China and the way in which the authorities have handled the situations. It includes detailed case studies of particular conflicts, relates the governance of environmental conflicts in China to wider discussions on the nature of governance and examines under what conditions government in China makes compromises.

Edited by Yingjie Guo

Series: Routledge Studies on China in Transition

This book provides fresh insights into the study of Chinese elites at the county level and below. By shifting the analytical focus onto the agency of elites at the local level and away from the institutional structures within which they operate, it fills a number of significant gaps in the field. In particular, this book addresses the lacunae through an empirically rich and diverse set of case studies. It proceeds from the premise that the study of local elites can be most fruitful through examining their relations with each other and with the groups that wield power in the community.

Rural Roots of Reform Before China's Conservative Change

Lynn White, Princeton University, USA

A pervasive theme of current China scholarship is the country's "rise." The present book does not reject this discourse, which emerged mainly after 1989 and has been dominant for a quarter century. But new analysis in this book finds evidence for thinking beyond these concepts: from "rise" to a more balanced view that also accounts China's needs in international ecologies and economies, from top-down "governance" to the discovery that powerful changes in China (including the first reforms) were started by leaders in small polities not mainly the national one, from "resilience" to an exploration of what exactly will last or falter over predictable spans of time.

The China-Japan Conflict over the Senkaku/Diaoyu Islands

Useful Rivalry

Anna Costa

Series: Routledge Security in Asia Series

This book examines the foreign and security policies adopted by China and Japan since the 1970s in their competition over the Senkaku/Diaoyu Islands in the East China Sea. It charts the development of a dispute that has become a potential flashpoint for conflict between the two countries. The book explains that while increasing nationalism in both China and Japan helps to fuel and sustain the dispute, a key factor is that the leaderships in both countries find competition over the islands to be a convenient vehicle supporting their wider approach to foreign and security policy, which is becoming increasingly assertive and potentially belligerent.

Louis Augustin-Jean, Hong Kong Polytechnic University and Anthea H.Y. Cheung, Hong Kong Polytechnic University

Series: Routledge Contemporary China Series

This book examines the ways in which Hong Kong's changing position with global capitalism was the catalyst for the Umbrella Movement, stressing the role of economic and social factors behind the movement, as opposed to the domestic political and constitutional issues often assumed to be the root cause behind the movement. It will appeal to students and scholars interested in Hong Kong's political, economic and social landscape, as well as those interested in Chinese politics more broadly.

Daoism in Modern China

Edited by Vincent Goossaert, Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, France and Xun Liu, Rutgers University, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Taoism

The modern history of Chinese temples and Daoism go hand in hand, and while both temples and Daoists serve Chinese society, the relationship between the two has yet to be thoroughly analysed. This book questions whether temples and Daoism are two independent aspects of modern Chinese religion, or if they are indissolubly linked. Using an interdisciplinary approach combining historical research and fieldwork, the book focuses on urban centres in China, as this is where socio-political changes came earliest and affected religious life to the greatest extent, and also where the largest central Daoist temples were and are located.

Religious Revival and Chinese Ethnic Minorities

The Bai People of Southwest China

Liang Yongjia, National University of Singapore

Series: Routledge Religion in Contemporary Asia Series

This book, based on extensive original research among the Bai people, a people with a population of around five million, considers how majority-minority ethnic relations have evolved over time. It discusses amongst many other issues how local religions emphasise ancestor cults which reinforce minorities' sense of their separate ethnicity, and concludes by assessing how these important issues are likely to develop.

Why Traditional Chinese Philosophy Still Matters

The Relevance of Ancient Wisdom for the Global Age

Edited by Ming Dong Gu, University of Texas at Dallas, USA

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

Written by a team of internationally renowned scholars, this book, however, challenges this judgement and offers an in-depth study of pre-modern Chinese philosophy from an interdisciplinary perspective. Discussing the relevance of traditional Chinese philosophy for the global age, it takes a comparative approach, analysing ancient Chinese thought in relation to Western ideas and contemporary postmodernist theories. It covers a broad scope of topics ranging from metaphysics, hermeneutics, political theory, religion and aesthetics to specific philosophical schools including Confucianism, Taoism, Buddhism and the Book of Changes.

Animism in Contemporary Japan

Shoko Yoneyama

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

The book explores the notion of animism through the lens of four prominent figures in Japan: Minamata fisherman Ogata Masato, Minamata writer Ishimure Michiko, sociologist Tsurumi Kazuko, and animator Miyazaki Hayao. It contends that animism is at the core of the work of these people who represent contemporary Japan in the fields of citizens' movements, literature, sociology and popular culture, respectively; and that animism is the conclusion they came up with as a means to survive modernity. Adopting a biographical approach, the book aims to illuminate animism, and thus address two big lacuna in social science: human-nature relationships and the question of soul and spirituality.

Escaping Japan

Reflections on Estrangement and Exile in the Twenty-First Century

Edited by Blai Guarné and Paul Hansen

Series: Japan Anthropology Workshop Series

The idea that Japan is a socially homogenous, uniform society has been increasingly challenged in recent years. This book takes the resulting view further by highlighting how Japan, far from singular or monolithic, is socially and culturally complex. It engages with particular life situations, exploring the extent to which personal experiences and lifestyle choices influence this contemporary multifaceted nation-state. Adopting a theoretically engaged ethnographic approach, and considering a range of "escapes" both physical and metaphorical, this book provides a rich picture of the fusions and fissures that comprise Japan and Japaneseness today.

Friendship and Work Culture of Women Managers in Japan

Tokyo After Ten

Swee-Lin Ho, National University of Singapore

Series: Nissan Institute/Routledge Japanese Studies

Drawing on ethnographic data gathered from fieldwork spanning over a 14-year period, this study offers new insights into understanding the lives and experiences of women managers in Japan through their strategic use of language, time, space and money to negotiate new meanings of gender, money, friendship, self and work in an increasingly flexible work environment. In examining the challenges and opportunities faced by these corporate workers this book also extends anthropological debates about the changing meaning and importance of work for women, and also offers new insights into women's friendships that are linked to salaried work, hence delinking them from the realm of domesticity.

TEXTBOOK · READER

Introducing Japanese Popular Culture

Edited by Alisa Freedman, University of Oregon, USA and Toby Slade, University of Tokyo, Japan

Specifically designed for use on a range of undergraduate and graduate courses, Introducing Japanese Popular Culture is a comprehensive textbook offering an up-to-date overview of a wide variety of media forms. It uses particular case studies as a way into examining the broader themes in Japanese culture and provides a thorough analysis of the historical and contemporary trends that have shaped artistic production, as well as, politics, society, and economics in Japan. As a result, more than being a time capsule of influential trends, this book teaches enduring lessons about how popular culture reflects the societies that produce and consume it.

Japanese Encounters

The Structure and Dynamics of Cultural Frames

Eyal Ben-Ari

Series: Routledge Culture, Society, Business in East Asia Series

This book explores the special times and spaces in Japan within which people get together to decide, celebrate or play, gatherings such as organizational meetings, community festivities, preschool games or drinking bouts. It analyzes these gatherings in relation to the theoretical model of sociocultural frames, examining how such gatherings are put together, the unfolding stages, the relations between participants and the wider social and cultural contexts. It considers the cognitive, emotional and behavioural dimensions, and, overall, provides great insights into the process whereby the interactions, feelings and action of individuals and groups shape popular culture.

Japanese Social Welfare

The Development of Diversity

HyunSun Lee, Tokyo University, Japan

Series: Nissan Institute/Routledge Japanese Studies

This book presents a new dimension of the lives of the zainichi Koreans in Japan and the development of social policy for an ageing society. Using Aera, (a non-profit North Korean welfare organisation in Japan) as the case study, Lee investigates how this group utilises and mobilises Japanese state policies, especially the social welfare system, for its own political purposes.

Mental Health and Social Withdrawal in Contemporary Japan

Hikikomori Generation

Nicholas Tajan

Series: Japan Anthropology Workshop Series

This book examines the phenomenon of social withdrawal in Japan, which ranges from school non-attendance to extreme forms of isolation and confinement, known as hikikomori. Based on extensive original research including interview research with a range of practitioners, the book outlines how hikikomori expresses itself, how it is treated and dealt with and how it has been perceived and regarded in Japan over time. The author argues that the phenomenon although socially unacceptable is not homogenous, and can be viewed not as a mental disorder, but as an idiom of distress, a passive and effective way of resisting the many great pressures of contemporary Japanese society.

Narrative Memory, Trauma and Recovery in Japanese Literature and Film

David C. Stahl, Binghamton University, USA

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

This book provides a comprehensive analysis of Japanese literature and film through the interpretive lens of trauma studies, focusing on depictions of protagonists who dissociated their childhood and adolescent traumas, failed to mourn their losses and developed psychological defense mechanisms of incorporation, substitution and revenge. This volume also concentrates on literary and filmic texts in which traumatized protagonists are eventually able, through the creation of narrative memory and other means, to effect partial and advanced recovery. As such, the book will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Japanese film and literature, as well as those of trauma studies.

Routledge Handbook of Japanese Sociolinguistics

Edited by Patrick Heinrich

Japanese sociolinguistics is an immensely popular discipline in Japan, and it has contributed a great deal to our understanding of how language and society are interrelated on an international level. Japanese sociolinguistics is taught in a number of Japanese Studies Programs around the world but there exists at present no single book which can serve as a general reference source for Japanese sociolinguistics written in English. The Handbook fills a long-standing gap in the literature and provides a much-needed comprehensive outline of Japanese sociolinguistics, which can be presented to an international readership.

The Beatles in Japan

Carolyn S. Stevens

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

The Beatles' engagement with Japan, especially their 1966 tour, highlights a great deal about Japan's postwar cultural development and Japan's deepening relationship with the West. This book shows how the tour contributed to the construction of a new Japanese national identity, demonstrated the possibilities of Japan as a potential new kind of market to UK and US producers, and forged for Japan increasing transnational cultural links. It describes both the euphoria and the adverse reactions to the tour, and outlines the Beatles' subsequent contacts with Japan, including John Lennon's marriage to and artistic partnership with Yoko Ono, and Paul McCartney's warmly-received later tours.

The Dilemma of Faith in Modern Japanese Literature

Metaphors of Christianity

Massimiliano Tomasi, Western Washington University, USA

Series: Nissan Institute/Routledge Japanese Studies

Analyzing the process of conversion of well-known canonical authors of the 19th and 20th centuries, this book unveils the significant influence that the Christian religion had on their self-construction, their oeuvre and, ultimately, the trajectory of modern Japanese literature. Departing from previous research, which has treated the intersections of Christianity with the Meiji and Taishō literary world only in a cursory fashion, this book emphasizes, in particular, the need to make a clear distinction between the different roles played by Catholicism and Protestantism over the course of Japan's modern intellectual history.

The Sociology of "Structural Disaster"

Beyond Fukushima

Miwao Matsumoto, University of Tokyo, Japan

Series: Routledge Studies in Science, Technology and Society

Taking distance from conflicts of interest and cultural essentialisms, this book highlights configurations and mechanisms of structural disasters, far more persistent, more universal, but less visible, that have turned risk into suffering. It seeks to cast light on an important new horizon of the science-technology-society interface in the sociologies of science and technology, the sociology of disaster, the social history of the military-industrial-university complex, and beyond.

Anti-nuclear Protest in Post-Fukushima Tokyo

Power Struggles

Alexander James Brown, Australia

Series: Routledge/Asian Studies Association of Australia (ASAA) East Asian Series

This book explores the politics of anti-nuclear activism in Tokyo after the Fukushima nuclear disaster of March 2011. Analysing the protests in the context of a history of citizen activism in Tokyo, it also situates the movement within the framework of a global struggle for democracy. It emphasises the contestation of urban space by activists and the weaving together of urban and cyber space in their praxis. By focusing on the cultural life of the movement—from its demonstration style to its blogs and pamphlets—this book communicates activists' voices in their own words. Based on ethnographic research, it concludes that the protests have redefined social movement politics for a new era.

Japanese Political Participation in a Small Traditional City

Danielle Kida, Ritsumeikan Asia Pacific University, Japan

Series: Routledge Studies on the Asia-Pacific Region

While participation studies have been conducted in Japan, most are centered in large urban areas, focusing on either extreme forms of participation such as protests, or concentrated on single issue participation such as the environmental or women's movements. This book, in contrast, explores what every day 'regular' in the system political participation looks like in a small traditional Japanese city – using Oita, a small city in Kyushu, as a case study. It focuses especially on the role local institutions and politicians play in influencing the kinds of participation available and subsequently, the attitudes created about participation.

Japan's Search for Strategic Security Partnerships

Edited by Gauri Khandekar and Bart Gaens

Series: Routledge Security in Asia Pacific Series

As tensions between China and Japan increase, Japan has adopted a new security posture. This involves adapting Japan's constitutional position on defence and building stronger international relationships. This book shows how trust and co-operation with the United States, the only partner with which Japan has a formal alliance, is being rebuilt, discusses how other relationships, both on security and on wider issues, are being formed, in the region and with European countries, with the relationships with India and Australia being of particular importance. It concludes by assessing the likely impact on the region of Japan's changing posture and new relationships.

Japan's Quest for Stability in Southeast Asia

Navigating the Turning Points in Postwar Asia

Taizo Miyagi, Sophia University, Japan

Series: Routledge Contemporary Japan Series

No other region has undergone such tremendous change in the postwar world as Asia. A region engulfed by independence, revolution, and the Cold War, has been transformed into the world's most economically dynamic region. What caused this change? The key to answering this question lies in the postwar history of maritime Asia, which coincides with the path taken by Japan. This book aims to illustrate the hidden trail left by Japan during the period of upheaval —marked by the Cold War strategy of America, the dissolution of the British Empire in Asia, and the emergence of the "China Problem"—and to present a new role for Japan in an Asia where politics is once again moving to the center stage.

Routledge Handbook of Japanese Foreign Policy

Edited by Mary M McCarthy, Drake University, USA

Japanese foreign policy is undergoing profound developments in response to changes in the country's international environment as well as transformations in the way in which foreign policy is conducted. The volume begins by exploring how Japan's external and internal landscapes have changed — examining issues ranging from a rising China and a nuclear North Korea, to new laws that will expand the role of the Self-Defense Forces overseas and the ability for the Japanese government and military to cooperate more closely with their American counterparts, to the new opportunities and imperatives for foreign policymaking in an age of globalization.

Civil Society and Postwar Pacific Basin Reconciliation

Wounds, Scars, and Healing

Edited by Yasuko Claremont

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

This book brings together discussions of leading aspects of the Asia-Pacific War, which still have huge relevance today, from the development of war guilt to the vivid impact of art in bringing alive the realities of the war. Organised into five parts, the book begins by scrutinizing the conflicting attitudes towards Japanese post-war society and identifies the various legacies of the war. It also provides an examination of the aftermath of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, before focusing on the establishment of contemporary civil society and analysing the way memories of the war have changed with the passage of time.

Comfort Women and Post-Occupation Corporate Japan

Caroline Norma

Series: ASAA Women in Asia Series

This book provides an overview of the Japanese sex industry in the years of Japan's postwar economic boom. It argues that the origins of gender inequality in contemporary Japan resulted from the policies put in place during this period, when there was instituted a "sexual contract" which provided male salaried men whose work was arduous, underpaid and subject to military-like organization with easy access to women's bodies, through for example hostess bars, in exchange for their acquiescence to their own exploitation. Japan's economic growth, the book thereby contends, came at the price not just of environmental and labour degradation, but also gender inequality.

Denying the Comfort Women

The Japanese State's Assault on Historical Truth

Edited by Rumiko Nishino, Women's Active Museum of War and Peace, Tokyo, Japan, Puja Kim, Tokyo University of Foreign Studies, Japan and Akane Onozawa, Rikkyo University, Japan

Series: Asia's Transformations

Run by the Japanese Imperial Military during the Asia-Pacific war, the 'comfort women' system remains controversial. Whilst politicians often contest the role of coercion, many argue that the 'comfort women' were mobilized forcibly. Utilising archival research, legal testimonies and eyewitness accounts of both survivors and military and civilian personnel, this book presents a strong opposition to the revisionist school and ultimately concludes that a victim-oriented settlement is the only realistic solution. Written by leading Japanese, Zainichi Korean, and South Korean scholars, this book will be of interest to students and scholars of Japanese studies, women's studies and Asian history.

Hagi - A Daimyo Feudal Domain in Tokugawa Japan

Peter Armstrong

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

The western Japanese city of Hagi is the town which has preserved the greatest level of Tokugawa period (1600-1868) urban and architectural fabric. The city is very important historically as it was the capital of the feudal daimyo domain – Choshu – which spearheaded the reform movement from the 1850s which led to the overthrow of the Tokugawa shogunate and the foundation of Japan in its modern form. This book is an urban and social history of this important town. It outlines the development of the layout of the city and its castle, relates this to the history of the Mori family, and their place in Japanese history, and sets Hagi in the context of the wider Choshu domain.

Japan's Cold War Policy Toward China

Two Perceptions of Order

Yutaka Kanda, Niigata University, Japan

Series: Politics in Asia

During the period 1960-1972, Cold War international politics saw significant change from a bipolar structure to a more complicated situation. After the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962, Washington and Moscow accelerated the détente process, leading China to perceive a "collusion" of the two superpowers. Publically attacking its former ally while continuing to fight against the US, China rose as a symbol of multipolarization in international politics during the 1960s. Focusing on Japan's policy towards China, Kanda examines what sort of perceptions of the international order Japanese leaders had and how they reacted to this changing international environment.

Cultural Policy in South Korea

Making a New Patron State

Hye-Kyung Lee, King's College London, UK

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

The control and promotion of culture have been bound up with politics in Korea to a surprising degree. This book traces the development of cultural policy in South Korea from Japanese colonial rule to the present day, highlighting this strong connection to wider government policy. Amongst many other subjects, the book discusses how the arts have largely relied on government financing; how the cultural industries engaged with the democratisation movement in the 1970s and 1980s; how more recent governments have promoted autonomy for the cultural sector; and how Korean arts have boomed in the twenty-first century, and have become an international phenomenon.

Innovation, Investment and Intellectual Property in South Korea

Park to Park

Ruth Taplin, Centre for Japanese and East Asian Studies, London, UK

Series: Routledge Studies in the Growth Economies of Asia

This book charts the growth in innovation, investment and the development of intellectual property rights in modern day South Korea, exploring how far South Korea's industrial success can be attributed to these factors. It examines how the climate which encouraged investment and innovation was developed through the chaebol conglomerates, explores how the regulation of intellectual property rights has been aligned to international standards and the effects of this, and discusses the continuing impact of North Korea's repressive regime. The book concludes by assessing the future prospects for innovation, investment and intellectual property rights, and for economic success, in South Korea.

Korean National Identity under Japanese Colonial Rule

Yi Gwangsu and the March First Movement of 1919

Michael Shin

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

Nationalism in Korea emerged within a relatively short space of time. This book examines the emergence of the nation as the hegemonic form of collective identity during the colonial period. It focuses on Yi Gwangsu (1892-1951), a pioneering novelist, newspaper editor, and leader of the nationalist movement, who was directly involved in many aspects of its emergence, and also focuses on the March First Movement of 1919, widely seen as one of the major turning points of modern Korean history. By focusing on Yi Gwangsu, the book provides a new understanding of the March First Movement and its role in the emergence of the nation.

Megacity Seoul

Urbanization and the Development of Modern South Korea

Yu-Min Joo, Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, Singapore

Series: Routledge Advances in Korean Studies

In Asia, there are a growing number of gigantic megalopolises, accompanied by a series of speculative and extravagant megaprojects. Amid the fast-paced urban and development challenges, many Asian developing countries have started to search for successful Asian development models. South Korea and its capital city Seoul are frequently referenced models. South Korea's "economic miracle" of the late twentieth century, however, has been mostly studied through an economic policy lens. This book revisits the development of South Korea by looking at its urban dimension and exploring the city of Seoul as a developmental megaproject.

North Korean Graphic Novels

Martin Petersen

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

Graphic novels are a major art form in North Korea, produced by agents of the regime to set out its vision in a range of important areas. This book provides an analysis of North Korean graphic novels, discussing the ideals they promote and the tensions within those ideals, and examining the reception of graphic novels in North and South Korea and beyond. Particular themes considered include the ideal family and how the regime promotes this; patriotism, and its primacy over class struggle; and the portrayal of the Korean War – "The Fatherland Liberation War", as it is known in North Korea – and the subsequent, continuing stand-off.

Politics in North and South Korea

Political Development, Economy, and Foreign Relations

Yangmo Ku, Inyeop Lee and Jongseok Woo

This textbook provides students with a comprehensive understanding of the political dynamics of the two Koreas. Giving equal weight to North and South Korea, the authors trace the history of political development and international relations of the Korean peninsula, showing how South Korea became democratized and how Juche ideology has affected the establishment and operation of a totalitarian system in North Korea. The book also covers the political dimensions of a wide variety of issues such as economics, civil society, human rights, ideology, and foreign affairs and will be essential reading for students of Korean Politics and Foreign Policy.

Gandhi's Moral Politics

Edited by Naren Nanda

This volume explores the scope and limits of Mahatma Gandhi's moral politics and its implications for Indian and other freedom movements. With contributions by leading historians and Gandhi scholars, it provides new perspectives on the limits of Gandhi's moral reasoning, his role in the choice of destination by Indian Muslim refugees, as well as his waning influence over political events and his predicament amid the violence and turmoil in the years immediately preceding partition. The work revisits his religious views which were the foundation of his morality in politics, his experience of civil disobedience and its nature, deployment and limits, Satyagraha and nonviolence, and struggle for civil rights.

Imperialism and Sikh Migration

The Komagata Maru Incident

Anjali Gera Roy, Indian Institute of Technology, Kharagpur, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian History

This book focuses on the Komagata Maru episode of 1914: This Japanese ship was chartered by Gurdit Singh, a prosperous Sikh businessman from Malaya. It carried 376 passengers from Punjab and was not permitted to land in Vancouver on grounds of a stipulation about a continuous journey from the port of departure and forced to return to Kolkata where the passengers were fired at, imprisoned or kept under surveillance. The author isolates juridical procedures, tactics and apparatus of security through which the British Empire exercised power on imperial subjects by investigating the significance of this incident to colonial and postcolonial migration.

India and the World in the First Half of the Twentieth Century

Edited by Madhavan K. Palat, Editor, Selected Works of Jawaharlal Nehru, Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Fund, New Delhi, India

This book examines how India was placed and placed itself in the world during the first half of the 20th century in a period of global turmoil and set against the subcontinental contest for independence. In situating India in the world, it looks not just at current foreign policy studies, but also at geopolitics, World War experiences, theoretical and strategic approaches, early foreign policy institutional transitions and the role of Indian civil and foreign diplomatic services. The work explores history and theory with a focus on cosmopolitanism beyond nationalism.

The Intellectual Roots of India's Freedom Struggle (1893-1918)

Prithwindra Mukherjee

Most people believe India's struggle for independence to have begun with Mahatma Gandhi. Little credit goes to the proof that this call for a mass movement did not arise out of a void. The present study with inputs from Indian, European and American archives, carefully straightens out the origins – philosophical, historical and religious and intellectual, so to say – of Indian nationalism. From Rammohun to Sri Aurobindo, passing through Marx and Tagore, the full set of ideological views has been analysed here.

On Modern Indian Sensibilities

Culture, Politics, History

Edited by Ishita Banerjee-Dube and Sarvani Gooptu

This book consists of incisive and imaginative readings of culture, politics, and history in eastern India from the 16th to the 20th centuries. Focusing especially on Assam, Odisha, Bengal, and their margins, the volume explores Indo-Islamic cultures of rule as located on the cusp of Mughal-cosmopolitan and regional-local formations.

Tracking sensibilities of time and history, senses of events and persons, and productions of the past and the present, the volume examines the interchanges between literary cultures and contending nationalisms, culture and cosmopolitanism, temporality and mythology, literature and literacy, history and modernity, and print culture and popular media.

The Indian Frontier

Horse and Warband in the Making of Empires

Jos Gommans

The book brings together the works of Gommans on the warhorse and its impact on medieval and early modern state-formation in South Asia. Gommans observes that Indian empires always had to deal with a highly dynamic inner frontier between semi-arid wilderness and settled agriculture. Such inner frontiers could only be bridged by the ongoing movements of Turkish, Afghan, Rajput & other warbands. In discussing the breeding trading of horses & their role in medieval and early modern South Asian warfare, he also makes comparisons with Europe and the Middle East.

Transitions in Indian Nationalism

Shail Mayaram, Centre for the Study of Developing Societies, India

Series: Intersections: Colonial and Postcolonial Histories

Using historical and ethnographic methods, this book explores transitions in popular Indian nationalism. It highlights the shifts and transitions from the Pax Britannica to the Pax Americana over the last two centuries, and examines new sources of the self as the local intersects, collides and interpenetrates with the global and national, suggesting new nationalist imperatives in the age of imperial terror. The book engages with several significant debates such as whether colonialism constituted a violent rupture, and it suggests ways in which the pre-colonial was appropriated by colonial projects, and how colonial texts were transmuted into nationalist projects.

Jonathan Parry and Ajay T.G

The book deals with social transformations brought about by industrialization in and around the steel town of Bhilai in the Indian state of Chhattisgarh. The focus is, firstly, on differences in the working lives of regular workers in public and private sector factories and the insecure contract labour force employed by this sector and the informal sector labour that is condemned to work outside it. It is, secondly, on the way the differences in social life outside the world of work – in kinship and marriage practices; in the texture of neighbourhood relationships; in life styles, life chances and consumption patterns, and in the salience of identities based on caste and on class.

Talking Financial Inclusion in Liberalised India

Conversations with Governors of the Reserve Bank of India

Edited by M. S. Sriram

This book presents a set of conversations with five former Governors of Reserve Bank of India (from 1992 onwards) on the topic of financial inclusion. Two key aspects are introduced in the conversations with each Governor: the initiatives that were undertaken during their tenure and their responses to some of the current issues. Further, they examine the reasons and justifications for significant decisions and measures that were undertaken or withheld. The discussion captures the evolution and approach of the central bank in addressing a variety of questions pertaining to financial inclusion.

2nd Edition · NEW EDITION

Caste in Contemporary India

Surinder S. Jodhka, Jawaharlal Nehru University, India

This book explores contemporary realities of caste in rural and urban India. It examines questions of untouchability, citizenship, social mobility, democratic politics, corporate hiring and Dalit activism. Using rich empirical evidence across north India, this volume offers an original theoretical framework for comparative understandings of the entrenched social differences, discrimination, inequalities, stratification, and the modes and patterns of their reproduction. This second edition, with a new Introduction, delves into why caste continues to matter and how caste-based divisions tend to overlap with the emergent disparities of the new economy.

Dalit Women of Nepal

Strategies of Resistance

Jung H. Lee, Northeastern University, US

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book examines the strategies of resistance among the Dalit women of Nepal in their struggle against the social injustice of the caste system and related practices of "untouchability", particularly in regard to the ways in which these injustices lead to capability failures that diminish human dignity and the quality of life. The book shows the moral lives of this historically understudied group in ways that challenge the guiding assumptions and methodologies of comparative ethics and political philosophy. A groundbreaking study of the lived ethics of Dalit women, this book will be of interest to academics in the fields of South Asian Studies, Religious Studies and Women's Studies.

Development and Gender Capital in India

Change, Continuity and Conflict in Kerala

Shoba Arun

Series: Routledge Research on Asian Development

Using Kerala as a model, Globalisation, Development and Gender Capital in India will explore the forces of globalisation and how they are embedded in power structures, which in many ways re-create and reinforce power relations that reflect tropes of mobility, victimhood and agency. Part I shows how the arena of global development is a gendered sphere, exploring the idea of 'gender as capital' and its implications for women. Part II looks at structural constraints and as well as the agency of women that is enacted through patriarchal norms in private and public domains, including the nation-state, through gendered frames of domesticity and sexuality.

Documentary Film in India

An Anthropological History

Giulia Battaglia, Sorbonne Nouvelle University, France

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

Grounded in anthropological fieldwork and archival research and adopting Foucault's concept of 'effective history', it searches for points of origin that creates ruptures and deviations taking distance from conventional ways of writing film histories. Rather than presenting a univocal set of arguments and conclusions about changes or new developments of film techniques, the originality of the book is in offering an open structure (or an open archive) to enable the reader to engage with mechanisms of creation, engagement and participation in film and art practices at large.

Health Communication and Sexual Health in India

Interpreting HIV and AIDS messages

Ravindra Kumar Vemula, English and Foreign Languages University, Hyderabad, India

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book examines the concept of sexual health through an analysis of policies and HIV and AIDS messages. It traces the growth and evolution of the concept of sexual health from a health communication perspective in order to understand the role of the state in determining its form and structure and eventually the policies around it. The methodology used includes comparative analysis of HIV/AIDS policies, document analysis on HIV/AIDS and poster analysis as well as in-depth interviews. Using India as a case study, the book elaborates upon sexual health being socially constructed in various models around the world.

Modern Practices in North East India

History, Culture, Representation

Edited by Lipokmar Dzuvichü and Manjeet Baruah

This book brings together essays on North East India from across disciplines to explore new understandings of the colonial and contemporary realities of the region. Departing from the usual focus on identity and politics, it offers fresh representations from history, social anthropology, culture, literature, politics, performance and gender. Through the lens of modern practices, the volume engages with diverse issues: state-making practices, knowledge production and its politics, history writing, colonialism, institutions, changing locations of orality and modernity, production and reception of texts, performances and literatures, social change and memory, violence and gender relations.

Routledge Handbook of Urban South Asia

Edited by Henrike Donner, Goldsmiths, University of London, UK

This Handbook is the first to systematically discuss the way urban South Asia has been analysed – as a result of colonial rule, as a set of problems associated with ‘underdevelopment’ and, increasingly, as exemplary for capitalist integration and problematics associated with urbanisation worldwide. It draws attention to processes and phenomena that emerge at different points in metropolitan, city and small town development, and their social and cultural implications. Contributions by experts in the field shed light on different aspects of urbanity, and focus on what makes South Asian urban social and cultural relations singularly interesting.

Sikhs in the Deccan and North-East India

Birinder Pal Singh, Professor of Eminence, Department of Sociology and Social Anthropology, Punjabi University, Patiala, India

This book discusses the dynamics of a mass internal migration in South Asia. It traces the historical roots of certain migrant Sikh communities to the British rule; chronicles their social, religious and economic practices; and examines peculiar identity formations. It examines the socio-economic conditions of Sikhs in the Deccan and the North-East who are believed to be the descendants of the soldiers in Maharaja Ranjit Singh's army despatched to the two regions in the early nineteenth century. It draws on extensive ethnographic accounts to present the social realities of the different communities, including language, religion, culture, occupation, caste, marriage and kinship and agency.

State, Society and Health in Nepal

Madhusudan Subedi, Professor, Department of Sociology, Tribhuvan University, Nepal

Series: Nepal and Himalayan Studies

This book focuses on health, healing and healthcare in Nepal. It presents an intriguing picture: the interplay between the natural processes that cause ill-health or diseases and the socio-cultural processes through which people try to understand and cope with them. The work places medical tradition, health politics, gender and health, and pharmaceutical business within the wider politico-economic milieu of Nepal. It also describes the establishment of medical anthropology as an academic discipline, and its relevance for understanding the country's specific health problems, health care traditions and health policies.

Urban Marginalisation in South Asia

Waste Pickers in Calcutta

Nandini Sen

Series: Routledge/Edinburgh South Asian Studies Series

This book uniquely presents a volume of work in the field of ideological or socio-cultural marginalisation: showing how and why socio-cultural marginalisation is different, distinct from economic marginalisation, and expressed through the daily experiences of material and emotional dilapidation and physical and socio-cultural seclusion as experienced by the waste picking community in Calcutta. It provides an extensive and intimate discourse on the decay of the soul and mind, breakdown of the interpersonal and neighbourhood ties through the mediation of the biased state, mainstream/elite policies attached with the defamed-peripheral regions of the city.

Women and Domestic Violence in Bangladesh

Seeking A Way Out of the Cage

Laila Ashrafun, Shahjalal University of Science and Technology, Bangladesh

Series: Routledge/Asian Studies Association of Australia (ASAA) South Asian Series

This book is a study about domestic violence against women in Bangladeshi society. It delineates, in particular, why and how some women become the victims of domestic violence in the changing socio-economic setting of Bangladesh. The author explores the multiple contexts in which domestic violence occurs by focusing on the everyday experience of women subjected to this violence. The book shows how changing socio-economic setting, urbanization and the growing demand for female labor influences the phenomenon and experience of domestic violence. It demonstrates that domestic violence is entangled in a complex web of institutionalized social relations.

2nd Edition · NEW EDITION

Yoga, Bhoga and Ardhanariswara

Individuality, Wellbeing and Gender in Tantra

Prem Saran

This book offers a social–scientific interpretation of the Hindu and Buddhist traditions of Tantra dating back 15 centuries. It discusses non-modern Indic themes: mandala as a trope and its manifestations in South Asia; yoga and Indic individuality; bhoga; wellbeing; gender; and Indic axiology. The author examines three core themes within Tantra — a ‘holonic’/mandalic individuality that conduces to mystical experience; a positive valorisation of pleasure and play; and cultural attitudes of gender-mutuality and complementarity, encapsulated in Shiva as Ardhanariswara. This analysis leads to his compelling metathesis that Tantra is a permanent counterculture within the Indic civilization.

Anglo-Indians and Minority Politics in South Asia

Race, Boundary Making and Communal Nationalism

Uther Charlton-Stevens

Series: Royal Asiatic Society Books

The book analyses the processes of ethnic group formation and political organisation, beginning with petitions to the East India Company state, through the Raj's constitutional communalism, to constitution-making for the new India. It details how

Anglo-Indians sought to preserve protected areas of state and railway employment amidst the growing demands of Indian nationalism. Anglo-Indians both suffered and benefitted from colonial British prejudices, being expected to loyally serve the colonial state as a result of their ties of kinship and culture to the colonial power, whilst being the victims of racial and social discrimination.

Debating the 'Post' Condition in India

Critical Vernaculars, Unauthorized Modernities, Post-Colonial Contentions ?

Makarand R. Paranjape, Professor of English, Centre for English Studies, School of Language, Literature and Culture Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India

The book explores the discursive trajectories of post-modernism, post-colonialism, post-Marxism, post-nationalism, post-feminism, post-secularism — the relations that mediate them — as well as interprets, in the light of these discussions, core tenets of Indian philosophical thought. The book makes the case for a new integrative hermeneutics, the idea of the indigenous 'critical vernacular', and presents a radical shift in the understanding of svraj (beyond decolonisation and nationalism) to express transformations at both personal and political levels.

Everyday State and Politics in India

Government in the Backyard in Kalahandi

Sailen Routray, Azim Premji University, India

Series: Routledge/Edinburgh South Asian Studies Series

This book focuses on processes of governance in Odisha, and provides an ethnographic account of the changing forms of governmental actions in Kalahandi by analysing the implementation of WORLP, a new generation watershed development project. The book also shows the morphings of the forms of the state on the ground, and the ways in which it is perceived by the agents and objects of statist actions. Arguing that changes in the institutions and practices of the state in India over the last three decades are better understood through the conceptualisation of state-fabrication, the author describes the governmental tactics related to emergent modes of governmental action.

Gender and Hindu Nationalism

Understanding masculine hegemony

Prem Kumar Vijayan, previously Institute of Social Studies (ISS), The Hague, The Netherlands

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book analyses the broader social base of Hindu nationalist organisation in order to understand the growth of 'Hinduva', or Hindu nationalism. It also puts forward the argument that Hindu nationalist thought and predilections are not just the ideological constructions of specific political and/or 'cultural' agents and agencies, but emerge out of, and in turn feed, pre-existing gendered tendencies. This concept is defined as 'masculine hegemony', specifically Brahmanical masculine hegemony.

Governance and Development in India

A Comparative Study on Andhra Pradesh and Bihar after Liberalization

Seyed Hossein Zarhani

Series: Routledge Advances in South Asian Studies

This book is a study of political roots of the divergence of development trajectories among India's subnational states, as an important aspect of the political economy of development in India. Although the government of India has introduced and implemented several economic reforms since 1991 to enhance economic development, the results of implantation vary in different subnational States. Some States have had a disappointing economic performance, and some had better performance than average. This book analyses the role of the state in the regional development in India with a focus on the case studies Andhra Pradesh and Bihar.

India and the Anglosphere

Race, Identity and Hierarchy in International Relations

Alexander E. Davis, La Trobe University, Australia

Series: Routledge/Asian Studies Association of Australia (ASAA) South Asian Series

This book examines the ambivalent position of postcolonial India in the English-speaking world and the ways in which this shapes India's relationships with the US, the UK, Canada and Australia. It investigates the clashes over race, identity and hierarchy at the core of India's relationship with the Anglosphere from Indian independence to the present, arguing that different perceptions and assumptions about the nature of world order rooted in colonial histories continue to divide India and the English-speaking world. The author argues for a postcolonial-critical constructivist approach as a way of understanding India-Anglosphere relations.

New Perspectives on India and Turkey

Connections and Debates

Edited by Smita Tewari Jassal, Middle East Technical University, Turkey and Halil Turan

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

This book places the Indian subcontinent side by side with the Turkic speaking world, both past and present, in order to understand one geographical context in relation to the other. The juxtaposition of the two countries throws up some startling commonalities as well as considerable differences, and it is both the variations as well as similarities that allow for comparability. By exploring historical connections and providing a comparative perspective in terms of spirituality and religion, social movements, political economy and foreign policy, it initiates productive cross-cultural conversations, allowing concerns from one location to illuminate the other.

India Migration Report 2017

Forced Migration

Edited by S. Irudaya Rajan, Professor, Centre for Development Studies, Thiruvananthapuram, Kerala, India

The India Migration Report 2017 examines forced migration caused by political conflicts, climate change, disasters (natural and man-made) and development projects. India accounts for large numbers of internally displaced people in the world. Apart from conflicts and disasters, over the years, development projects (including urban redevelopment and beautification), often justified as serving the interests of the people and for public good, have caused massive displacements in different parts of the country, disrupting the lives and livelihoods of millions of people.

India's National Security

Annual Review 2016-17

Edited by Satish Kumar, Director, Foundation for National Security Research, India

The global security environment in the last five years has been characterised by a state of 'no war, no peace' among major powers, resulting in a state of uncertainty about their national security objectives. It is in this complex and confusing international environment that India, as a rising power, has been called upon to wade through its strategic partnerships with major powers and nurture friendships with various Asian and African countries. India's National Security: Annual Review 2016-17 offers indispensable information and evaluation on matters of national security. It undertakes a thorough analysis of the trends to provide a backdrop to India's engagement with various countries.

Migrations, Identities and Democratic Practices in India

Samir Kumar Das

This book explores contesting identities, international politics, migration and democratic practices in the context of globalising India. Drawing on extensive ethnographic research, it looks at one of the oldest migratory routes across a volatile region in eastern India which is fraught with violent claims of separate statehood. The book offers an account of how the 'North Bengal' region has acted as a gateway to migrant populations over time and points to why it must be understood as a shifting and liminal space through a study of Bodoland, Gorkhaland, Kamatapuri, Siliguri and the Greater Cooch Behar movements.

Neoliberalism and the Transforming Left in India

A contradictory manifesto

Edited by Ritanjan Das, University of Portsmouth, UK

Series: Routledge/Edinburgh South Asian Studies Series

This book presents a reappraisal of the political economic history of the CPIM/Left Front regime against the backdrop of the Indian reform experience. It examines two distinct areas: the conditions that necessitated the regime to engineer a transition from an erstwhile agricultural-based growth model to a more pro-market economic agenda post-1991, and the political strategy employed to manage such a transition, attract private capital and at the same time sustain the regime's traditional rhetoric and partisan character.

Politics in India

Structure, Process and Policy

Subrata K. Mitra, Institute of South Asian Studies, Singapore

The second edition of this textbook brings together general political theory and the comparative method to interpret socio-political phenomena and issues that have occupied the Indian state and society since 1947. It considers the progress that India has made in some of the most challenging aspects of post-colonial politics such as governance, democracy, economic growth, welfare, and citizenship. Looking at the changed global role of India, its standing in the G-20 and BRICS, as well as the implications of the 2014 Indian general elections for state and society, this updated edition also includes sections on the changing socio-political status of women in India, corruption and terrorism.

Politics of Development in Pakistan

Living Village

Haider Nizamani, Sustainable Development Policy Institute, Pakistan

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

By discussing how the village in Pakistan is intercalated in the grid of national and international capitalism, this book looks at the impact this feature has on how people work, conduct politics, look at and interact with the world, and the arrival of 'development' specialists in rural Pakistan. Instead of viewing the village, as it is often in popular discourse, as a self-sustaining world unto itself, this book brings into fore the processes, manners, and manifestations whereby the village is increasingly becoming intertwined in capillaries of capitalism and its attendant offshoots going by the name of globalization and development.

Radical Politics and Governance in India's North East

The Case of Tripura

Harihar Bhattacharyya, University of Burdwan, India

Series: Routledge Studies in South Asian Politics

This book examines the roots, nature, governmental performance, and theoretical and policy implications of left radicalism in Tripura. The case of Tripura is placed in comparison with her neighbours in the region, and in some cases with India's advanced States in governance matters. Based on original archival and the very recent empirical and documentary sources on the subject, the author shows that the Left in Tripura is well-entrenched, and that it has sustained itself compared to other parts of India, despite deeply rooted ethnic tensions between the aboriginal peoples (tribes) and immigrant Bengalis.

Reasoning Indian Politics

Philosopher Politicians to Politicians Seeking Philosophy

Edited by Narendar Pani, Professor, National Institute of Advanced Studies, Bengaluru, India and Anshuman Behera, Assistant Professor, Conflict Resolution Programme, National Institute of Advance Studies, Bengaluru, India

This volume examines the multiple forms of reasoning in Indian politics and explores a framework to understand it. The book argues that in the years leading up to and soon after independence, the task of conceptualizing politics was largely in the domain of practising politicians who built theories and philosophical methods, and further took those visions into the practice of their politics. This book traces the transition from philosopher-politicians to politicians seeking philosophy in Indian polity in the post-independence era and its implications for current practices.

Renewable Energy Policies in South Asia

The World Bank's Solar Lighting Strategies and Design Principles

Sam Wong, University of Liverpool, UK

Series: Routledge Contemporary South Asia Series

The World Bank's 'Design Principles' for successful renewable energy interventions are cost management, good governance and a choice of technology that meets local needs. Focusing on solar lighting and drawing on case studies in Bangladesh and India, this book problematizes the underpinning assumptions of the 'Design Principles'. It critically examines the obstacles against effective implementation in the field and points to the weaknesses of the World Bank's renewable energy policies.

Rethinking Indian Jurisprudence

An Introduction to the Philosophy of Law

Aakash Singh Rathore, Visiting Professor, Centre for Philosophy, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India, and Director, International Research Network for Religion and Democracy and Garima Goswamy

What is law? What is the source of law? What is the law for? How does law differ from other norms or codes of conduct? What is the difference between law and morality? What is the difference between moral and legal obligation? This book addresses these foundational questions about the law in general, and seeks to reorient our thoughts to the specific nature of law in India, the India of today, and the possible India of the future. It covers relevant questions; brings the uniqueness of Indian Philosophy of Law to the fore; critically analyses major theories of jurisprudence; examines legal debates on secularism, religion, rights, caste politics; and presents useful examples.

Edited by Ajay K. Mehra, political scientist with the University of Delhi and coordinates the activities of the Centre for Public Affairs, India

This book traces the trajectory of the Indian Parliament from its formation to present day. The essays presented here explore parliamentary democracy through the formative years and highlight the Parliament's function as a representative and accountable institution, its procedures and responsibility, its connection with the other arms of the state, its relationship with grassroots democracy and the press, and its critical role in framing foreign policy and national security.

TEXTBOOK · READER

The Politics of Modern India since Independence

Crispin Bates, University of Edinburgh, UK and Subho Basu, Syracuse University, US

Series: Routledge/Edinburgh South Asian Studies Series

This textbook offers a detailed, jargon-free, chronological survey of Indian political history from 1947 up to the present. It treats political structures as historically determined, induced by economic transformation, state interventions, popular movements and discourses emanating from and reshaping popular discourses. Included are a detailed index, sub-headings, maps and illustrations, as well as a time-line of the events in India's political history since independence. These pedagogical features, as well as text boxes to explain institutions, issues and ideas, and a detailed bibliography will aid student readers navigating the book and assist further study.

Transitional Justice in Nepal

Interests, Victims and Agency

Yvette Selim, University of New South Wales, Australia

Series: Routledge/Asian Studies Association of Australia (ASAA) South Asian Series

This book examines transitional justice in Nepal. Nepal is attractive as a case because it sits somewhere in between, being an almost reluctant participant in the transitional justice process. Nepal's situation might prove to be typical rather than exceptional depending on the approach taken to studying transitional justice. While seemingly little has been achieved, transitional justice interventions continue. Using a constructivist grounded theory, the author focuses on politics, participation and the everyday realities of people in post-conflict Nepal.

Understanding Contemporary Indian Federalism

Competing Perspectives, New Challenges and Future Directions

Edited by Chanchal Kumar Sharma and Wilfried Swenden, University of Edinburgh, UK

This book provides a new look at contemporary Indian federalism. It collects a number of contributions that consider centre-state dynamics in a number of fields (political economy, ethnic management and intergovernmental relations) from different methodological perspectives. The chapters originally published as a special issue in India Review.

Urban Activism in India

Transparency, Accountability and Ethical Politics

Martin Webb, Goldsmiths, University of London, UK

Series: Routledge Series on Urban South Asia

The book introduces the reader to different settings, life stories, and encounters with bureaucracy, transparency and accountability to show how these encounters are inflected by social position and practical knowledge. It demonstrates how concerns about transparency, accountability and anti-corruption flow from a range of social locations and political perspectives rather than being the preserve of specific, often elite, groups, and how initiatives and social action emerge at the intersections of the interests of disparate actors.

Christianity in India

Clara Joseph, University of Calgary, Canada

Series: Routledge Studies in Asian Religion and Philosophy

This book shows how communities of Indian Christians in fact predetermined Western expansionist goals as well as defined the Western colonial and Indian national imaginary. It traces the Western notion of the Indian Christian in pre-colonial times, to the encounters during colonialism, and down to the contemporary period that includes the representation of Indian Christians in the postcolonial and national space. Utilizing postcolonial theoretical concepts as a critical device to analyze canonical and popular narratives on Christianity in India, the author identifies two trends as culprits in imagining Christianity in India as colonial.

India's Agony with Religion Revisited

Gerald Larson

The volume is a sequel to "India's Agony Over Religion" (State University of New York Press, 1995) in the sense that it develops a theory of religion first set forth in the original volume but expands to encompass the general history of religions [inclusive of the Indic traditions: Hindu, Buddhist, Jain; the Abrahamic traditions: Hebrew/Jewish, Christian, Islamic; and the East Asian traditions: Confucian, Daoist, Shinto]; The argument, is that the term "religion" is better understood in its adjectival sense, namely, "religious".

Women, Religion and the Body in South Asia

Living with Bengali Bauls

Kristin Hanssen, previously University of Oslo, Norway

Series: Routledge South Asian Religion Series

As icons of Bengali culture, Bauls have long been a subject of scholarly debates which center on their esoteric practices, and middle class imaginaries of the category Baul. Adding to this literature, the intimate ethnography presented in this book shifts the focus slightly. Adopting a narrative approach, it recounts the life histories of members from a single family, shining light on their past and present tribulations bound up with being poor and of a lowly caste. The ethnography presented indicates that taking up the Baul path is a means of softening the stigma of their lower caste identity. Religious practice, where women play a key role, renders the body pure.

The Postcolonial Epic

From Melville to Walcott and Ghosh

Sneharika Roy

Series: Literary Cultures of the Global South

This book demonstrates the epic genre's enduring relevance to the Global South. It identifies a contemporary avatar of classical epic, the 'postcolonial epic', ushered in by Herman Melville's Moby Dick, a foundational text of North America, and exemplified by Derek Walcott's Caribbean masterpiece Omeros and Amitav Ghosh's South Asian saga, the Ibis trilogy. It focuses on the genre's potential to articulate post-imperial concerns with nation and migration across the Global North–South. It foregrounds the genre's postcolonial shifts from politics to political economy, subaltern reconfigurations of capitalist and imperial temporalities, and the preoccupation with language and representation.

Family and Population Change in Singapore

A unique case in the global family change

Edited by Wei-Jun Jean Yeung, National University of Singapore and Shu Hu, National University of Singapore, Singapore

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book depicts the evolution of Singapore's family and population landscape in the last half a century, the related public policies, and future challenges. Since the country's independent in 1965, family and population policies have been an integral part of its national building developmental strategies. The chapters discuss the changes in population compositions, family structures, relations, values among major ethnic groups. They also discuss policies for vulnerable populations such as female-headed households, cross-cultural families, same-sex partnering, the elderly, and low-income families.

Women's Empowerment in Indonesia

A Poor Community in Jakarta

Sri Wiyanti Eddyono

Series: ASAA Women in Asia Series

It is well-known that development projects in poor countries are most effective when they harness the agency of women. Most studies of women's agency in such projects, however, focus on the role of non-governmental organizations in facilitating women's agency. This book, on the other hand, explores how women can effectively mobilize themselves on their own initiative. The book considers poor people in informal settlements in Jakarta, where government schemes for modernizing the city have often led to forced evictions. The book examines different groups of women, analyzes how they have challenged oppressive authority and provides detailed insights into their attitudes and motivations.

Race, Religion, and the 'Indian Muslim' Predicament in Singapore

Torsten Tschacher, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany

Series: Routledge Studies on Islam and Muslims in Southeast Asia

Indian Muslims form the largest ethnic minority within Singapore's otherwise largely Malay Muslim community. Despite its size and historic importance, however, Singaporean Indian Muslims have received little attention by scholarship and have also felt side-lined by Singapore's Malay-dominated Muslim institutions. Since the 1980s, demands for a better representation of Indian Muslims and access to religious services have intensified, while there has been a concomitant debate over who has the right to speak for Indian Muslims. This book traces the negotiations and contestations over Indian Muslim difference in Singapore and examines the conditions that have given rise to these debates.

Television in Post-Reform Vietnam

Giang Nguyen-Thu

Series: Media, Culture and Social Change in Asia Series

This book explores popular television in the post-Reform era, that is from 1986, especially the relationship between television and national imagination. It examines new post-Reform views of socialism including the acceptability of markets and entrepreneurship, discusses differing views of Vietnamese nationality and how these are being brought together into a new vision for the future of the country, a vision which reconciles past divisions, and, throughout, provides examples from a wide range of television genres. Overall, the book highlights the richness of Vietnam's current culture and identity – optimistic, forward-looking, and characterized by "fraternity without uniformity".

Distributive Politics in Malaysia

Maintaining Authoritarian Party Dominance

Hidekuni Washida, Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan

Series: Politics in Asia

Washida challenges the conventional arguments that the punitive threat to exclude opposition supporters from distributive benefits is sufficient to ensure the loyalty of both the electorate and legislators. He also calls into question whether the mere existence of party organization in and of itself enables leaders to credibly commit to power-sharing. Instead he posits a theory of perverse agency, in which a party leader needs to make elites effectively mobilize masses. The insights drawn from the Malaysian case thus help to bridge the theoretical gap between electoral and coalitional politics.

Islamic Education in Indonesia and Malaysia

Shaping Minds, Saving Souls

Azmil Mohd Tayeb, University Sains Malaysia

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

The book explores the nature of the Islamic education systems in Indonesia and Malaysia and the different approaches taken by these states in managing these systems. The book argues that the post-colonial state in Malaysia has been more successful in centralising its control over Islamic education, and more concerned with promoting a restrictive orthodoxy, compared to the post-colonial state in Indonesia.

Small States and Hegemonic Competition in Southeast Asia

Pursuing Autonomy, Security and Development amid Great Power Politics

Chih-Mao Tang, Soochow University, Taiwan

Series: Routledge Advances in International Relations and Global Politics

Drawing on the ideas of power transition theory and recent works of capitalist peace, Tang argues that small states can exploit the competition between great powers to make economic gains and ensure security while maintaining their autonomy. He outlines the necessity of cooperation among these small states and of economic liberalization for the effectiveness of this reinforcing dynamics, applying policy and econometric analyses to a wide range of qualitative and quantitative data.

Special economic zones in Southeast Asia

Capitalising Space, Depleting the Margin(al)

Decha Tangseefa, Thammasat University, Thailand, Charlie Thame, Thammasat University, Thailand and Pinitbhand Paribatra, Thammasat University, Thailand
Series: Routledge Studies in the Growth Economies of Asia

This book evinces that the establishment of the Mae Sot SEZ exemplifies the Thai nationstate's attempts to exploit myriad opportunities presented by globalisation and regionalisation, all the more necessary after years of political turmoil in the country which has resulted in a severe economic downturn. While the global economy had become bleak a decade earlier, Southeast Asian nations – especially neighbouring-emerging-economies of Cambodia, Laos and Burma/Myanmar – became targets for Thailand's economic recovery. The materialization of land-based connectivity, facilitated by SEZs in Thailand's key border provinces, became instrumental to achieving this end.

Saskia E. Wieringa, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands and Nursyahbani Katjasungkana, Previously Director of Jakarta Legal Aid Institute, Indonesia, and President of Friends of the Earth Indonesia (Wahana Lingkungan Hidup Indonesia, WALHI).

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book presents the history of the genocide and propaganda campaign and the process towards the International People's Tribunal on 1965 crimes against humanity in Indonesia (IPT 1965), which was held in November 2015 in The Hague, The Netherlands. The authors, an Indonesian Human Rights lawyer and a Dutch academic examine this unique event, which for the first time brings these crimes before an international court, and its verdict. They single out the campaign of hate propaganda as it provided the incitement to kill so many Indonesians and why this propaganda campaign is effective to this day.

The Road to Federalism in Nepal, Myanmar and Sri Lanka

Finding the Middle Ground

Michael G Breen, Deakin University, Australia

Series: Politics in Asia

This book charts the origins and evolution of federalism and other approaches to the accommodation of minority ethnic groups in Nepal, Myanmar and Sri Lanka. It applies a historical institutionalism methodology to understand why federalism has been resisted, what causes it to be established and what design options are most likely to balance otherwise competing centripetal and centrifugal forces. Breen shows how Nepal, Myanmar and Sri Lanka are finding a middle ground whereby deliberative and moderating institutions are combined with accommodating ones to support a political equality among groups and individuals.

Torture and Peacebuilding in Indonesia

The Case of Papua

Budi Hernawan, University of Indonesia

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book analyses state-sponsored torture and peacebuilding in Indonesia. It focuses on the case study of Papua, which provides a thought-provoking example of the intricacy and complexity of building peace amidst enduring conflict and violence. The author establishes a new understanding of torture as 'public theatre' and proffers a new perspective of strengthening the existing Papuan peacebuilding framework of Papua Land of Peace. The book will be of interest to academics working on Southeast Asian Studies, Peace and Conflict Studies, Transitional Justice, Peacebuilding, Human Rights and Anthropology of Violence.

Tropical Warfare in the Asia-Pacific Region, 1941-45

Kaushik Roy, Jadavpur University, India and PRIO, Norway
Series: Asian States and Empires

This is the first book to provide a comprehensive overview of the land war of the Second World War in Southeast Asia and the Pacific. Existing literature focuses on particular armies and/or theatres but this book argues that warfare in all theatres was very similar and that there was considerable interchange of ideas between allied armies which enabled the spread of best practice. The book considers tactics, training, technology and logistics, assesses the changing state of combat effectiveness of different armies, and traces the course of the war. The author argues that the Japanese defeat was not inevitable and was brought about by chance and considerable Allied tactical ingenuity.

Routledge Handbook of Urbanization in Southeast Asia

Edited by Rita Padawangi, National University of Singapore

The study of urbanization in Southeast Asia has been a growing field of research over the past decades. The Routledge Handbook of Urbanization in Southeast Asia opens a new perspective on urban life in the region. It offers a collection of the major streams and themes in the studies of the cities in the region. A focus on the urbanization process rather than the city as an object opens the topic more broadly to bring together different perspectives.

Women Warriors in Southeast Asia

Edited by Tobias Rettig, Singapore Management University and Vina A. Lanzona, University of Hawai'i-Manoa, USA.

Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern History of Asia

Based on multidisciplinary perspectives, this book brings together a wide range of case studies covering women as agents of violence in periods of armed conflict in Southeast Asia. It discusses why these women were active in a domain traditionally preserved for men, and how it arguably transgressed peacetime gender boundaries. Using a number of different sources, including epigraphs, royal chronicles, diaries, memoirs and interviews, the book looks at Southeast Asian woman in both ancient and modern times, and in a variety of roles, such as palace guards, guerrillas and war leaders.

Spanish Representations of the Philippines

Revisiting Empire

Jose Diaz-Rodriguez, Massey University, New Zealand

Series: Routledge Contemporary Southeast Asia Series

This book examines the different means through which Spain has revisited its ex-colony - the Philippines - in recent years. Focusing on seven major exhibitions organized in the period 1998-2012, the 'poetics' and 'politics' of Spanish representations of the Philippines are critically examined. Even though Spain's intention was to offer a fresh and updated look at the Philippines through the events organized, there was also a tendency to refer to and recreate a colonial past, posing important questions about the continuity of conceptions concerning the old Spanish Empire in the 21st Century.

Belarus - Alternative Visions

Nationhood, Empire and Cosmopolitanism

Simon M. Lewis

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

Belarus is often regarded as Europe's last dictatorship, a fossilized leftover from the Soviet Union. A key factor in determining Belarus's likely future development, however, is its own sense of its own identity. This book explores the nature of Belarus's identity, revealing in a range of media including histories, films and literature complex alternative myths – the "peasant nation" of the late nineteenth century, the devoted Soviet republic of the twentieth century and the Belarussian nationalism of the present. In reality, as the author shows, Belarus is characterized by immense cultural, linguistic and ethnic diversity, which is indeed represented in some important Belarussian writing.

Blackness and Race in Soviet Cinema

Irina Novikova

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book argues that although Soviet ideology did not accept the principle of biologically based racial inferiority, nevertheless Soviet films that addressed issues of "race" still exposed their authors' views. Moreover, the book contends that these views made a significant contribution to popular perceptions and to the gradual rise of "white supremacy" thinking in the late Soviet period, with such thinking being now very widely held in post-Soviet, contemporary Russia. The book discusses a wide range of films, explores in detail the Soviet social construction of race, gender and identity and contrasts this with the development of racial thinking in the Western world.

Corruption and the Russian Economy

How Administrative Corruption Undermines Entrepreneurship and Economic Opportunities

Yulia Krylova

This book examines why the number of entrepreneurs is declining so rapidly in Putin's Russia, how many economic opportunities are being irrevocably lost, and why entrepreneurship has become one of the most dangerous occupations in Russia. Based on extensive research, it reveals a corrupt system of government agencies at the regional and local levels, and the increasing involvement of public officials in unlawful seizures of businesses. One major conclusion is that the majority of informal payments by entrepreneurs to regulatory agencies are made not to achieve illegal advantages, but rather to secure the property rights that the entrepreneurs are entitled to under the law anyway.

Ethnic Politics in Post-Soviet Central Asia

Exit, Voice, and Loyalty among Uzbek Minorities

Matteo Fumagalli, Central European University, Hungary

Series: Routledge Advances in Central Asian Studies

The book explores how, and to what extent, Central Asia's ethnic minorities have adjusted to being "at home abroad" nearly three decades after the collapse of the Soviet Union. It finds that minority groups have alternated between 'exit' (from the political system), 'loyalty' (participation in it and support for the leadership), and 'voice' (contentious politics). In this book, the case of Uzbek minorities living outside of Uzbekistan serves as a vantage point to reflect on questions of cultural and political loyalties, contentious politics, and the relationship between identity and political action. Uzbeks represent the largest non-Russian minority group in Central Asia.

Gazprom and the Russian State

The Political Economy of Russian Gas

Jack Sharples

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

Gazprom, one of Europe's most important energy companies, and the sole exporter of Russian gas to Europe, is often viewed simply as an agent of the Russian state. This book presents a thorough examination of the Russian gas sector, Gazprom's place within it and the related international situation. The author concludes that the picture is complex; that Gazprom is both a commercially-oriented actor that lobbies strongly for its own interests and is at the same time subject to varying degrees of influence from the Russian government, the degree of influence depending on the policy area.

Identity, History and Trans-Nationality in Central Asia

Mountain Communities of Pamir

Edited by Carole Faucher, Nazarbayev University, Kazakhstan and Dagikhudo Dagiev, Institute of Ismaili Studies, UK

Series: Central Asian Studies

This book analyses the formation and expression of identity among Ismaili communities of the Pamir mountain range and addresses central elements of the cultural, religious and historical processes through which this identity has emerged. It presents a variety of intertwined lines of argument pertaining to Pamiri identity and identification processes. Structured in three parts, the book addresses themes relevant to geography and the recent history of Pamiri communities, which span the territories of four current nation-states: Tajikistan, Afghanistan, China and Pakistan.

Ideology and Social Protests in Eastern Europe

Beyond the Transition's Liberal Consensus

Veronika Stoyanova

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book demonstrates how the recent political mobilizations in Eastern Europe have been underpinned by a class struggle between a more conservative and a more radical line of contention. The latter line, the book argues, is designed by and for subaltern groups whose anti-systemic programme calls for not just the eradication of corruption, but for more participatory forms of democracy, social justice, and freedom from want. The former, on the other hand, is designed by powerful groups of intellectuals, for the middle classes whom the intellectuals see as the historical strata capable of advancing the 'catch-up' projects of modernization and Europeanization which they zealously champion.

Inside the East European Planned Economy

State Planning, Factory and Manager

Voicu Ion Sucala

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book demonstrates in detail how economic practice in the communist countries of Eastern Europe was shaped by the interplay among planners, managers and Party apparatchiks. Based on extensive original research, including interviews with former employees of business enterprises, the book argues that shortages, chronic over-capacities and erroneous planning decisions were present from the very beginning, and were the natural outcome of the attempt to adapt the basic laws of economics to ideology. The book includes very detailed examples of how the planned economy actually worked at the level of the factory, at the point where plans and managers interacted with workers and production.

Kazakhstan's Foreign Policy

Regime neo-Eurasianism in the Nazarbaev era

Luca Anceschi, La Trobe University, Australia

Series: Central Asia Research Forum

For much of the post-Soviet era, Kazakhstan's international relations developed against a specific backdrop: the Eurasian continent, a (vaguely defined) politico-cultural space with the modern Kazakhstani state at its centre. This book looks at the central role occupied by 'regime neo-Eurasianism' in the foreign policy of post-Soviet Kazakhstan. With case studies on identity and power, this book offers a ground-breaking analysis of Kazakhstani foreign policy, and is of interest to students and scholars of Central Asian Politics, International Relations and Security Studies.

Law and Power in Russia

Håvard Bækken

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book explores the issue of selective law enforcement, arguing that the manipulation of the legal system and the exploitation of its formalism and instrumentalism is a distinctive feature of Russia's semi-authoritarian regime and of contemporary Russian legal culture. Based on extensive research including interview research with the victims of selective law enforcement, the book analyses how selective law enforcement works in Russia, discusses the link between law and power, and relates the Russian situation to examples from elsewhere and to general legal theories and ideas about public morality.

Legal Pluralism in Central Asia

Local Jurisdiction and Customary Practices

Mahabat Sadyrbek

Series: Central Asian Studies

The process of "modernization" in Central Asia tends to be viewed as a process of moving away from "outdated approaches", with a focus on what needs to be done to "modernize", and with traditional approaches not taken very seriously. This book, on the contrary, based on extensive original research in Kyrgyzstan, examines customary legal practices and relates them to wider societal developments in Central Asia and further afield. It examines how a range of problems are dealt with and redress provided. Overall, the book demonstrates that there is a spectrum of approaches, which can be labelled "legal pluralism"; and that traditional approaches are highly effective and by no means redundant.

Memory, Forgetting and the Legacy of Post-1945 Displacement in Russia and Eastern Europe

Uilleam Blacker, University of Oxford, UK

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

After the Second World War, millions of people across Eastern Europe, displaced as a result of wartime destruction, deportations and redrawing of state boundaries, found themselves living in cities filled with the traces of the foreign cultures of the former inhabitants. In the immediate post-war period these traces were not acknowledged but in time the former "other pasts" have been embraced and taken on board as part of local cultural memory. This book explores this interesting and increasingly important phenomenon, examining official ideologies, popular memory, literature, film, memorialisation and tourism to show how other pasts are incorporated into local cultural memory.

Nation-Building and Personality Cult in Turkmenistan

The Türkmenbaşy Phenomenon

Fabio De Leonardis, Academy Union Education, Shenzhen, People's Republic of China

Series: Routledge Advances in Central Asian Studies

This book offers an analysis of why this personality cult developed in Turkmenistan in a way that has not been seen in other newly-developed Central Asian countries. In assessing the Türkmenbaşy phenomenon this book explains the causes and origins of the personality cult by drawing a comparison with Qadhafi's Libya. The author understands the Niyazov cult not as a discrete phenomenon but as a system deriving from specific historical functions and functioning in a determined social and historical context. Using accounts of the Türkmenbaşy and Qadhafi cults and the speeches and books written by these personalities this book focuses on the institutional side of the personality cult.

Politicising the Communist Past

The Politics of Truth Revelation in Post-Communist Poland

Aleks Szczerbiak, University of Sussex, UK

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

Poland is a particularly interesting case of truth revelation and transitional justice in a post-communist country. Poland has radically changed its approach to its communist past, and this has had a profound effect on its politics. This book examines the detail of this changing approach, moving from "communist-forgiving" in the early 1990s through to vetting and opening up of the communist security service files in the mid-2000s. It explains why disagreements about transitional justice became so prominent and sets the Polish approach in the wider context of transitional justice and truth revelation, drawing out lessons for newly emerging democracies, both in Eastern Europe and beyond.

Post-Soviet Armenia

The New National Elite and the New National Narrative

Irina Ghaplanyan

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

Following the collapse of the Soviet Union, Armenia has struggled to establish itself, with a faltering economy, emigration of the intelligentsia and the weakening of civil society. This book explores how a new national elite has emerged and how it has constructed a new national narrative to suit Armenia's new circumstances. The book examines the importance of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict with Azerbaijan, considers the impact of relations with Turkey and other neighbouring states including Russia, and discusses the poorly-developed role of the very large Armenian diaspora. Overall, the book provides a key overview to understanding the forces shaping all aspects of present-day Armenia.

Religion and Politics in the Orthodox World

The Ecumenical Patriarchate in the Modern World

Paschalis Kitromilides

Series: Routledge Religion, Society and Government in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet States

This book explores how the Ecumenical Patriarchate, the centre of authority in the Orthodox Church, based in Istanbul, coped with political developments from Ottoman times onwards. The book outlines how under the Ottomans, despite difficult circumstances, the Patriarchate managed to uphold the unity of the Orthodox Church, how it struggled to do this during the subsequent age of nationalism when churches within new nation states unilaterally claimed their autonomy, and how the church coped in the twentieth century with the rise of nationalist Turkey and other problems. The book concludes by assessing the position of the Patriarchate towards the current political situation in the region.

Remembering the Soviet Past in Putin's Russia

Sergey A. Toymentsev

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

Many scholars argue that a key feature of Putin's Russia is the re-legitimization of the Soviet past, especially the glorification of successes, and that one consequence of this is the prevention of full democratization. This book, on the contrary, argues that the memorialization of the Soviet past is much more complex, with traumatic facts such as the gulag not being suppressed, with the result that the past is both condemned and glorified at the same time. The book considers a range of media, including history textbooks, films, television programmes and novels, and concludes that the contradictory attitude to the Soviet past is entirely in step with the hybrid nature of the current regime.

Rethinking the Russian Revolution as Historical Divide

Edited by Matthias Neumann and Andy Willimott

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

The Russian Revolution of 1917 has often been presented as a complete break with the past, with everything which had gone before swept away, and all aspects of politics, economy and society reformed and made new. Recently, however, historians have increasingly come to question this view, discovering that Tsarist Russia was much more entangled in the processes of modernisation, and that the new regime contained much more continuity than has previously been acknowledged. This book presents new research findings on a range of different aspects of Russian society, both showing how there was much change before 1917, and much continuity afterwards.

Russia - Art Resistance and the Conservative-Authoritarian Zeitgeist

Edited by Lena Jonson and Andrei Erofeev

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book explores how artistic strategies of resistance have survived under the conservative-authoritarian regime which has been in place in Russia since 2012. It discusses the conditions under which artists work as aesthetics change and the state attempts to define what constitutes good taste. It examines the approaches artists are adopting to resist state oppression and to question the present system and attitudes to art. The book addresses a wide range of issues related to these themes, considers the work of individual artists and includes some discussion of contemporary theatre as well as the visual arts.

Routledge Handbook of Russian Foreign Policy

Edited by Andrei P. Tsygankov

Providing a comprehensive overview of Russia's foreign policy directions, this handbook brings together an international team of scholars to develop a complex treatment of Russia's foreign policy. The chapters draw from numerous theoretical traditions by incorporating ideas of domestic institutions, considerations of national security and international recognition as sources of the nation's foreign policy. Covering critically important subjects such as Russia's military interventions in Ukraine and Syria, the Routledge Handbook of Russian Foreign Policy is an invaluable resource to students and scholars of Russian Politics and International Relations.

Ruptures and Continuities in Soviet/Russian Cinema

Styles, characters and genres before and after the collapse of the USSR

Edited by Birgit Beumers and Eugenie Zvonkine

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book, based on extensive original research, examines how far the collapse of the Soviet Union represented a threshold that initiated change or whether there are continuities which gradually reshaped cinema in the new Russia. The book considers a wide range of films and film-makers and explores their attitudes to genre, character and aesthetic style. The individual chapters demonstrate that, whereas genres shifted and characters developed, stylistic choices remained largely unaffected.

Russia, the West and Arctic Security

Aurel Braun, University of Toronto, Canada and Stephen Black

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

Russia has recently undertaken military exercises in the Arctic, demonstrating that it values its strategic position in this region, which may be an important future source of oil and gas. Given Russia's recent actions in Ukraine the question arises as to how the West should respond, or prepare itself to respond, to any similar Russian actions in the Arctic. This book examines Russia's strategic interests in the Arctic, discusses why Russia is compelled to assert itself in the region, considers the international legal position and explores the different possible Western responses, debating whether a robust or a more conciliatory response from the West is likely to be more effective.

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book considers a very wide range of cultural forms in order to explore questions related to the changing nature of Russian culture. It examines the media, popular culture and the literary canon, assesses changes in the cultural sector and its relationship to government, and discusses throughout key issues including Russia's present view of itself, Russia's place in worldwide globalizing culture, and the degree to which Russia is rewriting the narrative in order to establish a better view of itself in the world. Overall, the book provides a conceptual framework for analyzing culture in the modern globalizing world.

Russia's Economy in an Epoch of Turbulence

Crises and Lessons

Vladimir Mau

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

Over the course of the last thirty years post-communist Russia has either been struggling with crises, discussing the lessons learned from past crises, or attempting to trace the contours of future crises. Based on the author's own experiences and his research over this long period, this book traces the logic of the development of the crises and the anti-crisis policies, and demonstrates how perceptions of the priorities for economic policy, and the problems of economic growth and the formation of a new model and its alternatives were formed and how they changed. This is an important book on an economic subject of crucial global significance by a leading participant.

Russia's Far North

The Contested Energy Frontier

Edited by Veli-Pekka Tynkkynen, Shinichiro Tabata, Hokkaido University, Japan, Daria Gritsenko and Masanori Goto

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

The Russian Far North is immensely rich in resources, both energy and other resources, and is also one of the least developed regions of Russia. This book presents a comprehensive overview of the region. It examines resource issues and the related environmental problems, considers the Arctic and the problems of sea routes, maritime boundaries and military build-up, assesses economic development, and considers the ethnic peoples of the region and also cultural and artistic subjects. Overall, the book provides a rich appraisal of how the region is likely to develop in future.

Russia's Regional Identities

The Power of the Provinces

Edited by Edith W. Clowes, Gisela Erbslöh and Ani Kokobobo

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

Contemporary Russia is often viewed as a centralised regime based in Moscow, with dependent provinces, made subservient by Putin's policies limiting regional autonomy. This book, however, demonstrates that beyond this largely political view, by looking at Russia's regions more in cultural and social terms, a quite different picture emerges, of a Russia rich in variety, with different regional identities, cultures, traditions and memories.

The book explores how identities are formed and rethought in contemporary Russia, and outlines the nature of particular regional identities, from Siberia and the Urals to southern Russia, from the Russian heartland to the non-Russian republics.

Security, Society and the State in the Caucasus

Edited by Kevork Oskanian and Derek Averre

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

The Caucasus, including Russia's North Caucasus, continues to be an area of potential instability and conflict. This book, based on extensive original research, explores in detail at both the local and regional level how state and society interact to encourage security and democracy in the area. Unlike other books on the subject which tend to examine the issues from a Western political science perspective, this book includes views from sociology, geography and anthropology as well as politics and contains much work from scholars who have visited and researched in the region extensively.

Social Rights in Russia

From Imperfect Past to Uncertain Future

Eleanor Bindman, The University of Manchester, UK

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

Russia's human rights record, especially violations of rights to life, liberty and freedom of expression, has been the subject of much international concern. Social, or welfare, rights, on the other hand, including rights to housing, health and social security access, have received much less attention. This book explores Russia's changing position towards social rights, discussing how they are defined and why they are contested. The book concludes by assessing how social rights are likely to develop in Russia in a world increasingly concerned with austerity and the transformation of citizens into "market citizens", where attitudes towards social rights are not that favourable.

The City in Russian Culture

Edited by Pavel Lyssakov and Stephen M Norris

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

Cities are constructed and organized by people, and in turn become an important factor in the organization of human life, sites of both social encounter and social division, and providing for their inhabitants "a sense of place". This book explores the nature of Russian cities, outlining the role played by various Russian cities over time. It focuses on a range of cities including provincial cities, considering both physical, iconic created cities, such as Novorossisk, built as a monument to the Great Patriotic War, and also cities as represented in films, fiction and other writing. Overall the book provides a rich picture of the huge variety of Russian cities.

The Russian Economic Grip on Central and Eastern Europe

Edited by Ognian Shentov

Series: Routledge Contemporary Russia and Eastern Europe Series

This book explores the extent to which Russia continues to exert strong influence through economic means in the countries of Central and Eastern Europe. It examines Russia's corporate presence, direct investment, trade relationships and private ownership and investments, discusses the Russian role in particular sectors and outlines how much of Russia's economic involvement has the potential for exerting political and social leverage. It reveals Russia's methods for gaining economic power, including the exploitation of corporate governance loopholes, relates Russia's economic power to its wider strategic goals and concludes that Russia's economic grip is increasing.

The Russian State and Russian Energy Companies

Ingerid M Opdahl

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book explores the relationship between the Russian state and the major Russian energy companies. The book argues that the interaction between energy companies and the state shaped Russia's institutional development in the post-Soviet period, and also the development of Russia's foreign policy and energy operations. Outlining the extent of companies' access to top state officials and the political elite, and their influence on policymaking, the book concludes that institutions in the Russian energy sector have been central to regime stability, and that as the institutional framework of the Russian state developed, the energy companies became more available as foreign policy tools.

The Silk Road and the Political Economy of the Mongol Empire

Prajakti Kalra

Series: Routledge Studies on the Chinese Economy

The growing importance of Central and Inner Asia and the Silk Road is much discussed at present. This book compares the nature of present day networks in these regions with the patterns of similar connections which existed at the time of the Mongol Empire in the thirteenth century and its successor states. It considers settlement patterns, technology and technology transfer, trade, political arrangements, the role of religion and the impact of the powerful states which border the region. Overall, the book demonstrates that the Mongol Empire anticipated many of the networks and connections which exist in the region at present.

The South Caucasus – Security, Energy and Europeanization

Edited by Meliha B. Altunışık, Middle East Technical University at Ankara, Turkey and Oktaf F. Tanrisever, Middle East Technical University at Ankara, Turkey

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

This book explores developments in the countries of the South Caucasus – Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia – since the EU included the region in the European Neighbourhood Policy in 2003. It considers issues related to energy, ethnic conflict, steps towards regional integration, and security – including the involvement of Russia, Iran, Turkey and the United States. It assesses the key importance of energy, argues that prospects for regional integration are uncertain, and contends that while the approach of Europe and the United States has been confused and weak, without great hope of EU or NATO membership, Russia's interest and involvement in the region is strong, and growing.

Understanding Central Europe

Edited by Marcin Moskalewicz and Wojciech Przybylski

Series: BASEES/Routledge Series on Russian and East European Studies

"Central Europe" is a vague and ambiguous term, more to do with outlook and a state of mind than with a firmly defined geographical region. This book, with contributions from a large number of scholars from the region, explores the concept of "Central Europe" and the meaning of the term. It considers a wide range of issues including politics, nationalism, democracy, and the impact of culture, art and history. Overall, the book casts a great deal of light on the complex nature of "Central Europe".

Understanding Energy Security in Central and Eastern Europe

Russia, Transition and National Interest

Edited by Wojciech Ostrowski and Eamonn Butler

Violence and Resistance in Uzbekistan

Series: Central Asian Studies

This book examines the origins of the current waves of protest in Uzbekistan. The author analyses how these have changed over the years and provides an outlook into the country's future. Arguing that the 'Andijan events' were not an isolated episode of resistance and/or repression in post-Soviet Uzbekistan, the author shows that they are simply the latest episode in the deterioration of state-society relations in Uzbekistan.

Women's Experiences of Repression in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe

Kelly Hignett, Melanie Ilic, Dalia Leinarte and Corina Snitar

Series: Routledge Studies in the History of Russia and Eastern Europe

Based on extensive original research, including studies of autobiographies and biographies, reminiscences and memoirs, archived oral history data and interviews conducted by the authors, this book provides a rich picture of how women experienced repression in the former Soviet bloc. Although focusing on key years when repression was at its height – 1937 for the Soviet Union, 1941 for Lithuania and Poland, 1948 for Czechoslovakia and 1956 for Romania – the book ranges more widely. It demonstrates that although far fewer women than men were the direct victims of repression, women experienced severe repression in many ways, including exile and deportation.
